MOTHERS' WORK

Conducted by the Plainfield Mothers' Association. Every Thursday

Contributing Staff.
Mrs. Joseph Smith and Mrs. J. L. Evans.

The Daily Press for Thursdays containing the column on Mother's Work will be sent by mail for one dollar a year, in advance.

The Sacred Shrine.

Rev. S. G. Pitt.

"But nowhere purer worship greet
The loving heart of God on high,
Than where the childish prayer ascends
Beside God's altar—mother's knee—
A living altar, glowing with
The holiest fire—true mother-love.
Most sacred shrine!

Domestic Science.

The Duchess of Marlborough once delivered an address to a class of young mothers in London in which she said she believed a well cooked meal is a more effective means of stopping the drink habit than any amount of legislation, and expressed a hope for more schools for mothers for the purpose of supplementing the primary domestic teaching of girls in elementary schools.

Bulgaria.

The delegate to the International Congress of Mothers from Bulgaria sends back to the president of the Congress a report of how the people there are receiving the work of the Congress. The government has given her a free pass on railroads to enable her to carry the work to the whole people. The largest halls in the cities are opened to accommodate the crowds who come to hear what is being accomplished in the United States for child-welfare. Mother's and Father's Associations are being formed and our pamphlets are being translated into their language for distribution.

Free Medical Treatment.

"In accordance with a law now in effect in Iowa, children under the age of 16 years, who are suffering from some curable malady or deformity, upon the order of a district court judge, may be given free medical and surgical treatment as well as hospital care at the medical college of the state university. The statute prohibits that any child thus cared for, however, be made an object of experimentation. This service is extended only to those whose parents are financially unable to bear the expense of having treatment rendered in the usual way. If the court so dictates, a child may be accompanied to the university by a parent or appointed companion with all expenses paid by the commonwealth. Under the terms of the law it is illegal to treat any ailment other than is specifically prescribed by the judge, who bases his instructions upon a written report presented by an examining physician under his direction.

Utah.

When Utah became a state it was promised that plural marriage should cease within its borders. It has been proven that the promise has not been kept and the recent decision of a court on the paternity and inheritance of a certain boy puts the stain of illegitimacy on every child born outside of monogamous marriage since the manifesto. The children are the innocent sufferers at the hands of the parents.

The National Reform League will present a bill to the next Congress of the United States, providing for a constitutional amendment giving power to the government to deal with polygamy and so prevent further defiance of this civil and divine law and the continuance of the wrong to innocent children.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

In these times of war, the natural demand in the recreation field is for something amusing. "It Pays to Advertise," which Cohan and Harris will present at the Plainfield Theatre on Monday evening, Sept. 27, fully meets this demand, for it is exceedingly funny. While it is a business play and therefore appeals strongly to the men, the plot is also romantic enough to win the enthusiasm of the feminine portion of the audience. The farce is by Roi Cooper Megrue and Walter Hackett, and the authors have certainly brought forth one of the most laughable plays ever presented. Advertising is the means used to foist a competing soap upon the market to the detriment of the father's business who, being a conservative, does not believe in advertising. This forms the skeleton of the play, but it is quite impossible to give any synopsis that will adequately express the humor of the situations during the time the young man and his sweetheart are working out the scheme for getting the better of the old man and bringing about the conversion. He finally learns that it pays to advertise and incidentally is obliged to buy out the new company at a princely figure. It is one of those plays that cannot be described, but must be seen to be appreciated.

AN APOLOGY IS DUE.

For years American visitors to Havana have thrown up their hands in horror over a custom prevalent there which gives to the Cuban National cemetery its bone house. In this house is piled the skeletons of more than ten thousand men, women and children. They were originally buried in cemetery lots. No matter how poor a Cuban may be, when he dies he is given a lot in the national cemetery at a low price and his people given ten years in which to pay for it. If the full amount is not paid at the end of ten years his bones are exhumed and thrown into the bone house, where they may be seen by the public. This, to American tourists who have seen the bone house, appears to be an inhuman and barbaric custom.

The other day a penniless woman died in Pittsburg. Her children were dependent upon her for support in life, and because of a weakened body caused from tuberculosis, which finally brought her death, she was not able to pay for the necessities of life.

After her death a creditor forced her children to take the body from their home and sell it to a dissecting class that he might realize a few dollars on the debt that was due him. This act was made public, and yet there was nothing done by officials.

It looks like some thousands of American tourists owe an apology to their Cuban neighbors.

LAWYERS ARE PLENTIFUL.

The Trenton Times calls attention to the fact that lawyers are plentiful in this State. One hundred and seventy-five students, including twelve young women, have registered in the New Jersey law school for the year 1915-16, it says, and when to these are added those registered at Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Pennsylvania and other law schools that are popular with Jerseymen, and the many young men who study under the tutelage of members of the bar, it is apparent that there is little danger of scarcity of lawyers. The repeal of the Dunn act fifteen years ago has not lessened the yearly output of Blackstone's disciples, and the writer believes that other steps will be necessary to prevent an overcrowding of the profession.

It is true that an overcrowding of the legal profession leads to the developing of criminal practice and causes the use of illegal and shady methods of securing law suits on the part of a few of its members, but to the lawyers is due the statement that there is a minimum amount of crime in their profession. This is principally because of their own efforts and they may be trusted to care for the threatened over supply of graduates in their own way. In passing it should not be out of order to express wonder that competition among the legal fraternity does not reduce the high price of suing or being sued.

There is only one danger for the Republican assembly ticket this year in Union county. That is that it looks like such a walk over that people have lost all interest in the campaign, and will not take the trouble to get out and vote. There is no contest of any importance in the primary, and hence the vote at that time will undoubtedly be light. On the other hand, interest in the woman suffrage question will probably get out a great many voters for that referendum on October 19, and all who vote then will be registered for the general election. Otherwise it would be a difficult task to get anywhere near the normal registration this year. Here in Plainfield the general satisfaction with the Republican administration of affairs has left almost the entire field open to them, except for one aggressive Democratic candidate for councilman at large. It certainly is an off year.

While no one is so rash as to definitely predict the success of suffrage, there is no disputing the fact that it has gained great strength in New Jersey in the last few weeks, and the majority of 50,000 which some antis said would be rolled up against the cause is out of the question. Many careful observers, who have taken no part in the campaign on either side, are now declaring that they will not be surprised if the suffragists win.

The Civil Service Reform Association thinks Plainfield should vote on the question of placing our municipal employes under the control of the State commission. The handling of all problems of employment of city employes is so akin to civil service that there is no necessity for a change here, much as we believe in the system for cities that are governed entirely by politics.

It is certainly to be hoped that if the Pillar of Fire do not move when next ordered to do so by the police, they will be given the limit in the local police court. Plainfield does not want their kind within its borders.

New York is busily conducting an investigation to determine responsibility for the subway explosion. Is it possible that the Manhattan newspapers are going to overlook such an opportunity? Dumba is still in this country.

Doc Dumba demands safe conduct to his country. That is just what President Wilson is determined to secure for every non-combatant who has business on the other side of the ocean.

Now that Anthony Comstock is dead New York and the nation will pay him honor instead of ridicule that was his when he was among us. Such is the reward of virtue.

Dr. Dumba pays a tribute to President Wilson when he calls him "self-willed." He only means that Wilson is strong in enforcing the will of the American people.

Those furs around the women's necks, which looked so silly last week, somehow or other make us envy the other sex today.

From recent news stories it would appear that a fire engine is not a bargain when it is Nott made to fight fire.

New York will probably put its unemployed to work as subway inspectors now.

And to think that a week ago we were getting the warmest September weather on record!

An Awful Night

I lay awake, too cold to sleep, last night;
But yet too near asleep to rise and get
The extra blanket—isn't that a fright?
I'm yawning 'round and growling at it, yet.

To lie one mass of goose-flesh all the time
And dream half-waking dreams of miseree—
Such feelings drive weak-minded men to crime.
Who knows just what effect they'll have on me?

Horses

Horses are divided into sixteen general and well-known classes:

Sea, race, dark, draft, coach, clothes, saw, shingle, willing, dope, saddle, gift, red, dray, charley and hobby.

The first is a fish, and so is the thirteenth.

The second is a fraud, and a means of getting rid of the money you borrowed without permission from the boss' till—till you could pay it back.

The third is a political animal just as liable to fool you as not, and, like the race-horse, meant for that purpose.

The fourth and fifth are good, honest animals, for a change.

The sixth, seventh and eighth are wooden arrangements of the kind idle jesters used to refer to in telling made-up tales of Abe Lincoln's trading escapades.

The ninth is the kind worked to death by thoughtless pepple, as quoted in proverbs by those persons who can't think for themselves.

The tenth is the kind that resembles a boozing employee—fit for use only once in a while under specified circumstances, but utterly undependable.

The eleventh is mighty scarce; the twelfth the kind into whose mouth one mustn't look but always does anyway.

The fourteenth is a symbol of overworkedness but isn't always so treated, by any means.

The fifteenth is a baseball pitcher's arm-malady, and the sixteenth belongs to a child, though all the people playing horse and riding hobbies aren't young enough to attend district school.

Consistency

The way I loved this Fall, last Spring,
Was wonderfully touching, truly!
Last month I loved December so,
It stirred my feelings most unduly.
Just now I'm crazy about Spring—
It surely is a peachy season!
And I'll love August most to death
When in the winter-time I'm freezin'!

Getting All Mixed Up

It was at a Barred Plymouth Rock chicken regatta.

A man came in, carrying a crate of snowy chickens.

"What do you mean by bringing those in?" asked a peevish attendant. "This is a show for barred chickens only."

"Well, I asked the boss if white chickens were barred, and he told me they were."

And that's how it started.

As It Looks

"What have you now to rejoice over, Optimist?"

"Well, to judge by the way the whole world, except America, is behaving, there is evidently a bumper nut-crop this year."

"Paw, what kind o' sewing machine did Adam and Eve use?"

"Probably a drop-leaf, my son."

Health Talks

The Frontal Sinus

NEURALGIA, or "neurology," as many sufferers call it, is not always what the victim dopes it out to be. One of the conditions so commonly mistaken for neuralgia that it deserves special consideration is inflammation of the frontal sinus. This is no new disease; just a little new light on a very old and vulgar ailment.

In the frontal bone, just over the eye socket, is an air space or sinus on either side, communicating by a narrow channel with the nasal passage on that side. This space is lined with mucous membrane which is a continuation of that lining the nasal cavity. Hence acute and chronic inflammations of the nasal cavity—coryza or catarrh—may readily extend into the frontal sinus and give a lot of trouble.

Typical of acute sinusitis is the pain over the eye on the affected side, coming on, say, at about nine or ten every morning, increasing at eleven, worse still at noon, boring your head off at one o'clock, forcing you to give up and go home at two, letting up a little at three, hesitating at four, all gone and fine as a fiddle again at five in the afternoon. Same programme next day, and the next, and the next—till the inflammation subsides or the patient succumbs to the blandishments of a nose and throat engineer, who bores into the sinus one way or another and relieves the tension.

If it is only a simple, catarrhal sinusitis it may subside and never come again. But often enough it will return the next time you catch coryza—pretty nearly said catch "cold" that time, didn't we? A chronic sinusitis is less exciting, but more persistent and baffling. In a few cases the inflammation is purulent, and then the patient is in a serious condition until operated on, either through the nose or through the brow from the outside.

The treatment for acute sinusitis is the treatment for acute coryza, plus an effort on the part of physician or specialist to shrink or contract the swollen mucous membrane which occludes the drainage canal into the nose. Frequently the local application of suitable agents by the doctor will abort an attack instanter—and it is certainly pleasant to have such a pain routed so easily, instead of filling up on dangerous coal-tar derivatives for neuralgia or narcotic dopes guaranteed to cure a cold in one day.

Any one with an attack of frontal sinusitis not mistaken for neuralgia or eyestrain or anything like that should take consolation in the thought that the original coryza that thickened the membrane that obstructed the tube that blocked the sinus was presented as a keepsake by some loving friend whose affection was contagious if not explosive.

Vest Pocket Essays

THE DONKEY

THE donkey is a small, furry parody on a horse.

He is strong and willing, but not handsome. Even after a donkey has been gone over carefully with a safety razor and trimmed in the latest style he is not much to look at. He is taken less seriously than almost any other beast. Men who have earned $3,000 a year all their lives and have poked the said $3,000 down their throats with great industry until they are purple in the neck and as bulbous at the waist as a bulbous pear, laugh gaily when they see a donkey and make scathing comments on his looks.

The donkey does not resent this. He does not resent anything. He is the worst abused beast of burden in the world. In lands where the donkey is the principal means of transportation, his owner piles goods on him until his legs begin to bend and then encourages him to climb mountains by beating him with a fence rail.

This is because of his theory of non-resistance. The donkey never objects. He has been following a peace policy by himself for over 6,000 years. This is why a donker driver does not hesitate to grab his donkey by the tail and get a free ride up a hill so steep that the sidewalks have rungs on them. He knows the salient difference between a donkey and a mule. The mule does not cruise around the country biting unoffending citizens, but nobody pulls his tail or steps on his corns.

Sometimes in these trying days when we are pestered with submarines abroad and disarmament leagues at home it almost seems as if the donkey should be made the national bird of America.

The donkey is not only a much abused beast, but he has the reputation of being the biggest fool in the animal kingdom. This is not because of what he does, but what he says. The donkey doesn't know enough to keep his mouth shut.

Men as bulbous at the waist as a pear, laugh gaily when they see a donkey

When he brays he sounds like all the combined ignorances of the world holding a mass meeting.

In this fault the donkey resembles many men who could go through the world covering their defects with a plug hat and plenty of whiskers if they did not insist on talking at exposed points in the game.

Nothing is more pathetic than to behold a man acting as his own press agent with nothing but ignorance to advertise.

Views Of The Press

Two Kinds Of Novels

DID you ever hear the author of a good book of pure fiction express regret that it was not "a novel with a purpose"? Regrets of that kind are very common—and very foolish. In the first place, the term, "a novel with a purpose," does not mean anything. Every novel that is worth the white paper on which it is printed has for its purpose the reflection of some worthy phase of life, the crystallization of some human impulse, the stirring of some basic quality in the hearts of men and women. But that is not what the twaddling, fawning critics mean when they write of "a novel with a purpose." When they mean anything—which mostly they don't—they use the term to designate a book that is some sort of special pleader.

And a novel that is essentially a special pleader can never be really great, any more than can a man who is essentially a special pleader. It may create a furore. The gallery gods may clap their hands sore applauding it. But it never lives its way into the enduring heart of a people.

Among all the novels written in English, what one of them that was "a novel with a purpose"—as that term is commonly used now—but has been eaten by the little flat gray moths that prey upon unused books? The Dickens books, you say? Yes, and because the "purpose" in the ones of them that are read is a very subordinate sort of thing. Take "Nicholas Nickleby." It is supposed to have reformed the school system of a large part of England. But nobody reads it for that. The downfall of Squeers isn't the soul of it. "Nicholas Nickleby" is immortal because, in it, the Cherribyl brothers live and move and love. And nobody ever mentions any books but the Dickens books in this connection. All the other novels that endure have no more "purpose" than, to use the phrase of a wag, a snake has hips.

"Lorna Doone," the greatest work of fiction ever written in the English language—just a plain story of plain people as they lived and labored and did mischief and made love. "The White Company," greatest novel of this generation—just a story of how Englishmen lived and how they fought. "Treasure Island," the biggest little story ever written in the world—just a straightforward tale of crime and courage.

America has produced more "novels with a purpose" than any other land under the sun and, five years after they came out, nobody would wad a shotgun with them. American stories that are of any account have no "purpose." "Rip Van Winkle" will never sleep again. You can safely bet your breeches on "The Luck of Roaring Camp." You couldn't lose "Free Joe" in a thousand years. "Tom Sawyer" is as immortal as Cæsar.

Anything that a "novel with a purpose" can reach is a mere incident in the life of a people. The still waters are not for them. They ride a tempest, and never make their port.

"Swing round your aching searchlight—'twill find no haven's peace;
Aye, blow your shrieking siren to the deaf, grey-bearded seas!
Boom out the dripping oil bags to skin the deep's unrest—
And you're not one knot the nearer to the Islands of the Blest."

Estate: There Are No Children

Q. In case there are no children, how should a deed be made to the husband and wife, in the State of California, so that when one dies the other will inherit the property without a will, or without further trouble?

A. The provision of the California law, with reference to the descent of property where there is no will and where the husband and wife have no children, reads as follows: "If the decedent leaves no issue, the estate goes one-half to the surviving husband or wife and the other one-half to decedent's father and mother in equal shares, and if either is dead the whole of said half goes to the other. If there is no father or mother, then one-half goes in equal shares to the brothers and sisters of decedent and to the children or grandchildren of any deceased brother or sister by right of representation. If decedent leaves no issue, or husband or wife, the estate must go to his father and mother in equal shares, or if either is dead, then to the other." It would be advisable for you to consult your lawyer and have him prepare a will, or two wills—one for the husband and one for the wife.

Big Interest On Small Loan

Q. After paying interest on twenty-five dollars for nearly three years, can a loan company take one's furniture or compel one to pay the principal?

A. Your question is not sufficiently definite. This would depend upon whether you gave a chattel mortgage and whether the rate of interest charged is usurious.

"Nobody Home!"

Q. I have a check from a man for $100, but it came back stamped "No funds." The man who signed the check has a property which is mortgaged. Mortgages are signed by him and his wife. Now, can I sue on my check and get judgment against him, and if so how much is the cost of same in the State of Indiana?

A. You can bring a suit. It is impossible to determine in advance what the costs will be.

Eight-Hour Day For Women

Q. Under the California law, is it lawful for the proprietors of mountain resorts or hotels to work their women help nine and ten hours a day, Sundays included?

A. No. The California statutes provide: "No female shall be employed in any manufacturing, mechanical or mercantile establishment, laundry, hotel, public lodging house, apartment house, hospital, place of amusement, or restaurant, or telegraph or telephone establishment, or office, or by an express or transportation company in this state more than eight hours during any one day or more than forty-eight hours in one week. The hours of work may be so arranged as to permit the employment of females at any time so that they shall not work more than eight hours during the twenty-four hours of one day, or forty-eight hours during any one week, provided, however, that the provisions of this section in relation to hours of employment shall not apply to or affect harvesting, curing, canning or drying of any variety of perishable fruit or vegetables, or to graduate nurses in hospitals." This law has been upheld by the courts as constitutional.

To Renew Partnership

Q. I am in partnership with another man, by virtue of an agreement drawn up, in writing, between us. The partnership was to last two years. This time has nearly expired and we desire to go on with the business. Isn't there some short form we could use, by indorsing it on the contract, so as to provide that the partnership shall continue another year?

A. Yes. You could enter into a short memorandum or agreement expressing this intention.

A Governor's Power

Q. Does the pardoning power of the governor of a state extend to offenses against the United States?

A. No.

Different Building Laws

Q. Are the laws pertaining to building and loan associations uniform in the different states? A. No.

The Life Line

BY LAURA KIRKMAN

The Man With A Chip On His Shoulder

We run into him on the street. Perhaps we hold in our hand a letter that has brought us bad news. "Good morning," we murmur absently, too engrossed in our thoughts to give him the usual hearty greeting. Next day, we meet him—and he looks the other way! He has taken to himself our preoccupation of yesterday. "But he might have made allowances on one score or another," we exclaim, full of resentment against his too-hasty verdict; "he might have given us another chance!" But this easily offended man has no such charity in his make-up. He is the undeveloped man. His constant watchfulness for slights tells us that the big, gripping things of life have passed him by; we don't think much of a mosquito bite after a mad dog has bitten us. But this man nurses his mosquito bite as if it were fatal. He hasn't advanced one inch since his mother kissed his bumps to make them well.

His fists are in his eyes.

The Making Of Modesty

We are born in the world with a weakness commanding.
We rule just because we expect to. That's plain.
The autocrat dwindles as grows understanding,
For naughtiness ever is followed by pain.
Experience, trouble, are still on their shelves.
That's the reason young people are stuck on themselves.

We're stuck on ourselves and a high horse we're riding.
We think we're ace high when we're raising the deuce.
But Constable Time is in patience abiding,
When sufficiently bumped we will pry ourselves loose.
(Though tangled the lines you may soon get 'em fixed.)
But, Geraldine, don't you like metaphors mixed?

The words of fine scorn that by others are spoken
Ne'er humble the mind that's by vanity fed.
'Tis the rule you have made for yourself and then broken
That always reduces the size of your head.
And when our conceit disappears in the fuss
It isn't the world that is knocking, but us!

She Never Stopped Until She Reached the Sick Baby's Bed.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

Bibbley Wah Goes Calling on the French Baby.

"TELL us another Bibbley Wah story, daddy!" cried the kiddies.

"All right," said daddy. "Bibbley Wah's uncle had a wonderful farm, and about a mile away down a hill lived his gardener, who was a Frenchman with a huge family of children that Bibbley Wah thought the most interesting kiddies in the world. They all had very blue eyes and straight tow hair and bare feet, and they seemed never to have to be washing their hands and faces, like all Bibbley Wah's other friends."

"How many little Frenchies were there?" asked Evelyn.

"Eleven. And Bibbley Wah used to hug the baby, who looked something like a billiken, until he squealed. Once a week Bibbley Wah's mother used to let her and the boys go to play with the Frenchies. Their mother used to serve them all with delightful bread that she called 'Marie Antoinette's cake.'

"Because when the hungry mob in Paris came under the queen's window and cried they had no bread to eat Marie Antoinette said, 'Then let them eat cake!' The French mother used to give the kiddies all this bread and lemonade they could hold.

"One day the gardener told Bibbley Wah that his baby was very sick with measles. This made her very sad. She picked nice little bouquets of wild flowers, saved up three pennies and her favorite dessert, which the poor sick baby could not eat, and sent them to him by the gardener. But most of all she wanted to see the baby."

"She would catch the measles, wouldn't she?" cried Jack.

"We shall see," said daddy, "for Bibbley Wah watched her chance. The first time Bobbie and Jim went on an errand and she was left alone she ran down the hill as fast as her fat little legs could carry her. She never stopped till she reached the sick baby's bed.

"She played with the baby and gave him his milk that he would not take for his mother until a hot, cross Bobbie dashed into the room and snatched her home.

"He tugged her up the hill so fast that Bibbley Wah's little legs hardly touched the ground."

"Did her mother punish her?" asked Evelyn.

"No. But her mother explained about catching diseases and made her promise not to go calling on sick people without permission."

"Did she get the measles?" asked Jack.

"No. She was such a sturdy little kiddie that she only got a health lesson."

Household Hints

FOR A PICNIC.

Quick Lemonade—Take juice of six large, juicy lemons and grated rind of one; let stand over night. Make sirup of two pounds of sugar and a little water. When cool, add lemon juice and bottle. This should make a quart of sirup, and two tablespoons added to a glass of ice water will make a refreshing drink.

To Carry Ice—Break ice in small pieces, pack closely in a two-quart glass jar, screw cover on and wrap well with several thicknesses of paper. If properly wrapped it will keep all day.

Instead of the Usual Sandwich take small round rolls, cut piece from top of lid, pull out the crumbs and fill the cavity with chicken chopped fine, well seasoned and moistened with a little cream, or mayonnaise, if preferred.

CANNING AND PRESERVING.

Pickled Onions—Make a brine by boiling one pound salt in three quarts water. Use the small silver-skin onions; rub off the skins and throw into the brine; let them remain in brine twenty-four hours, then wipe dry and put into wide-mouthed bottles. To one quart white vinegar allow one teaspoon peppercorns, one teaspoon mustard seed and one-half teaspoon coriander seed; boil this five minutes; when cold pour over onions and cork tightly. Will be ready for use in two weeks.

Corn Salad—Fiffeen ears sweet corn, one head cabbage (medium size), three green peppers, one and one-half cups white sugar, two tablespoons salt, four ounces ground mustard, two quarts cider vinegar. Cut corn from cob; chop cabbage and peppers fine; heat vinegar; add other ingredients, except corn, which add after it is boiling hot, and cook over steam thirty minutes. It must not boil after corn is added. Put into glass jars. This is delicious with meat and will keep all winter.

THE TABLE

Chicken Croquettes—One pint cold cooked chicken, one-half pint milk, one heaping tablespoon butter, two tablespoons flour, one teaspoon onion juice, one teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon nutmeg, one-half teaspoon pepper, flour, beaten eggs, cracker crumbs, lard. Chop the meat very fine. Heat the milk in a double boiler. Cream the butter and flour and add it to the milk, then add onion juice and seasonings. Cook until you have a thick sauce. Pour this over the chopped chicken and mix thoroughly, then let it cool, and form into shapes. Flour lightly, dip shapes into the beaten eggs, roll in cracker crumbs and fry in deep fat. This will serve six persons.

Roman Pancakes—One cup whole wheat flour, one-half cup rye meal, one-half cup bran, milk as needed (about 1¼ cups), two tablespoons ground flaxseed, one teaspoon salt, two eggs, two teaspoons baking powder. Separate eggs, beat yolks, add milk, salt and all the ingredients except the baking powder. Beat and let the batter rest for an hour, then beat in the baking powder, add whites of eggs, and bake on a griddle. These cakes are mildly laxative.

Chocolate Pancakes—Mix one-half cup flour with one-fourth cup sweet grated chocolate, one-fourth teaspoon salt, then beat two eggs until foamy and stir into them one-half cup sweet cream. Now add the flour and chocolate mixture, beating well until quite smooth. Bake on a hot griddle well greased and serve with fine confectionery sugar sprinkled over the top.

Unkneaded Graham Bread—One-half compressed yeast cake, one quart tepid water, one teaspoon salt, one cup sugar, graham flour or whole wheat meal. At night make a batter of the water, yeast cake dissolved in one-fourth cup additional tepid water, the salt and about three cups graham flour. Cover closely and let rise till spongy. In the morning add the sugar and enough graham flour to make a batter so stiff that it can be lifted with the hand. Butter pound-size coffee cans thoroughly and fill half full; let rise about three-quarters full, and then bake 1¼ hours in a slow oven. Three loaves.

Cream Tea Biscuit—One cup sweet cream, two teaspoons cream of tartar, three-fourths teaspoon soda, one-half teaspoon salt, about 1½ cups bread flour. Sift soda, cream of tartar and salt with a cupful of flour. Beat into the cream enough additional flour so dough can be easily handled. Roll to half inch thickness, cut with small round cutter, and bake about twelve minutes in hot oven. This makes two dozen small biscuits.

CHAPTER X.

A Setback.

"YES, here's a statement," Peale went on to Ellery, taking his pink version of Mary's statement off its file.

"Twenty-two thousand eight hundred and eighteen dollars," Ellery read off from it, holding it in his gloved hand.

"And nine cents," added Peale.

"That sounds rather ripping," Ellery admitted. "Should I have to do any work?"

"You work? I should say not," said Peale.

"Of course," added Rodney, "before I can promise to let you in Mr. Peale would have to agree."

"Do you agree?" asked Ellery, addressing Peale for the first time.

"Oh, yes, I agree—I agree!" said Peale perhaps a shade too quickly.

"Now, what do you say, Ellery?" asked Rodney, trying not to appear too anxious.

Ellery put the silver head of his cane in his mouth and sucked at it a long time.

"I'll do it," he said at last.

"God's in his heaven. All's right with the world," chanted Peale.

"Have you the money with you?" asked Rodney, his heart beating.

"Why, no," said Ellery, opening his eyes.

"Then you'll send us a check today?" put in Peale.

But Ellery wouldn't get the money until next week, it seemed. His father hadn't promised it till next Monday. He couldn't ask him for it now, you see. Ellery was afraid he couldn't really. His father was out of town.

"But we can't agree to hold the matter open until next Monday," said Rodney firmly.

"No, not till way next Monday," Peale agreed. "Why don't you telephone him?"

Yes, that wouldn't be so distressing, Ellery thought. If he could get him it would be considerably easier to talk to him on the phone. He could always ring off then.

"Come this way, then. It'll be quieter for you if he's noisy," said Peale eagerly, leading him to a booth. "Never mind the social chatter," he added as Mary came in and Ellery stopped to talk with her. "Ellery, you don't mind my calling you Ellery, do you, Ellery? You see, Ellery has work to do," he went on for Mary's benefit.

"It's very pleasing to find you both so beastly charming to me," said Ellery.

And that was a model son, thought Peale. Thank God he was a black sheep himself. That was always the way with money; it was never in the right hands.

Meanwhile there was still another chance, for Mary informed him that the countess' boat had docked three hours ago.

"Oh, you little life saver."

"Oh, Rodney, by the way," she asked, "did you find out how Ellery's doing?"

"He's doing great," said Rodney. "Hasn't made a cent. Wanted to borrow some money from me."

"Your father would be glad to hear that," she laughed.

"Where is our wandering countess?" sang Peale just as Miss Burke came in and announced:

"The Countess de Bowreen."

"By golly, she's entering on the cue," said Peale joyfully.

"We're safe now," said Rodney.

"Oh, I do hope so," sighed Mary.

Money!

It took some maneuvering to manage the coming countess with her $10,000 and Ellery with his prospective $2,500. They needed either or both of them to cover up that $2,500 they had handed to Jones. Mary and Rodney dared not think what would happen if new capital could not be obtained in time.

Then just as the countess was about to be shown in the capable Ellery stuck his head in the door and vowed he could not manage the telephone; he never had run a switchboard; he was not good at mechanical problems. Mary was told off to ring up his father for him, and Peale called after her to hold his hand or kiss him—anything to leave the floor clear for the countess. Needless to say, the kiss was not suggested by Rodney.

Rodney ran to a window and pulled down a shade on which was blazoned:

He turned round to greet her full of hope. He was sure he could understand anything she said about money. He would leave to Ambrose the pleasant sensation of spending it on advertising.

When she finally swept in he met her with a delighted air and kissed her hand, which was the way in which he had conceived the part. He also said bon jour, twice, and pointed to the shade that bore the French advertisement. Rodney could make out also that she inquired if they had received her letter? Peale had been listening intently and couldn't keep still.

"Oh, you little life saver," he chirped.

He, too, kissed her hand, on Rodney's telling him it was French stuff. She looked like money, Ambrose thought. She must have it.

"Ask her, ask her!" he whispered to Rodney.

"Have you the money?" Rodney asked her nervously, thus enjoined.

"Eh?" said the countess.

"Come on, kid, say yes, say yes," whispered Peale, snapping his fingers.

"Vous avez l'argent?" Rodney began.

"Oui, oui, j'ai de l'argent," said the countess.

"What does she say?" asked Peale anxiously.

"She says yes," interpreted Rodney.

Peale gave a suppressed squeal of delight.

"The money with you?" Rodney asked again.

"Oui, j'ai de l'argent ici," responded the countess, opening her bag and taking out a check.

"Draft for $20,000," Rodney interpreted swiftly.

"Slip it to me, kid; slip it to me. I'm dying on my feet," cried Peale, as the Countess jabbered.

Rodney explained now that she wanted to send the draft to the bank to get it cashed; that she was not known there, and that she would give them their $15,000.

"I'll make a world's record getting it cashed," said Peale, and reached greedily for the check. The countess pulled it back, however, in surprise, and only gave it up again when Rodney explained that his manager was going over to the bank. Peale grabbed it, then paused dramatically.

"Say, wait a minute," he whispered hoarsely.

"What is it?" asked Rodney.

"Why don't we stall the countess off?" suggested Peale.

"What for?" asked Rodney.

"Why, borrow the money from her and keep the whole $20,000 for a couple of days. Get me?"

What followed this speech gave Ambrose Peale one of the biggest surprises of his life. The countess had been watching the conversation eagerly, like a bird, turning her head quickly from Peale to Rodney as they spoke and looking very innocent and chic. Upon the finale of Peale's scheme to "borrow" her money she broke out into perfectly good American.

"Why, you cheap grafter!" she cried indignantly, with a real Bowery accent.

"She spoke English!" cried Rodney, and the countess suddenly covered her mouth with her hand, realizing for the first time that she had given herself away.

"Suffering cats! She's a fake!" Rodney added.

The countess agreed, shrugging her shoulders.

"So is the draft. Gee, you were easy!"

"Well, you're frank anyhow," Rodney said to her.

"Why not? It's all cold now."

"What was the game, kid?" Peale asked her, taking a professional interest.

"I was going to trim you for the $5,000 change from that draft," said the countess.

"But why pick on us?"

"I didn't start out to. You wished it on yourselves," said the countess. "I came to trim your father. You remember I wanted to see him. But I looked so soft you thought you'd grab me off and sell me the French agency of your 13 Soap. I didn't think your father could be as big a boob as you were, so I changed my plans."

"Now I'm going to get the cops to get you!" said Peale sternly.

"I should burst into laughter!" cried the countess. "Why, you pikers, I'm on. You're busted. You haven't got any money, and you have got a phony company!"

"Now, see here," expostulated Rodney.

"Preserve it, preserve it," the countess interrupted. "Don't forget I've understood everything you two guys were talking about." To Rodney she said:

"Kiss her hand; it's French stuff."

To Peale:

"Ah, there, you little life saver."

To Rodney:

"The money with you—l'argent avec vous? Gee, your French is rotten."

To Peale, who moved away from her:

"Shall I kiss her?"

Then she added after a pause:

"Send for the cops and I'll blow the whole thing to the papers."

She rested her gloved fingers coolly on her umbrella handle and surveyed the two boys.

"Well, I guess we're quits. If you had any money I'd ask for a piece of change to keep me quiet. But as it is I can't waste my time."

"You're not French at all?" Rodney queried.

"I was educated over there. Immense, wasn't I? You never tumbled at all."

"But why the foreign stuff?" Peale inquired.

"Well, I can talk good French, but my English is punk," explained the countess.

"You won't say anything now?" Rodney pleaded.

"No, I don't hit a fellow when he's down. Anyhow, we're all in the same "Three fakes. I'll keep mum if you do."

class. Three fakes. I'll keep mum if you do."

Oh, money, money!

So much for the $10,000. The $2,500 was no nearer, as was presently to appear, when Ellery Clark stuck his head in the door, grinning, and asked to see Rodney a moment. Peale could not help noticing the change that had come over the countenance of Ellery.

"You seem very beastly pleased, Ellery," he said. "Is everything all right about father?"

"Oh, yes, so to speak, in a way," said Ellery, still grinning.

"What do you mean—so to speak, in a way?" Peale demanded, suddenly suspicious.

Oh, money, money!

And Ellery explained. The trouble was that Ellery couldn't get father on the telephone, and that did make it so much easier, Ellery thought. He did not fancy talking to father about money. That was the truth, and he couldn't get father because father was off on Long Island sound somewhere with his yacht and wouldn't be back till Monday. Apparently Ellery was relieved by this unavoidable postponement, and so he grinned and thought it was all right.

Poor Ambrose, thinking of the $2,500, thought it was all wrong.

The countess, taking in the general appearance of Ellery, thought something might be doing, for she eagerly and promptly dropped her handkerchief. Ellery pounced upon it at once, handing it to her with a flourish.

"Is there no one to take me to my taxi?" she cried next. It was a general invitation, which Ellery accepted on the spot.

"These American buildings are so big I am lost," she went on, with a more marked accent than she had used a moment ago.

"Ellery, you take the countess," suggested Rodney, willing now to get rid of them both.

"Oh, I'd love to," said Ellery. "I say charming, what?"

"Mme. la Comtesse de Beaurien—Ellery Clark," said Rodney, introducing them.

"Dee-lighted," cooed the countess.

"So am I," said Ellery, adding audibly, "Ripping little filly."

"You speak the French?" the countess purred as they went toward the door.

"No, not at all," said Ellery.

"A pitee."

"But I can speak German."

"Aber prachtvoll — ich liebe das schoene Deutsche."

"Ich auch"—

"Warum laden Sie mich nicht zum Thee ein?"

"Mit dem groessten"—

"Vergnuegen?"

"Yes," said Ellery, relieved, "that's the word—Vergnuegen."

"Au revoir, Mr. Martin," said the countess, looking back at Rodney over her shoulder. "Vous etes trop aimable. Je vous remercie beaucoup de votre politesse. Au revoir." Then in her American accent she added to Peale in an undertone, "So long, kid, call me up sometime."

And chattering a stream of German to Ellery, she went out.

In fact, it all went, the $2,500 and $10,000 together. Peale viewed the two departing figures sadly with mixed emotions. She was a ripping little filly indeed, that "countess," as that silly ass Clark had said, but the silly ass was having a ride with her now in a taxi, and the clever man, Ambrose Peale, was staying behind worrying about his advertising bills. Oh, money, money!

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Well, the outing wasn't so bad after all, was it, Nell?" asked Dick. They were having the first dinner at home.

"No, the last was all right. The mosquitoes were not so bad; it was cooler, and when we were relieved of the camp work I got a little rest. If I have to work, I want to be where I can have conveniences to work with." Nell looked around the pretty home with pardonable pride.

"I wish we could digest the real meat of this outing," Dick began apologetically.

Nell stared. "I wish you could learn to be the truly picnic sort."

"Please explain your wishes a little more fully." Nell's tone was injured.

"Oh, I suppose it's no use to begin, you wouldn't understand." Dick shoved back his chair and began lighting a cigar, while Nell cleared the table and put Hal to bed.

"He's so tired I think he'll drop right off to sleep." Nell sat down on the arm of Dick's chair. He slipped his arm around her waist and asked:

"Want me to read aloud?"

"After a while. First I want to know what you started to say at the table," she replied.

"To tell the truth, Nell, we are having too cozy an evening to spoil, and I feel it in my bones that if I opened up this subject, spoiled it would be, so let's read and be happy while the sun shines."

"You talk as if I were a very unreasonable being who must be managed as adroitly as possible." Dick blew a gusty breath through his closed lips.

"I think you will find me reasonable. Tell me what you had in your mind," persisted Nell.

"Now you're talking, girlie." He drew her to his lap. "That's just what I want, to be able to talk right out flat-footed, and not have your feelings hurt and things end in a scene every time I make a suggestion."

Nell listened like a bird, ready to take flight at the least stir.

"What I wanted to say is this: It applies more to camp than anywhere else, for more things are likely to go wrong there, but it is a lesson we both need to learn, and it is not to let trifles upset us." He stopped as if to see how she took the opening shot.

"For example?" she prompted, looking steadily at him.

"Well, take the mosquitoes, the flies, the rain, the heat, the smoke; in fact, any of the trifles that, added together, make camp life. They irritated you so much that they spoiled your fun; they shut out the sweet woodsy smells, the lights and shadows in the water, the sunsets, everything. Now Olive loves the out-of-doors so much that those annoyances take their proper place; they are not noticed."

"It's a pity you hadn't married Olive," snapped Nell, rising from his knee with a flushed face.

"Oh, my prophetic soul!" Dick dropped his arms despairingly at his sides.

"I suppose the fine calm with which you bore the annoyance of sunburn is to be emulated," she continued, for Dick did not open his eyes.

Dick sat up and shouted: "You hit the bull's eye that time, Puss! Come again."

"Is that your way of calling that a catty remark?" she asked, a faint smile coming to her lips.

"I said at the beginning that we both needed this lesson, and my idea was that we could help each other if we set about it in the right spirit, a spirit of helpfulness. Honest criticism is the hardest thing in the world to take, but it cuts to heal. Are you willing to try the scheme, little wife?" he asked.

"Yes, Dick," she answered

BOSTON BRAVES FIELD WILL BE USED FOR ONE END OF WORLD'S SERIES CARD

Boston, Mass., Sept. 23.—Braves' Field, the largest baseball ground in the country, will stage one end of the world series games next month unless the Red Sox are displaced from leadership in the American League.

President Joseph J. Lannin, of the Boston American League Club, yesterday announced that he had accepted the offer of President Gaffney, of the Boston Nationals, extending the use of Braves' Field for all of the home games of the Red Sox in the series. Last year the Braves occupied Fenway Park in the games which won them a world championship, the payment covering only the actual expenses, and it is understood that a similar financial arrangement will govern the use of Braves' Field by the Red Sox.

For the big series the field probably will be equipped to seat more than 50,000 persons. Such an attendance would break all records of the game in this country. The present stands hold 42,500 seats, and it is proposed to erect a temporary stand in right centre field seating about 10,000 more.

It has been suggested here that an arrangement in Philadelphia, whereby the Phillies, prospective opponents for the Red Sox, would be assured the use of Shibe Park, the home of the Philadelphia American League Club, is in order. The Phillies have a park which cannot possibly accommodate world's series crowds in proper style. Shibe Park is not anywhere near as large as the new home of the Boston Braves, but it would be much better than the National League Park in Philadelphia.

The confidence of the Boston and Philadelphia fans that their respective favorites will battle in the world's series is natural. The Red Sox gained additional ground yesterday, when they beat the Cleveland Indians twice, while the Detroit Tigers only got one game in Philadelphia. The Red Sox are four and one-half games ahead of the Tigers. With only twelve games remaining on their schedule the leaders have only to win seven games, even should the Tigers fail to lose one of their ten games.

There was little change in the National League race. Neither the Phillies nor the Braves played, while the Brooklyn Superbas split a double-header with the Pittsburgh Pirates. The Phillies lead the Braves by five and one-half games and the Brooklyns by six.

POSSIBILITY OF GIRLS' BASKETBALL LEAGUE FOR THE CITY LOOKS EXCEEDINGLY BRIGHT

With the advent of the fail season basketball gossip is one of the principle topics of conversation among feminine athletic circles and enthusiasm in the approaching indoor season is waxing warm. Several prominent players in the sport have advanced quite an idea of the possibility of forming a league with possibly three or four organizations identified in the circuit. Practically all of last year's local quintets will put their players in the game, while rumors are afloat of several novice aggregations that will take up the game, which will start the latter part of October.

The Borough High School will be minus two of the players who were graduated last June. They are the Misses Lucy Doughs and Ethel Debele, centre and guard, respectively. The city High School will be without the services of Misses Ruth Morris, forward, Margaret Eaton, guard, and Susie Cobleigh, centre, all of last year's quintet. Both institutions have an abundance of substitutes from which to draw players to fill the places of those lost by graduation, and no doubt will present formidable aggregations. The North street school will undoubtedly open its season the early part of November with its annual game against the Alumni.

The "Plainfield Five," which gained such popularity last year, and which has a record to its credit of not being defeated a single time, will appear again this winter in its weekly exhibitions at the Columbus Club. Although the majority of their victories last winter consisted of overwhelming scores, several games were of the nip-and-tuck variety. One player who will be missed from the lineup when the young women appear at the West Front street gymnasium will be Miss Marion Mair, the versatile guard on the quintet. She has gone to Oberlin College to take a four-year physical course. Her position will without a doubt be filled by Miss Theresa McCullough, who substituted on a number of occasions last year. With the exception of Miss Mair, all the other girls will play again, while the name of Miss Elsie Debele, a graduate of the North Plainfield High School, has been added to the list of players. She will fill in as a guard.

Beside those mentioned the following will put teams in the field: Young Women's Christian Association, P. E. G. S., Women's League of North Plainfield, Young Women's Hebrew Association and St. Mary's Social Club.

CITY BASKEEBALL LEAGUE TO ORGANIZE MONDAY NIGHT WITH MANY LOCAL CLUBS

Tentative plans have been made for a meeting to be held in the Daily Press office next Monday night, when the new City Basketball League will be formed. In view of the fact that about twenty teams have applied for admission it will be necessary for all managers proposing to take out a league franchise to be present at the first gathering, as only those clubs represented will be considered for places on the circuit.

Enthusiasm in evidence in local basketball circles over the prospective league indicates that it will be necessary to form an eight or ten team circuit and only the best of the twenty applications will be taken under consideration. Past season performances will have to be taken into account in thinning out the array of material for a local basketball loop.

It is practically certain that the league will have to be confined to ten teams or less inasmuch as the number of available courts is limited.

President Walter C. Dobbins, of the City Baseball League, has promised his support in arranging the details for the organization and he will be present Monday night to conduct the meeting. A general invitation is extended to all managers and every effort is being made to impress upon the managers the necessity of attending the opening meeting as it will probably be impossible to gain admittance after that date.

CHALLENGE FOR LOCALS.

Through the columns of the Elizabeth Times, the Elizabeth A. A. football manager has issued a challenge to the Holy Cross club, of this city. All of the county seat team's games will be played on the South Elizabeth field and in view of the fact that Holy Cross is also a home club it is doubtful if satisfactory arrangements for a game will be arrived at.

LOCAL MAN COACHING.

John A. Rodgers, who conducted a campaign for Equal Suffrage here last spring as secretary of the New Jersey Men's League for Women's Suffrage, has secured the assignment to coach the Stevens Institute football team on the gridiron this season and is already hard at work with a big squad of candidates.

McLOUGHLIN'S REVENGE.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 23.—William M. Johnston, national lawn tennis champion, was defeated in an exhibition match here yesterday, 6-4, 6-4, by M. E. McLoughlin, whom he defeated in the recent national tournament.

JIM EMERY SIGNS WITH RAHWAYANS

Mullin, Randolph, Hand and Bruggy Will Also Take Part in Sunday Game.

Cliff Randolph, of this city, and Frank Hand, of Scotch Plains, will be in the points for the Perth Amboy Pacers, Sunday afternoon, when that team lines up in a double-header with the Woodbridge Tigers and Rahway Club at Amusement Park. Frank Bruggy, a former Bound Brook catcher, who has been performing in the New England League, will also play with the Pacers. Randolph will pitch and Hand will do the catching.

With the Rahway Club will be Jim Emery at third, and Tommy Mullin at short, two other Plainfield boys. Mullin has been playing regularly with the Rahwayans but Emery has just returned after a season with a Busher outfit and will take up the semi-pro pastime.

HOLY CROSS TO BEGIN WORK; FIRST GAME ON OCTOBER 9

Manager "Doc" Doyle, of the Holy Cross football team, has announced that his team will get down to hard practice next week. All of last year's regulars have signified their intention of coming out again and it is probable that a wealth of new material will be on deck.

The schedule is now in the course of preparation and the first game is set down for October 9 on Cricket Field. There has been some talk current, however, of shifting this date ahead for one week in view of the fact that the World's Series games start on October 8 and the second contest on Saturday would no doubt interfere with the attendance at Cricket Field.

CAME HERE TO ARRANGE GAME WITH HOLY CROSS

The management of the Bradhurst Field Club, of Brooklyn, was in the city yesterday afternoon with a view to arranging the annual game between the Holy Cross club and his eleven for Election Day on Cricket Field. The Bradhurst outfit appeared here last season and put up a fine article of football.

Although he did not see Manager Doyle, the Brooklyn manager conversed with another Holy Cross player and left instructions with him concerning the negotiations. It is probable that the details for a contest will be satisfactorily completed, but it is not likely that the Bradhurst will play on Election Day.

FEMININE TENNIS PLAYERS TO PLAY AT COUNTRY CLUB

Plans for what promises to be another successful and interesting women's tennis singles title match have been completed and the opening round of play will be staged on the Plainfield Country Club's courts next Monday morning at 10 o'clock. Mrs. E. Story Rowland is receiving the entries for the event and if early indications are to be taken as a criterion a creditable representation of the city's best feminine racquet wielders will be on hand to fight for the crown.

All appplications for entry must be in Mrs. Rowland's hands by Sunday night and can be made by telephone. Her number is 981. Last year's championship, which was won by Miss Edna Wildey, provoked considerable interest in local tennis circles and the honor this year will probably be even more keenly fought for.

LORENZO BROWER ELECTED CAPTAIN OF P. H. S. TEAM

At a meeting of the P. H. S. swimming team, yesterday afternoon, the following officers were elected: Captain, Lorenzo Brower; manager, Martin Snyder; secretary-treasurer, Max Fullerton.

Coach Hansen is elated over the material presented and thinks he can develop a winning team.

LOCAL BOY IN SQUAD.

Bill Peacock, captain of last year's Plainfield High School football team, and the best all around athlete turned out from that institution last June, is a member of the Colgate University football squad, having reported the latter part of last week.

SCHEDULED FOR TONIGHT.

Mike O'Dowd, of St. Paul, vs. Walter Monaghan, of Pittsburgh, 10 rounds, at Duluth, Minn.

P. E. G. S. PLAN FOR AN ACTIVE SEASON

Young Women Decide to Present a Play Early in November.

The P. E. G. S. held an enthusiastic meeting in the High School gymnasium, last night, a large turnout of members being present. Miss Clara Barton Smith, president of the organization, presided. Five new members were admitted. They were the Misses Maude McAfee, Lucy Johnson, Christine Vestergard, Mary Flynn and Vera Flynn.

Because of outside duties, Miss Elsie Debele resigned her position as treasurer and Miss Mildred McAuliffe was elected to fill the place. The following committee was appointed to draw up a constitution and by-laws for the club: The Misses Lillian Lamson, Helen Hummel and Ida Hummel. It was decided to present a play the early part of November and the following young women were appointed to present a number of short plays for consideration at the next meeting: The Misses Mildred McAuliffe, Helen Brynairski and Lucy Johnson.

The initial basketball practice of the members will begin in the High School gymnasium next Wednesday night. Miss Clara Smith, manager of the team, is already arranging a schedule for the club and games will probably begin the latter part of October. After each game a dance will be held.

P. H. S. NOTES.

Boys who will compete in athletics this year had to undergo a physical examination, conducted by Dr. Van Horn, yesterday.

Already over twenty Red and Blue tennis players have signed to compete in the scholastic tournament to be held by the Princeton Club at the Country Club Saturday.

SPORT EDITOR TO RETURN.

Harold S. Sharkey, sporting editor of the Plainfield Courier-News, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, is well on the road to complete recovery and expects to resume his position October 1. During his absence Walter Firstbrook has been serving in that capacity.

SCOTCH PLAINS' ENTRY.

Included in the 800 entries for the Asbury Park Kennel Club's annual bench show which opened in the Asbury Park Casino yesterday is a dog owned by Miss Minnie Kutcha, of Scotch Plains.

BRITISH COAL MINE SHOWS BIG PROFITS

Summary of the Financial Year to June 30 Last is Just Announced.

Washington, Sept. 23.—The big profits of the Welsh coal mines announced in the United States Government Commerce Reports for July 23, 1915, created so much interest in this country that Consul Lathrop at Cardiff has furnished later information. The Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce, has just received from the consul a summary of the financial year to June 30, 1915, for a number of collieries in Wales.

Insoles, Ltd., whose average annual output is 800,000 tons, dropped to 545,000 tons, but its annual dividend was increased from 6 per cent to 10 per cent, because its profit per ton raised increased from 15 cents to 29 cents.

The Fernhill Collieries, Ltd., continued its 16 per cent on common stock, although its output of 550,000 tons was 118,000 tons less than the year before. Its profits, however, increased from $156,000 to $191,000, and profit per ton mined increased from 23 cents to 34 cents.

The Windsor Steam Coal Co., raised 420,000 tons of coal at a profit of 50 cents per ton. This concern has been doing development work, but has now paid off arrears and can henceforth apply dividends to common stock.

JUDGE SILZER TO SIT.

Judge George Silzer, of the Somerset Circuit Court, will commence the trial of civil cases at Somerville, October 25, according to a notice received by County Clerk A. G. Anderson. The judge's motion days for the term will be at 9:45 o'clock on the mornings of October 9 and November 13, at the Court House in Elizabeth, and at 10 o'clock on the morning of December 11 in the Chancery Chambers at Jersey City.

TWO WORLD'S RECORDS SET BY BIKE RIDERS

Reggie McNamara won a twenty-five mile bicycle race at the Newark Velodrome last night and broke the world's record for that distance. McNamara clipped 34 3-5 seconds off the old mark and rode the distance in 53 minutes 38 2-5 seconds. The former figures were 54 minutes 13 seconds, made by Frank Kramer at New Haven on July 14, 1910. McNamara was an easy winner, leading Alfred Goullet over the tape by about six wheel lengths. Just as McNamara finished his chain slipped off, but Reggie had the race won. Jackie Clark was third, Bob Spears fourth, and Harry Kaiser fifth.

The new mark put up by McNamara was not the only record broken, as Alf Goullet gets credit for setting a world's record for twenty miles in 42 minutes 56 1-5 seconds. The old figures were 43 minutes 39 seconds, made by Walter DeMara at the local track on August 24, 1910.

PLAINFIELD GOLFERS RETURN GOOD SCORES

Kaufman is Prize Winner in the Senior Apawamis Tourney.

William T. Kaufman, of Plainfield, made the best net score for eighteen holes in his section of the senior golf tournament at Apawamis Tuesday, and is included in the list of prize winners compiled at the close of play yesterday, subject to change within the next two days, however. Mr. Kaufman returned a score of 79. Mr. Kaufman stands fifth in Class A, with a net score of 165. David H. Rowland, of Plainfield, holds a net score of 178 in class B, and William V. U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

Miss Emily Stevens, one of the foremost dramatic actresses now appearing in screen productions, will appear at the U. S. Astor Theatre today in "The Soul of a Woman," a stirring photo-drama produced by the Metro Company. The film tells the throbbing tale of an artist and his wife. Miss Stevens, who is the niece of Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske, and one of the favorites of Plainfield theatregoers, will be seen at the height of her dramatic form in this splendid feature. "The Soul of a Woman" tells a story that will interest young and old alike. Its plot is fascinating and swift moving; its scenery is of superlative quality and the performances of the various actors and actresses the very best seen in recent Metro releases. In addition today a strong supplemental program will be shown. Tomorrow charming Miss Blanche Sweet will appear for the first time in Plainfield in "Stolen Goods," one of the best screen vehicles in which she has appeared in months. In this film she portrays a character for which she is best fitted.

Saturday "The Money Master," a Klein feature, with Frank Sheridan in the leading role, will be the dramatic feature.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Music and melody, dance and song, comes into its own at the Proctor Theatre with the new bill which starts its three-day run this afternoon. Appropriate to this season of the year, the headliner act will be "On the School Grounds." This act has a cast of eight people, of which seven are girls. Music and comedy will reign supreme here, and all lovers of music will find their fill here. Muriel Morgan and El Brenoel play the leading roles. The act is one of those pleasing musical comedies which always attract attention, no matter where they play.

"The Dragon and the Owl," a dance and contortion act, with Zeda and Hoot, are also booked for today, while Jack Dresner, that widely known comedian, is to appear with a barrel of laughs which is promised to "pull" down the house.

"After the Fair," with the two Kerns, Lem and Samanthy, in a rural skit, a presentation which always carries the house with them, is also booked, and these rube comedians are due to raise a rumpus in the laugh line that will long be remembered by local theatregoers.

The program will be completed by the Three Musical Henrys, instrumental specialists, and the comedy skit, "Won by Ten," introducing those old favorites, Rice and Franklyn, a pair that have already made their name in the vaudeville world.

"When My Lady Smiles" is the feature three part photo-play booked for today, while for tomorrow "The Man With the Iron Heart" is to appear. Don't fail to remember that the first episode of "Neal of the Navy," the new photo-play serial, is presented to local movie fans exclusively at this theatre tomorrow, both afternoon and evening.

THE TEMPERATURE.

FAIR CANVASSERS SEEK OUT VOTERS

But Four Men Courageous Enough to Oppose Suffrage Found.

CARD INDEX IS KEPT

Women Workers Have Plans For Busy Campaign In Plainfield—Street Meeting Saturday and Colored Rally Monday Evening.

But four men with the courage to openly declare against suffrage for women have been found in the city of Plainfield by two fair canvassers for the cause, and almost one-half the entire city has been covered.

A majority of the male voters say that they believe in the movement, and but few oppose. A goodly number are, like the U. S., neutral.

This canvass is being conducted under the auspices of officers of the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield. Miss Madeline Durar, of Ravine road, Netherwood, and Miss Theo Nelson, of Trenton, are the young women who have volunteered to do this work. Contrary to what editorial paragraphers and column conductors would have the public believe the canvass and other work preliminary to the election of next month is being conducted in a manner wholly up-to-date politically. Each voter in the city of Plainfield will be indexed when the canvass is finished. He will be classed as a friend, foe or neutral, and if opposing or non-committal notes will be made as to the manner in which he can best be approached by those assigned to win him over.

The young women have found many who were afraid that they would be "blacklisted" if found to be opposing the cause, and suffrage leaders asked yesterday that this mistaken idea of the purpose of the canvass be removed.

"We are simply trying to get an accurate list of the voters who are willing to help us," said one of the workers. "We feel that we have a right to ask aid of Plainfield men because they are our representatives in the election. We cannot vote ourself and the issue is one of vital importance to us. Is it not within our right to ask our friends who can vote to cast a ballot in our favor?"

The two young women who are busily engaged in getting a line of the sentiment of Plainfield men spent two hours at the North Avenue station yesterday morning. They approached all of the commuters who left on New York trains. With many they left a stamped envelope asking that the subject be given serious thought while en route to New York and an answer mailed back to headquarters. They were well pleased with the result of the work, for what man could have found it possible to resist their smiles?

Mrs. Anna E. B. Fries, of Glen Ridge, who is described by the suffrage workers as a "charming" speaker, and Roswald S. Nichols, of Westfield, are to be speakers at the street meeting tomorrow evening. This meeting will be held at the postoffice corner at 8:30 o'clock.

For the purpose of increasing the campaign fund a cake and bread sale will be held at the headquarters all day tomorrow.

A big rally for colored people will be held at Nonpareil Hall, St. Mary's avenue, Monday evening. Leading workers in this county will attend and take part. The speakers will be the Rev. W. L. Imes, of Bethel chapel; Mrs. Blanche Harris, president of the Lincoln Branch of the Women's Political League of New Jersey, and Mrs. S. S. Swackhamer. It will be free.

Next week will be the busiest of the campaign, say the leaders.

THOMAS C. HARDING WEDS IN BROOKLYN

Popular Local Young Man Takes Miss Jennie V. Springer as His Bride.

The wedding of Miss Jennie Veronia Springer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Springer, of 466 Sixth street, Brooklyn, and Thomas C. Harding, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Harding of John street, this city, was celebrated at 6 o'clock last night, in St. Saviour's church, Brooklyn. Rev. James J. Flood, pastor of the church, officiated at the ceremony, which was witnessed by a large number of friends and relatives of the couple from Plainfield, New York and Brooklyn. The church was decorated with palms and ferns, cut flowers and autumn foliage.

The bride, who walked with her brother, Vincent Springer, wore a white satin gown, trimmed with duchess lace. The satin train had trails of orange blossoms and the tulle veil was draped in a becoming fashion. She carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and orchids.

Miss Helen Kerwin, of Brooklyn, a cousin of the bride, was the bridesmaid. She wore a frock of white satin trimmed with fine lace and pearl trimmings and an imported pearl head-dress with a Bird of Paradise. She carried an arm bouquet of tea roses.

The bride was also attended by three flower girls. They were Miss Ruth Von Dazell, of Brooklyn; Miss Mary Kerwin, a niece of the bride, and Miss Mary Esther Graham, a niece of the groom, all of Brooklyn. They wore pretty frocks of white organdie, white bows and wreaths of smilax, and carried immense baskets of pink roses. Each received a locket and chain from the bride.

Daniel McAfee, of West Sixth street, Plainfield, was the best man. The ushers were Messrs. John Caufield, of Plainfield, and Marty Kerwin, of Brooklyn.

As the bridal party entered the church, the organist, assisted by a cello and two violins, played the wedding march from Mendelssohn.

Following the ceremony the bridal party enjoyed a supper at the Imperial Hotel, in Brooklyn, after which the bride and groom left for Boston, Mass. They will spend several weeks in the New England States, and upon their return will make their home temporarily at 207 West Fifth street.

The couple were showered with presents from their many friends in Plainfield as well as Brooklyn, many handsome pieces of furniture, cut glass, bric-a-brac and silverware being included in the number. The groom's gifts to his best man and ushers were diamond stick pins. Mr. Harding has a host of friends in Plainfield, where he is an electrical contractor. He is a prominent member of the Elks Club, the Knights of Columbus, Second Night Club, T. A. B. Society and the Holy Name Society. He is also a graduate of the local parochial school. Mrs. Harding is a graduate of St. Joseph's Academy, Brooklyn, and is a popular member of the younger society set of that borough.

WESTFIELDER DID NOT HAVE PASSPORT

His Badge of Fire Commissioner Enough to Get Him Into Canada.

Westfield, Sept. 24.—Because he gave his birthplace as Germany, Fire Commissioner Robert F. Hohenstein, en route to Canada, had considerable difficulty in convincing Canadian officers on the border that he was a citizen of the United States. He did not have his citizenship papers with him, but he did have his badge as fire commissioner. The officials looked at the badge and looked at stationery which Mr. Hohenstein had in his pocket, but the word Germany excited their suspicions.

Messrs. Windfeldt and Losee, his companions, nudged each other and for a time enjoyed Mr. Hohenstein's embarrassment. Mr. Hohenstein stated that he was proud he was born in Germany, but that he was a citizen of the United States. The Canadian officers finally told him that he could proceed, but that they would have to report his case "higher up," and he might be followed by soldiers while in Canada.

Mr. Hohenstein says that he did not see any soldiers, and when the trio met their Canadian business friends the latter informed Mr. Hohenstein that everything would be all right.

The Canadians told the Westfield men that they should have passports in war times.

In 1910 it was 140,197, showing an increase of 27,125. Plainfield's population is 24,516, compared with 20,550 in 1910, or an increase of 3,966.

COURT SCORES NEAL EXECUTORS FOR DELAY

Judge Connolly Sets Next Tuesday as Date to Fix Penalty.

Declaring that he was not satisfied with the excuses offered by executors of the estate of the late Frank S. Neal in fulfilling the order to produce an accounting in the Orphans' Court, at Elizabeth, this morning, Judge James C. Connolly postponed further hearing in the matter until next Tuesday morning. The court explained that this action was taken in order to let the executors have another opportunity to explain why they had not complied with his ruling. Judge Connolly, in addressing the executors, stated that orders made in his court in such matters must be obeyed, and that if he did not punish the executors in this instance it would likely be cited in future cases.

The matter came up this morning on an order issued by the court, dated September 17, 1915, directing Frank and William E. Neal, and Mrs. Harriet Neal, the executors, to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt of court for their failure to obey the order of the court to file an inventory and accounting of the estate.

William A. Coddington, of this city, as counsel for Mrs. Neal, a daughter of the testator, who recently became of age, brought the matter to the attention of the court on behalf of his client, in an effort to ascertain what had been done with the estate by her mothers and two brothers, the executors. Isaac P. Runyon represented Mrs. Neal and William E. Neal, and Frank Neal appeared this morning in his own behalf. Mr. Runyon claimed that Mrs. Neal and William E. Neal were not responsible for the managment of the estate, because they had left it in the care of Frank Neal.

In his own behalf Frank Neal offered excuses to the court this morning as to why he failed to obej the previous ruling. After an order had been filed, on which this morning's hearing was held, the executrs are said to have filed the accounting.

Mr. Coddington took objection to this accounting, however, on the ground that it was incomplete and only came up to April 7, 1914, whereas he had asked for an inventory up to the present date. Judge Connolly held that this was true, and set Tuesday as the date for the final disposition of the contempt proceeding on the strength of Mr. Coddington's claims.

The best position now open to one of your ability and experience will be secured by a want advertiser.

Y. M. C. A. PLANS FOR THE WINTER

Attractive Program of Events Arranged for the Coming Season.

CLASSES ARE FORMED

Social, Religious and Athletic Departments Now Organized—Many New Features Arranged by the Officers.

Plans for the fall and winter at the local Y. M. C. A. have been practically completed, and will provide seven or eight months of pleasure and profit for hundreds of men and boys of Plainfield. The officers and others interested in the welfare of the youth and young manhood of this city have labored hard to provide a program of social events and religious instruction which will appeal to all classes of patrons of the association, and they think they have succeeded. The physical end of the work has not been overlooked, and beginning Monday, the several classes organized for gymnastic exercises, contests, etc., will commence holding their regular meetings.

With the association this fall "co-operation" will be the slogan—co-operation and intensive work along every line. The emphasis will be placed on this idea by every one having charge of departments or providing for the entertainment or the welfare of the members in any way.

F. O. Dunning, chairman of the social committee, has outlined a very attractive program for the year, and gave a sample of what the asociation has in store for its members last Tuesday night at the formal opening of the association for the fall and winter. Mr. Dunning's committee had charge of that affair.

Beginning in October, the building

ANNIVERSARY AND BIRTHDAY PARTY

Primary Graded Union Celebrate Event at Home of the President.

The twentieth anniversary and birthday party of the Plainfield Graded Union of Sunday-school Teachers was held at the home of the president, Mrs. J. A. Powlison, on Somerset street, yesterday, the affair being an all-day one. The gathering was doubly pleasant for the reason that it also marked the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Powlison and Mrs. Robert Love, a former president, on behalf of the members presented her with a handsome brooch.

Mrs. Powlison has been an officer of the union since its inception and has devoted a great deal of her time to the success of the organization. It was in view of this fact that she was honored yesterday. Another feature was a large birthday cake, appropriately decorated, which occupied the centre of the table at luncheon, which was served at noon.

The afternoon was spent in an informal social manner, no set program being arranged for the occasion. All thoroughly enjoyed the hospitality of the hostess and she was the recipient of congratulations from her guests. The Primary Graded Union has a large membership, comprising teachers and officers in nearly all of the Sunday-schools of the city and borough, and during the twenty years of its existence it has accomplished much in arousing a deeper interest in Sunday-school work.

MOTION PICTURE PROGRAM IS ENJOYED BY MANY

The moving picture entertainment at the Y. M. C. A. Hall, last evening, given under the auspices of the Bible school of the First Baptist church was very greatly enjoyed, a large number being in attendance. This entertainment was preparatory to the Rally Day next Sunday and incidentally announced the young people's social at the church this evening. The Christian Endeavor Society is alive and alert and the social tonight may be expected to maintain the reputation for enthusiastic effort along all lines. The young people of the city not affiliated elsewhere are cordially invited.

The movement for an attendance of two hundred and fifty next Wednesday evening at the mid-week service is meeting with heartiest response, the boys are especially interested since they will have a prominent part in the service.

MISS MARJORIE BROWN TO WED O. H. CONDIT

Engagement Announced at Garden Party for Miss Hedges.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard McWilliams announce the engagement of Miss Marjorie Walbridge Brown to Kenneth Hamilton Condit, son of Colonel and Mrs. Oscar H. Condit, of East Orange. Miss Brown is the daughter of Mrs. McWilliams and the late Paul Taylor Brown, of Philadelphia. Mr. Condit is a graduate of Stevens, class of 1908, and of Princeton, class of 1913, and is now an instructor of engineering at Princeton.

The engagement of Miss Brown and Mr. Condit was announced at a garden party given this afternoon by Mrs. McWilliams at her home in honor of Miss Beatrice Hedges, daughter of Dr. Ellis W. Hedges, of Watchung avenue, whose marriage to Cleland Caldwell Ross, of Newburg, N. Y., will take place on Saturday, October 23.

There were about thirty guests at this afternoon's affair, mostly young people. Among those from out of town were Mrs. C. H. Alling and Miss Hill, of Montclair, and Miss Amy Condit, of East Orange.

PAVEMENT POUNDERS ATTEND POLICE BALL

Many Plainfielders Witnessed Final Convention Demonstration of P. B. A.

Plainfield was well represented yesterday afternoon and last night at the annual parad and ball of the State Patrolmen's Benevolent Association held in connection with the organization's convention in Union Hill. Only one local copper sought a State office, Cornelius McCarthy being defeated for treasurer by Joseph Kehoe, of Edgewater. Several automobile loads of Queen City pavement pounders left here yesterday noon to witness the big street demonstration, and this vanguard was augmented by more autoists from Plainfield last night, who took in the annual reception and dance in Scheutzen Park.

More than 6,000 men, more than half of them policement, paraded the principal streets of West Hoboken yesterday afternoon, the line of march covering eight miles. Four thousand were present at last night's ball.

In the parade the Hoboken delegates attracted considerable attention by their distinctive uniforms, white duck suits, and the Perth Amboy policemen rode in automobiles. Newark pavement pounders also appeared in motor cars. Twenty machines bearing their banners occupied a place near the head of the parade.

The person who attracted the most attention was Miss Annie Lynch, of Bayonne, a candidate for queen of a Mardi Gras festival to be held in Bayonne soon. She was attired in the regulation blue, with badge and billy, and led the Bayonne delegation.

ACCUSER AND ACCUSED REACHED A SETTLEMENT

Constanine Chrisstifides, who with his partner conducts the New York Lunch, at 127 West Front street, reached a satisfactory settlement of his trouble with his brother of Perth Amboy prior to the city court session this morning and the charge of larceny made against him by the Middlesex county authorities was accordingly dismissed. The Plainfielder was arrested yesterday afternoon by Patrolman Martin Welsh on a warrant sworn out before Recorder Harold E. Pickerngill, of Perth Amboy, and was released under bonds of $50 to appear today.

Yesterday afternoon the two brothers got together and agreed upon a settlement, the accuser refusing to press his charge that the local man stole $20 and a bag of coffee from him.

FIRST MUNICIPAL DANCE.

The dance will start at 8 o'clock.

CHURCH FAIR IS NOW IN FULL SWING

Many Attractions Are Offered at Bazaar Being Held in Dunellen.

The three-night fair of St. John's church opened at 8 o'clock last evening in the W. G. Holton Hall. Both floors of the hall were artistically decorated for the occasion with American flags and red, white and blue bunting. Upstairs dancing is in progress at intervals during the evening to music furnished by Squier's orchestra. During the intermissions last evening the fancy, fish-pond and soda water booths and the ice cream and cake parlor did a thriving business. The sales of the fancy booth, in charge of Miss Carrie Heyl, assisted by the Misses Margaret Mohan, Jennie Ryan and Clara Gray, were stimulated by the activities of Vincent Manahan.

The soda water booth, with its decorations of spider lilies, was in charge of David Barnard, Fred Smith and Kaspar Harris. Credit for its heavy sales last evening, despite the coolness of the weather, was due to the magentic bass voice of David Barnard, who not any moment during the intervals between the dances would let the assembly forget that soft drinks were to be had at his booth.

The fish-pond was in charge of the Misses Florence Gray and Nellie Wahl, while the ice cream and cake parlor, located on the ground floor with six neatly arranged tables, was in charge of Mrs. C. L. Wahl, assisted by Mrs. John Fern, Mrs. John Shottinger, Mrs. Martin Boyle, Mrs. Owen Mohan, Mrs. Allen Wilson and Mrs. Patrick Costello. The T. A. B. Fife, Drum and Bugle Corps, of Plainfield, will attend in a body this evening and render a few selections.

LIBRARY DIRECTORS' MEETING.

The meeting of the trustees of the Free Public Library, which was not held last week owing to the lack of a quorum, is scheduled to be held this evening.

Eckert Brothers are building a new front porch to the George F. Giles house on North avenue tenanted by Fred Doyle.

GEORGE SMALL GIVEN A FAREWELL RECEPTION

George Small, who has been boarding for several years at the Mansion House, on Washington avenue, left yesterday morning for Panama on business for his employer, the American Cement Tile Company, of Lincoln. On Wednesday evening Mr. Small was tendered a party at the Hotel Hazelin, by Augustus Anger. There were thirty present at the affair from Bound Brook, Plainfield, Roselle, Beechwood Heights and this place. An enjoyable time was had in playing games and dancing. Refreshments were served during the evening.

Mrs. Paul Ratti, of North avenue, is visiting relatives in Cranford.

Mrs. Walter S. Craig, of New Market road, spent yesterday in New York.

E. W. Wheat and family, now living on First street in one of the Dodd row of houses, will move on October 1 to the brick tenement owned by W. W. Tappan, on Sandford place.

John Grindlay, of Grove street, is assisting about the Cashin grocery for the remainder of the week. On Monday he will start to work in Saurers.

Le Roy Scandell, of Front street, has taken a position at the Park Hotel livery.

Peter Benson, of Washington avenue, has secured a position with the Bell Electric Company at Garwood.

Miss Mary Vance, of Brooklyn, has rented the premises of No. 224 Columbia street through the John Fedderman agency, and will take possession on October 1.

TRADE BOARD TO MEET.

A special meeting of the Board of Trade will be held in the Borough Hall, Monday evening, at which time business of great importance is scheduled to come up.

Mr. and Mrs. Goldson Smalley, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smalley and Mrs. William Smalley were visitors at the Allentown Fair yesterday.

Miss Cora Dayton, of Center street, was entertained at Flemington recently by her brother, C. F. Dayton.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Fisher, former Councilman and Mrs. Firman H. Gise, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Todd and Mr. and Mrs. J. F. G. Kinney are planning to leave on Monday for Washington, where they will take in the annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Contractor C. Lester Rule is building a new roof on the J. Y. Wilson house.

The residence of Benjamin C. Carpenter, on Prospect avenue, is being repainted.

INJURES HIS HAND.

Dewey Vroom, of North avenue, has his right hand in bandages as a result of striking the brick sidewalk of the Linke building while fooling with Charles Haver. Dewey made a pass at Charlie, who was standing between him and the building, and Charlie "ducked," with the above result.

'Plains & Fanwood.

Maurice Hall, of South avenue, expects to enter the Army and Navy School, at Washington, with a view of taking an examination for an officer's berth in the army. He entered the army last January and was honorably discharged by Secretary of War Garrison several weeks ago.

Miss Marie Boise, of Plainfield, is visiting friends in the borough, where she formerly resided.

Rutgers Neilson, of Martine avenue, has resumed his studies at New York University.

The township budget for the coming year has been made up and shows a slight increase over last year. It includes $2,500 for streets, $300 for sidewalks, $500 for support of poor, $200 for fire department, $100 for police and $300 for library, bringing the total amount asked for up to $3,400. It is considerably less than the borough budget of $4,650, apportioned as follows: $1,800, streets; $1,500, lights; $950 and $400 general expenses.

Mrs. Frank Weldon, of Grand street, is entertaining Mrs. William Ader and son, of Rahway.

Local baseball fans will have a chance to see "Nibs" Hand, of the 'Plains diamond, in action for the first time since his return from the New England League, where he played with the Worcester team, when he does the catching for the Perth Amboy Pacers at that place tomorrow. One of the games of the double-header is with Rahway, on which Joe Alberts, also of the 'Plains, is a guardian of a section of the outfield.

Frank Weldon, William Ward and Edward Hand are the 'Plains delegates to the Exemp Firemen's convention now convening at Atlantic City, and Frank H. Palmer and Henry Maxim represent the borough association.

E. C. Wardell, who is stopping at the "Homestead" for some time, has returned from a short business trip to Philadelphia.

At the coming primary election there will be only one party, the Republican, with a full ticket in the field in the borough. In the township the G. O. P. will be opposed for but one office, the Democrats having put up Charles French for the County Committee against George Johnston, who is also after the office of assessor, and Ira Walker will seek reelection to the Township Committee. Burton P. Hall, for freeholder; William H. Hoar, for Mayor; Albert Riblet and Augustus Sheelen, for Councilmen; Charles Sheelen, for collector; Horace Young, for assessor, and F. W. Wescott, for County Committee, completes the Republican ticket in the borough. Although no authoritative information can be given, there will probably be a surprise on primary day in the borough, and it may be in the form of another candidate for one of the local offices, one who was prominently mentioned for a place on the ticket before the time for filing petitions expired.

Harry MacNamee, of Elm street, has returned from spending his vacation at Atlantic City.

The members of the Sunshine Weavers held a special meeting at the home of Mrs. John Z. Hatfield, of Stout avenue, last night to transact several business matters. The initiation team is preparing to welcome several new members into the club next week at the regular meeting on Thursday.

The members of the Eighth grade of School No. 1 will hold a meeting in a few days to take preliminary steps towards organizing, including the election of officers, fixing of class dues and choosing of class colors. The class is one of the largest in the history of local graduating classes.

AUTOIST GAVE HIMSELF UP; BUT LATER CHANGED MIND

William R. Patterson, of Parlin, N. J., whose automobile knocked down and damaged the traffic post located at Seventh street and Central avenue one night last week, gave himself up to the police last night, and was released upon his promise to appear for trial before City Judge William G. DeMeza this morning. The Parlin autoist failed to appear this morning however, and Judge DeMeza issued a warrant for his arrest.

After knocking the pole over Patterson continued on his way, the only means of identification in the possession of the police being the car number. Had he not appeared last night it is certain that he would have been arrested within the next few days anyway as the authorities were on his trail.

CITY JUDGE HAS PRAISE FOR ALLENTOWN EXHIBIT

City Judge William G. DeMeza, who attended the Allentown Fair at Allentown, Pa., yesterday, resumed his duties this morning, and when approached by reporters for his views of the annual Pennsylvania event he was profound in his praise of yesterday's program.

"It was even more than I expected," said the judge. "The fair has many wonderful exhibits of twentieth century improvements to facilitate commerce and industry and to spend a day viewing the numerous exhibits is an education in itself."

He was accompanied by Mrs. DeMeza, who inspected the fancy articles and other novelties of interest to women, while her husband passed on the poultry, cattle, manufactures and eatables.

LITERARY

A Tree That Grows While You Wait.

"If a good-sized, healthy banana-tree is cut off a few feet above the ground during the wet season, the tree will not die, but, nine times out of ten, will send up a new shoot from the center of the trunk and will grow fast enough to make up for lost time, for within forty-eight hours it will rear waving green leaves triumphantly above the severed trunk.

"The secret lies in the fact that the trunk of the banana-tree is not hard and woody like other trees, but is really composed of undeveloped leaves wrapped tightly together in a spiral form. When the tree grows, these rolled-up leaves push upward and merely unroll; thus no time is lost in forming buds and growing leaves as do ordinary trees. When the trunk is cut off, it doesn't interfere with the growth of the leaves, because they are always pushing up from the center of the stalk. If you will roll a sheet of paper tightly and push against one end, you will see exactly how the leaves are pushed up from the trunk of the banana-tree, and, if you cut the roll in two, you will find that it doesn't prevent you from pushing out the center of the roll as before.

"Although the banana-tree repairs an injury so rapidly and well, the shoot formed from the cut stalk seldom bears fruit or flowers. As these shoots are taller and stronger than the original trees, however, they are much better adapted to withstand wind and storms, and the natives frequently cut the banana-trees in order to force them to produce the strong, fruitless growth and to serve as windbreaks for other crops.—A. Hyatt Verrill, in the October St. Nicholas.

Many magazine readers who have grown enthusiastic over the stories of Philo Gubb, a correspondence-school detective, written by Ellis Parker Butler and published in The Red Book Magazine, have supposed that this character was so wholly fictitious as to be impossible of reproduction in real life. Just the other day, however, a friend of Mr. Butler's in Texas sent him a clipping of a want-ad of a man in a small Texas town who actually was advertising for work, either as a paperhanger or as a detective. Whether this individual, like Mr. Butler's character, had gained his knowledge of the science of detection in the Rising Sun Correspondence School of Detecting was not made clear in the advertisement.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Somewhere in the past they may have seen something similar, or nearly as good, but not quite up to the standard of the musical comedy presented yesterday, at the Proctor Theatre, under the title of "On The School Playground." The music and the dancing, and especially the latter, was something out of the ordinary style to be found in this type of act as a general rule.

This musical cast of ten, with Muriel Morgan and El Brenoel playing the leading parts. At the first appearance yesterday afternoon, the house just went wild, and the evening audiences just followed suit.

Jack Dresner, the comedian with lots of action, as well as a new song or two, is entertaining. The Three Musical Henrys, instrumentalists, were well received at all performances yesterday. The comedy skit, "Won By Ten," by Rice and Franklin, with a rural setting, has some of the back country material that makes one wish they were back once more.

Zeda and Hoot, the dragon and the owl, in a dancing and contortion act, were well received, the act being excellent. This bill will continue until Saturday evening.

The first episode of "Neal of the Navy" is to be flashed upon the screen of the Proctor house this afternoon, and will continue to be shown on Fridays until its completion. This photo-play serial is one of the most stirring pictures of the serial type yet to be produced, and must be seen to be appreciated.

A Galley o' Fun!

ADVICE TO HOLIDAY DINERS OUT.

Compliment the host on his carving and explain that inability to perfect yourself in the art is the only obstacle to your marrying and having a home of your own.

Assure your hostess between mouthfuls that the best restaurants can offer nothing comparable to her viands, that you have pined for home cookin for years, and that even in your boyhood days you have no recollection of having enjoyed anything so much.

Pretend to have a tremendous appetite and to have eaten enormous quantities, but be careful to avoid second helpings if the youngsters are waiting for a second table.

Smile brightly when the old aunt tells some of the 'cute baby sayings of your host.

Agree with the old soldiers uncle when he says the United States can whip "Roosia" and all the other nations of the world combined.

Display keen interest in the reports of Cousin Abner's crops last season.

Laugh, and blush if you can, when the host intimates you have matrimonial designs on some girl they all know that you hate.

And afterward be sure and beg the daughter of the family to play for you and to sing if she will, and when she does, assure her that she ought to study abroad.

Do these things—while you may not have any fun, others will.

THE SURPRISED FROG.

"Golly! I s'pose he'll duck ag'in!" "My! What an unreasonable colored person! He seems angry because I object to concussion of the brain!"

Her face is flat—expressionless,
Her eyes are dull and black;
Vociferously loud, her dress
Is negligently slack.
Her attitude is wooden and
Devoid of any grace;
Yet, though you may not understand,
I long to see her face.

My every impulse toward her goes—
To see her how I yearn!
Those lifeless eyes, that crooked nose,
To view I fairly burn!
Think not I am a silly pill,
O'er homely girls to mush—
If I should draw the Queen I'd fill
A lovely royal flush!

LINES TO A GIRAFFE.

O long-necked creature at the Zoo,
How fortunate for me
My lady fair does not compare
In that respect with thee;
For I should need a prince's purse,
An income like an earl's,
Had I to deck so long a neck
All up and down with pearls.

HIS EXPERIENCE.

First Sandwich Man—Do they pay you much?

Second Sandwich Man—No. There ain't much money in these literary jobs!

THE AMERICAN WAY.

Microbe on Apple—Why is yonder man eating in such a tremendous hurry?

Microbe on Pear—Appointment with his doctor. He is taking treatment for indigestion during his lunch hour, you know!

FORCE OF HABIT.

"What did Senator Lark say when the reporters informed him that his wife had brought suit for divorce?"

"'Millions for defense, but not a cent for alimony!' he thundered, rising in his most impressive manner."

A lot of clothing shops this season will be found to have bought lightly—they are apprehensive about conditions.

We also are apprehensive about conditions—so apprehensive that we have assembled the biggest stock we ever had.

The fact is, there are two things we always believe in—the prosperity of American business and the eternal excellence of Rothberg Clothes; and nothing short of fire, flood and famine will ever shake our belief in either.

Y. M. C. A. WINTER PLANS

will be opened each Tuesday and Thursday night to some special group of men, who will be invited to be the guests of the association and take advantage of all its privileges. These men will come from men's clubs, Bible classes, Plainfield merchants and business men, industrial workers and clerks. Pleasing programs will be presented for their entertainment. There will also be college nights for High School boys.

Membership sociables will be held every month. The first one was given last Tuesday night. The next one will come October 21. At these sociables interesting programs will be offered. On October 30 a Hallowe'en entertainment of a unique character will be given. A minstrel show is being planned; a joint debate between teams representing the Y. W. C. A. and the Y. M. C. A. is scheduled for some night in January; open house will be observed on New Year's Day, as usual, for the boys during the day and the men at night, a which time a pleasing program will be arranged, and there will be an entertainment stunt of some kind on February 29. Leap year does not come very often, and the social committee desires to take advantage of it. A pool tournament will be begun in November and extend over a period of three months.

Under the direction of John H. Manning, chairman of the religious work committee, a full fall and winter program of religious training and instruction has been prepared. This will include a teachers' training class for men, to be held Monday evenings, and starting November 1, following a Bible study rally to be held Monday, October 25, in the Y. M. C. A. At this rally the courses in the teachers' training class will be outlined. William D. Murray will teach this class.

There will be the popular "drop in" Bible class, a leader for which has yet to be announced. Of particular interest to boys will be the High School boys' club meetings and the Employed Boys' Brotherhood conferences for Friday nights during the fall and winter. These study periods will be preceded by supper, and each of the two classes of boys will be given instruction along the lines best adapted to their particular needs.

Begining about January 1 a class in personal evangelism will be opened which will be taught by the Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church. Sunday afternoon meetings for men will be held once a month during the winter, these meetings starting November 28 with "Jack" Rose, the ex-gunman of New York, as the speaker. It is probable that noonday meetings in the shops will be featured this winter, and shop Bible classes likely will be formed.

The opening of the boys' department will take place tomorow morning, when boys of the city generally will be guests of the association, whether members or not. Tournament games will be played in the boys' department, the pool will be open to them, and an entertainment fature in the form of a moving picture depicting a day in a Y. M. C. A. camp will be given for their benefit.

The Employed Boys' Brotherhood will be organized October 15, when the committee of employed boys of the association will report on the constitution they are preparing for adoption at that meeting. A week later, October 22, the boys will get together for the inner circle clubs of the High Schools and to talk over plans for High School work for the year. Then on October 29 the High School clubs and the Employed Boys' Brotherhood will begin the regular meetings. For the boys, a special Sunday afternoon service, commencing at 4 o'clock and lasting one hour, will be held this winter, the first one being set for October 3.

Along educational lines, classes for English will be organized among the foreign-speaking men and boys. Moving pictures of an educational character will be shown frequently.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

There is a world of illumination as to the methods of farce writing to be found in "It Pays to Advertise," which Messrs. Cohan and Harris announce for presentation at the Plainfield Theatre for one performance, on Monday evening, September 27. The audience is constantly led to expect something which it does not get. One observes the youthful hero evidently struggling to make his way in business only to learn the next minute that it is really his father who has been the cause of his ambition. Then there is talk from the rival father of his successful son, who has done so much to prove his business genius. So the audience sits in expectant suspense to see this model man enter, and lo and behold, instead of being the alert, smart man of affairs that is expected, Ellery Clark is, in fact, a languid person of artistic temperament and no sense of business whatever. This method of construction, which is the best that any of the writers has ever devised, runs through the play, and that is one reason why it is so successful.

Rent one of your rooms and reduce your own rent materially. It's a simple and sensible way and it works.

Scattered Sport Gleanings

If present plans materialize Plainfield this year will be the scene of three flourishing basketball leagues for the first time in its history. Between the interscholastic organization and the male and feminine leagues the followers of the pastime should be given some pretty juicy morsels in the way of sport this fall and winter and the movement deserves all the encouragement that can be placed in back of it. While the interscholastic circuit is well-founded at the present time the two other loops are mere theory and some hard and concentrated work is needed to make them realities. The time for such organization is ripe, however, and present enthusiasm should be taken advantage of. We have plenty of male and feminine court players for each organization and teams galore will probably send in their applications for franchises.

In view of the fact that the Rahway athletic clique was disrupted by graduation last June it would appear as though the opportune time for Plainfield to spring a county football champion has presented itself and it is to be hoped that the Ninth street institution will pull together a formidable outfit this fall. Good teams have been formed in the past few years, but with the strong Rahway veteran eleven in the field little or no opportunity for other county teams to get a crack at the title presented itself. We've heard whisperings of probable success from red and blue cohorts, but we'll have to sit around and wait for the first real match to get a line on any real dope.

Election of a swimming captain at P. H. S. puts the possibility of an aquatic team for Plainfield one point higher. With a good pool, plenty of talent and a good coach there is absolutely no reason why the representation in the scholastic world should not be a formidable one. Louis Hansen is as geed as they come in the coaching department and if he fails to deliver the goods this fall we'll all be able to throw up the sponge on the swimming topic in Plainfield.

With all this basketball dope clouding the air we've been wondering of late just why the Y. M. C. A. has not been heard of. Usually the first to sound the call, the members of this organization have to date shown no activity and for the first time in several years fear is being entertained lest no basketball outfit should come from the association. It goes without saying that the Y. M. C. A. should fall in line with the City League idea and all interested are looking forward to seeing a delegate at that organization meeting.

During the next few weeks the eyes of the sport world will be pretty closely concentrated on the world's series, alternating between Boston and Philadelphia for glimpses. It's pretty certain that the Hub town and the Quaker City will be the favored spots and it's also very evident that the wiseacres are going to have a little harder time than usual in picking a favorite.

With Bill Peacock and Monroe Good sporting football regalia at Colgate University and "Hub" Stine wearing the red and white of Springfield College, the city and borough is well represented on the college gridiron this season. Plainfield friends of these three warriors will probably be given opportunities to see all perform during the coming season, Colgate having a match scheduled with West Point and is slated to meet the Soldiers and Rutgers, the latter game having been set for October 30 at Newark.

Those interested in local feminine tennis competition have been promised an appetizing morsel at the Plainfield Country Club next Monday morning, when the star women racquet wielders of the city and borough get together to fight it out for the singles' championship. Last year this event prompted keen interest, and the scrap for the crown was keenly contested. Every indication points to a repetition of last year's even battling and a larger entry list.

Tomorrow morning, on the Plainfield Country Club courts, the schoolboy racquet wielders of the city and borough High Schools and Leal School meet in the opening rounds for the interscholastic mug. While graduation took some of the promising Maurice McLoughlins away from the local and borough schools, enough talented ball-chasers remain to make the fight a good one.

While we hate to be classed as a kicker, you'll have to admit that some criticism is coming to certain Holy Cross managers for the late start they are giving football hereabouts this year. Is it a case of monopoly where the local gridiron moguls can begin and finish where they please?

Wonder what Johnny McGraw thinks of his pennant chances for this year. Somehow or other we can't help recall "Muggsy's" assurances last May that the Giants were coming home again with the bacon.

It's one safe bet that two weeks from today the avenue in front of the Daily Press office will be more densely populated than it is now. Returns from the Philly or Boston ball parks will be crowding the wires.

Headline reads: "Jim Emery Signs With Rahwayans." Wonder if this is to be considered a promotion from the pastiming he has been doing with the Southern bushers.

In view of the fact that the magnates from the other end of Union county have grabbed Emery, would it not be timely for the City League to give Cliff Randolph a chance?

John Rodgers, the man who visited Plainfield last May in the interests of woman suffrage, is coaching Stevens' football candidates. There's quite a difference in the two tasks, but when October 19 rolls around we may be able to find a method in his movements.

Oberlin vs. Heidelberg, at Oberlin.
Hamilton vs. Clarkson Tech., at Clinton, N. Y.

Tomorrow will mark the formal opening of the college football season here in the East, when practically all of the big university elevens will get into action. Princeton, Harvard and Yale are all ready for the blast of the referee's whistle, while numerous other college teams will also line up for the first time this season. It is natural that for Jerseymen the greatest interest will be manifested in the activities of the representatives of Princeton and Rutgers, and there will be many folks from these parts visiting Princeton tomorrow to watch the Tiger battle with Georgetown, while others will take in the game at New Brunswick between Foster Sanford's big Rutgers eleven and the Albright College team.

While these two games will hold the stage around here, Harvard, looked upon last year as the premier team in America, will be busily occupied with the Colby squad in the Stadium at Cambridge. Yale, conqueror of Princeton last season, but vanquished by the Crimson of Harvard, will make its debut by playing the big fellows from the University of Maine in the monster Bowl at New Haven. East Orange folks are likely to watch with interest the Dartmouth College team's showing against the Massachusetts "Aggies," as Malcolm Switzer, a former East Orange High School star, will more than likely be playing quarterback on the big Green team.

FOOTBALL RETURNED.

Columbia University had its first varsity squad football practice yesterday in New York since 1905. Although the institution does not open until the latter part of next week, thirty-two students reported and were given a tryout by Coach Nelson T. Metcalf. Tom Thorpe, captain of the Columbia eleven in 1905, and other old football stars of the university, watched the men work.

BENDER SUES FOR $1,085.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 24.—Charles A. (Chief) Bender, a former player with the Philadelphia American Baseball Club, who this year played with the Baltimore club of the Federal League, yesterday filed suit in court here against the Federal League of Professional Baseball Clubs, asking judgment for $1,085, which he claims is due him on a contract for his services. In his petition Bender alleges that he signed a contract for two years at $7,500, but recently he was unconditionally released.

COBB GETS A RECORD.

By stealing his eighty-ninth base in the Detroit-Athletic game last Wednesday, Ty Cobb, of the Detroit Tigers, won the title of champion base pilferer of the twentieth century. Ty passed Zeb Milan's American League record of 88, which the Washington speedboy hung up in 1912. Yesterday Cobb stole his ninetieth base.

PLENTY OF STRIPED BASS.

Striped bass are moving along the shore. The few cold days brought them into shore. Word came up from the Highlands yesterday that the river was full of them and that they could be seen jumping after the mullet. Seabright fishermen rushed to the Highlands and bought every bloodworm they could find.

CONNIE MACK PLANS FOR ANOTHER TITLE

Veteran Manager Promises Athletic's Rooters Another World Beater.

While other people have been bemoaning the disruption of such a once powerful baseball machine as the Athletics, Connie Mack has been quietly gathering the material which will bring future championships to Shibe Park. He is confident that his drastic policy with relation to the old team was justified. It was the only one which could be applied to conditions as they existed. No excuses are offered for the present team, but at last Connie is making predictions and the most striking one is that in two years he will have a greater team than the one that was broken up. Within two weeks he says the baseball public will have an opportunity of seeing this new material on the diamond. Aside from the pitchers there will be few of the present members of the team as the basis of the rehabilitated Athletics. In discussing the baseball situation, he says:

"I am not crying for mercy or making any plea for patronage for the Athletics' Club, nor do I believe that I have made a mistake in tearing apart the greatest baseball machine of the day. I maintain that I did right and will again say that I will have a greater team in two years than the one I broke up.

"We are losing ball games every day and probably will finish the poorest of any team in either major league in years, but I have made considerable progress along the lines of reconstruction. If the fans will look back to the 1908 season they will realize that my progress was slow then until the combination was complete, and then the team came like lightning. My progress must be slow because the only part that I have now that I am banking on for my new machine are pitchers, and they don't know anything yet and cannot be expected to show until next season.

"I will have almost an entirely new team in the field in two weeks' time, and then the fans will be able to get a line on my future championship team. To date I have not a single youngster, barring one, who will be a part of the new machine. My best prospects will be here in a short time, and I think the fans will be satisfied.

"The poor attendance has not worried us in the least, because the least attention we attract right now the better it will be for the team. I am convinced that the fans will suddenly awaken to the fact along about the middle of next season, and then they will be satisfied that I have done the right thing.

"I have not seen that I have made a serious mistake. In fact, I am more convinced than ever that I did exactly right. I made the remark last winter that I did not think the Athletics as they finished the 1914 season could repeat in the American League, and after what I have seen of the other teams I am sure that I was not wrong. My 1914 team with its 1913 spirit could have won pennants for several years, but with the spirit that prevailed in 1914, it could not have finished better than fourth this year.

"Others may disagree, but I contend that I know that team better than any one else. We have always given the fans good baseball and pennant-contending teams and will do so in the future. I do not begrudge the Phillies the money they are making or the success they have had. The club deserves the success, and I am pulling hard for them to win the pennant. I have not seen anything of the National League teams and therefore my opinion is valueless, but I should say, judging by the existing conditions, that the Phillies will win out with a little to spare.

"At the Sporting Writers' banquet in Philadelphia last winter Moran and I wished each other success during the present season, and I am glad to say that I feel happy because a man like Moran, who is a credit to the game, has been so successful, and I will be pulling for him till the finish.

"Why should we envy the Phillies. We have had years of success and it is their turn now. I have never been a quitter and I won't quit now. I could have broken up my team in a manner that would have caused but little excitement, but that is not my way of doing business. Had the team been broken up in another manner, the fans would have had to be content with a losing team for a longer period than they will under existing conditions.

"I repeat that we will have another wonderful club before the close of next season. Everything depends on how soon my pitchers develop. They will surely be right by the middle of next season. They are slow finding themselves, but they will come around. The rest of my combination has been completed and will be shared up between now and the spring training season.

"Just at present I prefer to keep the names of the new men to myself, but they will all be here within two weeks. Just remember we don't care if there are not a hundred people present. The way the team is playing we are getting all the patronage that could be expected, but the public likes a winner, and I will give them that."

PENNANT RACES ARE RIPE FOR PICKING

Red Sox and Phillies Continue to Widen Gap Between Themselves and Rivals.

Boston and Philadelphia, generally regarded as respective pennant winners in the American and National Leagues, fortified themselves more strongly in their positions as leaders yesterday by winning double-headers.

Both teams now have arrived at the stage of the campaign where they can lose half of the games remaining on their schedules and yet outdistance their rivals.

The Boston Red Sox increased their lead in the American League to five full games over Detroit by inflicting a second double defeat on Cleveland, while Detroit won a game from Philadelphia. The Red Sox have ten games to play.

Brooklyn regained second place in the National League by winning, while Boston was losing, but Philadelphia won two games, thereby on both.

A margin of six and one-half games now separates Brooklyn from Philadelphia, and the Boston Braves are seven games behind the leaders. The Phillies have twelve games to play, but eight of these are with Brooklyn and Boston.

BASKETBALL LEAGUE MEETING POSTPONED

Organization Session to Be Held in Daily Press Office Tuesday Night.

Owing to the fact that a number of those interested in the formation of a City Basketball League would be unable to attend the first session if it were held Monday night, those who have taken the initiative in calling the meeting have decided to push it ahead one night and the gathering will therefore be held in the Daily Press office Tuesday night at 8 o'clock. Since the first call for the meeting was sounded yesterday numerous inquiries have been received at this office relative to the organization plans and it is probable that a large attendance will feature the opening conference.

In view of the fact that a great many more applications than can be comfortably accommodated in a league of this kind have been received it will be necessary for each club manager to attend the opening meeting as no other organizations than those represented will be considered in the formation of a circuit. President Walter C. Dobbins, of the City Baseball League, has promised his support in forming the loop and he will be present Tuesday night.

BOB FITZSIMMON'S WIFE TRIES SUICIDE

Woman, Well Known in This City, Attempts to Kill Herself in Hospital.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 24.—Crushed by the thought of being taken to what she termed a charitable institution, Mrs. Bob Fitzsimmons, wife of the former boxing champion, and before her marriage Countess Tema Zellon, became violent in one of the wards of the county hospital yesterday and attempted to leap over a railing to the floor, two stories below. She is suffering from a cerebral disease, the surgeons say, which probably will necessitate her being sent to phycopathic ward for treatment.

Physicians say her recovery is doubtful. In the meantime Mrs. Fitzsimmons and her friends are making every effort to communicate with Fitzsimmons and summon him to Los Angeles. Mrs. Fitzsimmons is his fourth wife.

Mrs. Fitzsimmons is well known in this city, where she appeared with the prizefighter frequently before their marriage. Her husband is now living in Newark, his big farm at Canellen having recently been sold at sheriff's sale by the Middlesex county authorities. In a statement to a reporter a short time ago Bob Fitzsimmons denounced the Countess, among other things accusing her of stealing nearly $80,000 worth of jewelry from him which formerly belonged to his first wife, Rose Julian.

NOTED PERFORMERS IN THRILLING ACTS BEFORE TRENTON FAIR GRAND STAND

Exposition Will Have Entertaining and Educational Demonstrations; Art Smith, Aviator In Aerial Insanity; Motorcycle Looping the Loop; Human Bursting Bomb; Daredevil Schreyer; Forestry Display; Health Exhibits.

ART SMITH, FAMOUS AVIATOR, WHOSE DARING EXHIBITIONS IN A BIPLANE HAVE CREATED A SENSATION. HE IS TO FLY AT TRENTON FAIR FROM SEPT. 27 TO OCT. 1.

TRENTON Fair's free open air show in front of the grand stand from Sept. 27 to Oct. 1 will have the greatest number of sensational performers ever gathered at a similar exposition.

In addition to the amusement program, the Fair will be made more interesting than ever through the co-operation of state officials. They will have displays from the state department of conservation and development, health and agricultural experiment stations.

The open air show will be featured by Art Smith. His name stands out prominently in the list of those who are to give demonstrations of daring in masterful acts. Fearless in the air, which sometimes proves treacherous, he is constantly introducing new thrills in his flights. He has just established a new record of twenty-six loops in the air in fifty-two seconds. To enable Trenton Fair patrons to follow his turns more easily he will have smoke fuses on his biplane, and they will show the exact course of his machine when making the loops.

Because of the seeming recklessness that marks his work it is often spoken of as "aerial insanity." This "human comet" has been the sensation of the Panama-Pacific exposition, where his flights have been the most talked of act on the grounds.

Smith is to give two flights daily at the Trenton Fair. On one of them each day he will give ten loops in absolute succession and will give loops down to 300 feet above the center of the race track. His vertical dives will be from 2,000 to 3,000 feet straight down to landing. He will show tail slides and wing slides and fly upside down from one-half to three-quarters of a mile.

In a giant spiral tower and seesaw combination Peloquin, globe trotter, is scheduled for bewildering and hazardous feats. This is declared to be the only act of its kind on earth. This act requires great skill, unquestionable nerve and physical strength. On a globe twenty-five inches in diameter he goes up and down a spiral and out upon a seesaw. At each performance he travels a distance of nearly 500 feet and has no safety device of any description. On the pinnacle he is thirty-eight feet above the ground, and at the center of the seesaw he is thirty-two feet. The act is a novelty for this section of the country.

Daredevil Schreyer.

Described as "the greatest act the world has ever known," the performance of Daredevil Shreyer is to establish a record in the length of the leap that is to be made by this daring performer. He is to jump across both the track and stage. To accomplish this feat the top of his platform will have to be 120 feet high. Down the steep incline he speeds on his bicycle. As he reaches the end of the platform and hurdles into space he jumps from the wheel. After going across the vaudeville stage and track he lands in a pool of water. He is declared to be the only man capable of performing this act.

Encased in a golden globe, with openings to bring them into view, the troupe of Cedora and company will try to loop the loop. This startling act, that combines risk with cleverness, was made a feature by Barnum & Bailey's circus at Madison Square Garden last March. It carries the largest globe of its kind ever built, and out of it the riders must go squarely over the top center of the sphere at least twenty times in succession.

Jewell brothers, the aeronauts, winners of the international balloon contest at San Francisco, will give demonstrations of their dangerous feats. Harry Jewell will make a balloon ascension, and when 1,000 feet in the air he will cut loose and try to land in the track center. If he goes outside of the track he is not to receive any money for the ascension. The idea in this feat is to show patrons the manner of cutting loose from a balloon with a parachute and the way the aeronaut strikes the ground.

"The Living Propeller."

The Santey brothers, who furnished the special aerial feature of the mid winter circus of the New York Hippodrome, are to be seen in Europe's latest invention, "The Living Propeller." In it they loop the loop in midair at a height of more than fifty feet.

Jewell's Pedrini will make his first appearance in America with his bouncing baboon at Trenton Fair. Originality has been reached in this number which promises to furnish surprise and entertainment.

There will also be a score of other acts.

For Crack Record.

With more attractive purses than ever in its history, the Trenton Inter State Fair Association is this year expected to have a better racing card than ever. More than $7,000 will be awarded in premiums.

The trots will be 2:14, 2:17, 2:19 2:21, 2:24, 2:27, three-year-old.

The paces will be free for all, 2:12. 2:15, 2:17, 2:19, 2:22, 2:25.

An extra cash prize of $500 is offered to the driver of the horse breaking the track record of 2:07, made by Prince Alert, the famous pacer, in 1905.

Excellent cards of running and automobile races have also been arranged. The running contests will be a part of the program exery day, excepting Friday, of the exposition, when the track will be reserved for automobiles. Ralph De Palma, Jack Le Cain and other famous drivers are to appear in the contests.

A Baby Health exhibit has been arranged, and mothers will be given instruction there on the best manner of caring for their infants. The co-operation of the Russell Sage foundation which has great funds at its disposal, is co-operating in this work.

Monday of the Fair this year is to be for children, Tuesday for ladies, Wednesday for farmers, Thursday for politicians and Friday for automobiles.

TRENTON FAIR POULTRY SHOW

Harvey E. Rogers, superintendent of the poultry department of the Trenton Fair, expects that the show this year will far exceed that of last fall, when more than 1,000 birds were exhibited.

The building will be open for the reception of exhibits Sept. 27 at 8 o'clock, and Mr. Rogers has made arrangements to take care of all the birds.

On account of the increase in the first prize money for single classes of poultry—bantams, turkeys, geese and ducks—from $2 to $3, he expects this to be his banner year. The first prize for exhibition pens of poultry and bantams has been increased from $5 to $6. This is the second year that this department has been under Mr. Rogers' direction.

Trenton Fair, which will be held this year from Sept. 27 to Oct. 1, is one of the few shows that give cash instead of cups for first prize and besides this also awards a number of special prizes.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. O'KEEFE HELD

Many Mourners Attend Obsequies in St. Mary's Church This Morning.

The funeral services for Mrs. Catherine V. O'Keefe, wife of James A. O'Keefe, were held at her late residence on West Fifth street this morning and later in St. Mary's church, where a requiem mass was celebrated for the deceased. Father Bernard M. Bogan, pastor of the church, officiated, and delivered an eloquent eulogy on the life of the young woman. The pastor spoke touchingly of her Christian life, devoted to the best interests of her church, home and friends, and of her long and tedious struggle for life after being stricken with the malady that finally caused her death.

During her early life in this city and through her connection with St Mary's Parochial School and various organizations affiliated with St Mary's church, Mrs. O'Keefe had made a host of intimate acquaintances and the remarkable collection of floral tributes stood out as a mark of the esteem in which she was held in the community. Included in the offerings were wreaths and set-pieces from the Plainfield fire department, the family, A. E. Force & Company's employes, Knights of Columbus, Callahan & Son's employes, class of 1901, St. Mary's Parochial School and numerous other individuals and organizations.

The funeral services were largely attended and the pall-bearers were Martin Connaughton, James Fitzpatrick, James P. O'Keefe, Thomas P. Hines, Harry Drake and James Leary. Interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery.

PLAINFIELD MAN TO WED HOBOKEN GIRL

Fred McCune, of West Front street, this city, and Miss Anna Blake, of Hoboken, will be married at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the Church of Our Lady of Grace, Hoboken, by Father John Barrett, pastor of the church. The couple will be attended by Miss Anna McCune, of this city, sister of the bridegroom-elect, and Thomas Golden, of Jersey City, will be the best man.

A small reception will be held after the ceremony at the Blake home, after which the couple will leave for Washington on their honeymoon. They will reside in the Greenville section of Jersey City upon their return.

HENRY KINNEY CHOSEN HEAD OF SENIOR CORPS

Sundsrtom. Physical Director Robert L. Meermans and General Secretary A. C. Estes met with them.

These officers were elected for the coming year: President, Henry Kinney; vice president, Eric Van Norden, and secretary, Walter Carson. After listening to a splendid talk by Mr. Estes on the value of the work of the leaders' corps, a general discussion of plans for the fall and winter ensued.

ANNUAL "COUNTRY STORE" IS LARGELY ATTENDED

The annual "Country Store" given under the auspices of the Women's League of St. Joseph's church, last night, was a success. Over one hundred prizes were awarded to holders of the lucky tickets, Miss Ella Mullin distributing the awards. The proceeds of the affair will be used to furnish the new kitchen of the league, which is in the new St. Joseph's Hall.

The evening's program consisted of the following: Imitations of Charlie Chaplin, by Willie Gough; solo, "Armour's Song," from Robin Hood, by Miss Alva Dunham; solos by Mrs. Thomas Derrick and piano solos by members of the league.

MRS. ROGERS' FUNERAL.

Funeral services for Mrs. Ann Rogers were held at the home of Martin E. Whelan, on East Second street, this morning, and later at St. Mary's church, where a requiem mass was celebrated by Father McDonald. STATE'S FIREMEN OPPOSE SUFFRAGE

Lively Demonstration Against Speakers—Martine Delivers a Speech.

Eloquent remarks, mainly laudatory to firemen, earned for United States Senator James E. Martine a warm place in the hearts of the 1,400 delegates to the annual convention of the New Jersey Firemen's Relief Association, which convened in Atlantic City ysterday. Senator Martine was the speaker of the day at the convention and his commendation of the State's fire fighting force brought forth repeated rounds of applause from his interested hearers, one of whom was Chief T. O. Doane, of the local department.

An exciting demonstration started yesterday afternoon, when speakers for and against the suffrage issue attempted to address the firemen gathered on the steel pier. Mutterings of disapprobation were heard on all sides, the delegates declaring that they had come to Atlantic City for business purposes and that they did not intend to have their time taken up with woman suffrage or any other matters foreign to the affairs of their association.

After much wrangling the women were finally allowed to go on with their speech-making, the antis speaking first. They were given considerable attention and their remarks seemed to appeal to the fire laddies. So apparent was the feeling among several hundred firemen when the pro-suffrage workers began their talks that the president of the meeting threatened to remove them from the hall. This declaration prompted 300 men, in twos and threes, to file out.

LEGAL ACTION AGAINST MINISTER IS DROPPED

Further action against the Rev. H. E. Sampson, who was head of the Millstone Mystic and Religious Sect and who, it is alleged, took a large quantity of corn from the Albert Voorhees farm at that place, has been dropped. The minister has left Millstone, and it is the belief that he has gone to England.

Heirs of Mr. Voorhees were greatly annoyed by the disappearance of quantities of corn, but when it was learned that Mr. Sampson had sailed for England, it was decided to drop further legal action.

"John, have you any candy?"

"No, ma'am," he replied.

"Have any of the other boys any?"

"No, ma'am."

GUATEMALA NOT GUILTY OF BREACH, SAYS CENTRAL AMERICAN EDITOR

Guatemala, which has just joined hands with the South American republics in an attempt to put an end to the Mexican chaos, is facing a difficult situation in maintaining her strict neutrality among Mexican factions. Coincident with Guatemala's participation in the Pan-American Council with Argentina, Brazil, and Chile, the Carranza government handed the Guatemalan minister his passports.

Guatemala's action is intended only as a move for peace, is the statement of Virgilio R. Beteta, editor and publisher of the Diario de Centro America, the Associated Press of Central America, and a member of the recent Pan-American conference here. Senor Beteta declares most emphatically that his government has not in anywise been guilty of a breach of neutrality.

"Together with Argentina, Brazil and Chile," said Senor Beteta, "the Republic of Guatemala participated in the Pan-American conference. Coincidently our Minister to Mexico has received his passports from the Carranza Government.

"Carranza seeks to justify his conduct by asserting that the Government of Guatemala was not a neutral power, fomenting revolution and strife on his frontiers. This is far from being a fact. It is well known that since the beginning of the disturbances in the bordering country, Guatemala has maintained strict neutrality.

"All factions in troubled Mexico have tried to win the sympathies of Guatemala, as they have the United States Government, but the agents have been accorded only such courtesy as the rules of courtesy command for all foreigners.

President Cabrera of Guatemala.

"Owing to the fact there are many citizens of Guatemala living in Mexico and many Mexicans living in Guatemala, the task of maintaining strict neutrality has been a heavy one, necessitating that the frontiers be closely guarded to prevent mixing in the revolution.

"Guatemala does not employ other than a frank and decided course toward all factions in Mexico. Its only thought and wish is peace, not only in Mexico, but throughout the world. Toward the people of Mexico my country, in all its dealings, is actuated only by good will."

DR. MAXSON CO-OPERATING WITH NATION'S NATURALIZATION WORK

Dr. Henry M. Maxson, Superintendent of Schools of Plainfield, has been in communication with the Bureau of Naturalization of the Department of Labor relative to the nation-wide movement promulgated and fostered by the Bureau having for its object the Americanization of alien residents of this country. This movement has been inaugurated with a view to the instruction of aliens in the English language and the principles of government, so that when citizenship has been acquired they will be producing rather than dependent members of the community. Mr. Maxson has expressed his keen interest in the plan and has signified his desire cordially to co-operate with the Bureau of Naturalization in the furtherance of its educational program.

In his letter Dr. Maxson says:

"The Plainfield School Department will be glad to co-operate with you to the fullest extent in the matter of your work in naturalization. We shall have an evening school for foreigners and shall try to work in lines that will lead up to naturalization."

Emphasizing the necessity for education of the aliens residing in Union county along the lines indicated, the latest statistics available show:

*Figures not given.

Among the approximately 14,000,000 foreign-born residents in the United States, 1,650,361 foreign-born whites are classed as illiterate. These illiterates are the natural prey of the designing and scheming foreigners and natives, as well, at every turn.

For years, this condition has been studied by the Bureau of Naturalization in its application to the administration of the naturalization law. It is safe to state that although 35,000 foreigners have been refused citizenship because of mental and moral unfitness, at least that many have been admitted to citizenship. In spite of these deficiencies, during the period of Federal supervision, in many places the public schools have, under the inspiration of the Bureau of Naturalization, opened their doors to the foreigner and have taught him the duties of American citizenship and in these places, the courts have readily responded to the new order of things and refused citizenship unless the candidate could come up to the higher standard which has been brought about by the Federal supervision. There is scarcely a state in the whole country that does not now have citizenship classes carried on either by the public schools or under the direction of private agencies.

In many localities where there are hundreds, and indeed thousands, of citizens admitted annually, no cognizance had been given this important proceeding by the general public, municipal officialdom, public school or other authorities until brought to their attention by the representatives of the Bureau of Naturalization.

SWIMMING POOL SANITATION URGED

Refiltration and Chemical Disinfection Necessary, Says Health Authorities.

Ninety-one large municipalities in the United States have established public swimming pools to meet the demand for knowledge of swimming. Swimming pools are on the increase. The United States Public Health Service publishes an articles by Wallace A. Manheimer, PhD., of Columbia University, on the results obtained from a careful examination of six swimming pools.

It is pointed out in the report that in swimming in polluted water, typhoid fever, conjunctivitis, and other diseases may be acquired. The report gives in detail the results of the bacterial analyses made of the various pools and of the effects of refiltration and chemical disinfection. It is pointed out that when the water is unfiltered it is apt to be cloudy, thereby making the danger of accidental drowning very great. When refiltration is practiced the water becomes clear and this danger is obviated. The report concludes that the cubic capacity of a pool affects its sanitary condition; that the process of adding dilution water is an efficient means of reducing the number of bacteria in water, and that the supervision of the plant and the class of attendants are also important factors in pool sanitation. The combination of refiltration and disinfection by the use of calcium hypochlorite renders the sanitary condition of the water excellent. Many of the colleges and secondary schools of the United States have as a graduation requirement, a proven ability to swim. This important field of athletics should be surrounded by every sanitary safeguard.

WILL SELL MILLIONS OF RED CROSS SEALS

Every State and Territory of the United States Will Be Reached.

Two hundred million Red Cross Christmas Seals are now being printed and distributed by the American Red Cross and the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, according to a statement issued by the latter organization today. The proceeds from the sale of these seals will go for the fight against tuberculosis in the communities where the seals are sold.

The organization of the Red Cross Seal sale this year will take in every State and territory of the United States, including Hawaii, Porto Rico, and the Canal Zone. By December 1 over 500,000 workers, men, women and children, will be engaged in the campaign.

The sale in 1914 broke all previous records, totaling over 55,000,000 seals, an increase of 22 per cent. over 1913. After deducting all expenses this left nearly $500,000 for tuberculosis work in this country. The money has been and is being expended by over 2,000 different agencies, who benefited from the sale in amounts ranging from $100 or less to over $25,000. The American Red Cross announces that it will continue its previous successful policy of charging only 10 per cent of the gross proceeds to State anti-tuberculosis associations, thereby encouraging local work.

LOYALTY OF ITALIAN Reservists Who Answer the "Call to the Colors."

On Thursday, August 10, among the Italian reservists who went from New Jersey, Connecticut and other points to New York to take passage on the liner "Dante Alighieri," was a young man who gave his place of last residence as Westfield, N. J., occupation as laborer, call to the colors from Caserta. Like all of his race, stolid, apathetic, and evidently taking his lot as matter-of-course, he was nevertheless quite blithe, loquacious, and with patriotism manifest in every word and action. The call to the colors had found him prepared for ready response, and there was no timidity or faint-heartedness about him. He had known that the call was liable to come; and when it came there was nothing recreant in his behavior or in his thoughts.

He passed before the consular agent when his turn came, answered the questions without hesitation, and pinned his card in his vest lining smilingly. The man who had preceded him had done just the same, and the man who took his place would not do different. And yet——

At that man's New Jersey home a young woman had said to him that afternoon, "Arrivederci! (Good-bye.)"

And he had replied, "Arravederci!"

Sentiment? None. She was his wife, and they had been married a little less than two years. In its cradle slept their litle boy. Christmas will bring another occupant for the same cradle. Tears? None. The pain of parting? It was painless, "va bene (all right)." He had to go. The wife had neither regret or compunctions, fear or apprehension. He might come again, and he might not. It was not for the woman to say "Vi piace? (Do you like it)" Both he and she were "soddisfaito" (satisfied), yes, "soddisfatissimo (perfectly satisfied)." Complain? Not they. He might return, might not. If he should, it would be simply "Bene! (Well!)" If he should not? They had not thought of that. He was to fight for native land. He had been in America several years. He would return: of course he would! But when? And if—no "if" about it.

Early on Saturday the liner sailed. Has the wife heard from him? Probably not. Will she hear? Probably not. Is he at the front? Is he still alive? No answer. Will the answer ever come? Will he be heard from? Will he return?

The question passes. And what of the little wife? Yes, what of her? What of the dependents on the Italian reservists who are going, or have gone to take their places in the army? Do we know that it is a burning question? Do we realize that at an hour's warning the reservists are off when the call comes? What is that to us? Yes, what is that to us?

In England there is the Societa Pro Italia, with some of the most eminent men and women among its patrons. At its head is Mr. Asquith, and with him are associated such men as Lord Kitchener, Lord Curzon, Viscount Bryce, Sir Edward Grey, and Lloyd George, and such women as the Duchess of Marlborough, the Duchess of Norfolk, Lady Randolph Churchill, Madame Rothschild, the Countess of Granard, and others as socially prominent. The credit of the inception of the Society is given the Countess of Granard, whose favorite expression, "If it was in America, we would do so!" was called into action from her American heart. The Society is, in complexion, Protestant, Catholic and Jewish. Its object is to provide for the families of reservists who are in or approaching indigence. Committees are alert, and throughout England as soon as it is known that a man has gone in response to the call the Society's representatives get in touch with the family, and provide where provision is needed. More than this, the reservists themselves are given the Bible (King James or Douay version, according to the recipient's faith), and Catholic or Episcopal prayer-books.

Is there not a suggestion for American application in this? Is the Countess of Granard right in her boast? This is not the charity that stammers. It is not the kind with an extended hat. Think you that the young wife will beg? Not she. She may not need for aid, but in the name of the Compassionate, should we not know her better, and although she may be stolid about accepting pity and interest, is it not ours to show it? Really, now, how much better are those reservists for having been in America?

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT LIKELY TO BE LAST

Washington, Sept. 24.—Their ranks thinned and thinning daily, the members of the Grand Army of the Republic will assemble here next week for the 49th annual encampment. In 1892, 400,000 veterans were present; this year it is expected that under 30,000 of the old fighters will be on hand, despite the great attraction of meeting on the fiftieth anniversary of the end of the Civil War. It is expected that this encampment will be the last; that the reproduction of the Grand Review will be the final march of the old soldiers.

There are several candidates in the field for the office of grand commander. Frank O. Cole, of Jersey City; Orlando A. Somers, of Kokomo, Ind.; William J. Patterson, of Pittsburgh, and Elias R. Montfort, of Cincinnati, have been put forward by their friends for the office. The contest is expected to be one of the features of the encampment, and the fight will be marked by strategic tactics as well as by direct assault and defense.

It is planned to recall the days of the Civil War in the capital by remanning the old ring of forts that defended Washington, and relighting every night the old signal fires which, distributed at strategic points, once warned the Union army of the approach or other movements of the opposing force.

LITERARY

Pet Golf Clubs Owned by Famous Players.

In the October American Magazine, Jerome D. Travers, present open golf champion and four times amateur champion of America, writes an article under the title "Heroes of Wood and Iron" in which he tells many stories of great plays and players and describes how many famous players own pet clubs with which they can achieve wonders. In the following extract taken from his article he relates the facts about two or three cases of this kind.

"In England on my last trip I happened to pick up a certain light iron in a professional's shop. It was rusty and several years old. Yet I knew the minute I got my hands on that club it was exactly what I wanted. The professional was glad to sell an old club cheap. So I bought it for a dollar. The next day Fred Herreshoff picked it up, and offered me five dollars for my bargain. I refused and he offered me ten dollars. He finally offered twenty-five dollars, but I told him it was not for sale.

"Some years ago 'Snake' Ames, the old Princeton football star, who is also a fine golfer, had a mashie in his bag which he rarely used. One day he handed it to Oswald Kirkby, who had been looking for a mashie that suited him. 'It's exactly the club I've been looking for,' said Kirkby. 'Please keep it then,' said Ames. 'I've been looking for a chance to get rid of it.'

"Within a week two golfers offered Kirkby thirty dollars for the club, but fifty dollars would not have tempted him. And any new mashie on the market can be bought for three dollars. The feel and balance of this club merely happened to appeal to several players beyond that of any other mashie they had ever used. Yet to its original owner it was worthless. This club is now Kirkby's prize possession, and it isn't for sale at any price.

"When a man gets a club of this sort, whether it be driver, brassie, iron or putter, he is almost sure to play it well. For a big part of golf is confidence. If a golfer believes he can make a certain shot, he can generally make it. If he has unusual confidence in a certain club he is almost sure to use it well, and in every hard match he is equally sure to use it at every chance, even when at times the shot would naturally call for a different sort of club.

"Edward Ray, ex-British champion, has a massive niblick that he uses for every pitch shot from 150 to 50 yards. Where the average golfer would take a full mashie or perhaps a jigger, Ray takes out this niblick for a high pitch."

Only Real War Can Test a Soldier's Mettle.

From the humblest soldier to the highest chiefs the entire French army has complete, unflinching faith in its commander-in-chief. From the very first engagements his firm and resolute hold upon the reins has inspired his troops with courage and confidence. The result of our first encounters with the enemy had not been what we had hoped. The incompleteness of our organization, our lack of heavy artillery, our inadequate information as to the German army, all these deficiencies were cruelly evident in the early battles. Nor did all our generals display in the same degree the qualities of intelligence and energy required of a great military leader—for the simple reason that in times of peace it is all but impossible to prognosticate a general's worth in war. Only the test of battle gives the true measure of a general's merits. This or that brilliant reputation, won during the big manoeuvres, falls to pieces with the first crack of the rifle and the bursting of the first shells; while an officer on whom only slight hopes have been founded may display at the first test the qualities of a born leader.—From "General Joffre: The Victor of the Marne," by Captain X, of the French Staff, in the October Scribner.

WE ALL HAVE A PLACE.

Corner an opponent of suffrage for women and show by sheer logic and truth that all his arguments against the reform are futile and foolish and he will invariably fall back on the time-worn declaration that "woman's place is in the home."

Of course it is. No true woman denies that. Woman makes the home. Without her the magnificent palace of the modern millionaire is but a hollow shell of hiding. She is the home.

Woman's place is in the home and so is man's place at his work. If he is a barber his place is in the barber shop, if he is a mechanic his place is in the machine shop, but so long as he does his work well, should he be prevented from taking an interest in the government that controls his liberty and his happiness?

A bartender's place is in the barroom. That should be an admitted fact, but has that prevented the whisky interests from controlling politics and government in many of the States of the Union for the past half-century? If a saloon man is privileged to bribe legislators, force officials to become traitors to their trust by ignoring laws they were sworn to enforce, and corrupt the minds and morals of young men by making them parties to illegal sales, shall not a woman have the right to use her strength to counteract this influence against her happiness?

An office-holder's place is in the office to which he was elected, but has consideration of that undisputed fact ever prevented him from using his time and that of the people to build up political fences that his term might be lucrative and lengthy?

Certainly woman's place is in the home, but those of us who profess to believe in the constitution, who concede that all have an equal right to liberty and happiness, should give her the ballot that she may use her influence in creating conditions that will make her home brighter and better. It is our home, too, and if we have delegated to her responsibility for its condition, should we not give to her a voice in its government?

CROWDED SCHOOLS.

Will there ever be enough school buildings in Plainfield to comfortably seat the pupils at points within reasonable walking distance of all sections of the city? The Board of Education, with the growth in population, is confronted by the problem every fall, and this year was no exception. East End residents put up such a mighty protest that they secured the re-opening of the former Netherwood church as a school, after its abandonment had been announced. Other schools will be greatly relieved in two or three months, when the new Evergreen avenue edifice is completed.

Last year when the schools reopened, the enrollment increased approximately 200 pupils, and this year the increase has been another 150. Thus about 350 new pupils have been added in two years, practically all of them in the grammar grades, and no additional accommodations, aside from a few rooms in the High School building, have been provided for them.

The complaint about crowding is heard in other places. From practically all of the big cities of the country come reports that hundreds and thousands of children are compelled to attend afternoon sessions, because there is not room enough to accommodate them in the morning. While it is true that the situation is a disheartening one in Plainfield, we should not get discouraged, for the Board of Education is doing the best it can, without making an enormous boost in the taxes. The East End should get a new school at the earliest possible moment, but until that is procured, and the Evergreen avenue building completed, every parent who has the welfare of the schools at heart should "lend a hand" in the work of accommodating the pupils.

If the situation were a new one, it would be well enough to be critical. But it is not. The city is growing at a steady and substantial pace, and the younger generation of school age is increasing with it, as may be expected. So criticism will not help in the slightest. We must put up with conditions, and build additional schoolhouses as fast as can be done without bringing too big a boost in the tax rate.

The public should go slow in proclaiming that New Orleans reporter a martyr because he took a four-day jail sentence rather than give the source of his information on a story exposing crooked politics. He might have been led by selfish motives. They feed people in jail, you know.

This End Of The World Stuff

Whenever a wild-eyed preacher wants to attract more attention than he has been able to get by attending to his regular business of being a plain human being anxious to help his fellow-men bear what they can't sidestep—we say that when some notoriety-thirsty preacher gets the spotlight bug, he begins to tell us about the end of the world, and prove it, to his entire satisfaction.

If there is any one thing that, more than any other thing, gives us a deep-seated and lingering pain and almost insufferable weariness, it is that sort of pigwash.

Any human being who is doing the best he can need have no interest whatever in the end of the world. When it comes, it will catch that sort of person on the job and with no apologies to make.

We've all lived past a dozen or so absolutely guaranteed ends of the world.

The end of the world would certainly have a lot of good points. We would get a chance at the first real vacation many of us have ever had. The old, old question of making good and keeping the family clothed and fed and the children in school and the doctor paid and the wife contented and a balance in the bank—we'd be off o' that stuff.

There is no reason in the world or out of it why any sane human being should give himself the slightest concern on that subject. He can't do a blooming thing about it, and he might just as well be putting in his time taking care of him and his, so as to be of the utmost use in helping tide his fellow-beings over the inevitable bumps, and in helping them enjoy the fine things of this widely-advertised life which, little as we really know of it, is far better known to us than anything else we can think of just at the moment.

Boo—end of the world! Live, laugh, love and be sane and let such piffle alone!

The Young Lady Across The Way

The young lady across the way says she overheard her father say that a friend of his was suffering from uric acid and for her part she never has been able to understand how people can be so careless and why will they leave such dangerous things around the house where somebody's just as likely as not to take them by mistake?

The Bread And Milk Club Takes A Walk

A YEAR ago we didn't believe it possible. But it has really come to pass. Where's that fellow who says the world stands still?

The Bread and Milk Club, as you know, celebrates Monday of each week by giving the hard-working stomach a much-needed rest. Instead of tickling the palate with all sorts of things members on this day ascetically deny themselves everything but bread and milk or crackers and milk, of which a little every two hours or so.

We were surprised at the rapid growth of membership. Honestly, we thought the average initiate would last about one week. You see, only hearty, over-fed, bilious autointoxication victims are eligible, and these poor creatures generally get worried when they can't eat like a horse. But defections were few, and indeed the charter members are still active.

Encouraged in the work of saving the race, we next proposed something positively insane. We suggested that each member in good standing should take this prescription for his liver: Two miles of oxygen three times a day.

The Club is now more wieldy, if less tractable. The ranks have thinned out something scandalous. You may lead a high liver to rest his stomach, but you can't make him walk. He is too fond of his automobile and the street cars. Legs, he maintains, were made to admire, not to use. So he resigns from the Club rather than take the new prescription.

But those members who stuck and tried the remedy are delighted. Many were unable to take the full dose prescribed, though they did take smaller doses every day, and invariably found great benefit therefrom. Husbands who followed orders have become more manageable and docile and less critical of home cooking; wives who went along to watch them have reduced from five to twenty pounds and saved considerably on war paint. Bachelors have discovered previously undreamed of virtues in nature and human nature; maids have contributed no inconsiderable share toward the success of the nature study.

The Bread and Milk Club needed just this innovation to save it from taking itself seriously.

AMERICA UNIVERSITIES—MISSOURI

THE University of Missouri is the Hagenbach of American colleges. It turns out more tame tigers than any other institution in the world, not excluding Princeton.

It is located in, around and all over Columbia, Missouri, a small city which has swelled all out of shape in its efforts to hold the University. Columbia may be reached by taking the Wabash railroad to excess.

This University is the patriarch of all the territory west of the Mississippi River. It was founded in 1839, when California was a Mexican sheep ranch and when Iowa settlers were too busy dodging Indians to indulge in education. It once had a handsome main building with a portico supported by massive Ionic columns. The building burned, but the columns were left standing and are very tenderly preserved, the students being put on their honor not to remove them in their play.

These columns are a beautiful sight and serve to prove that a Greek ruin in this country is twice as interesting and impressive as a Greek building.

The state of Missouri is very liberal with its university. It gives it over a million dollars a year and many fine buildings have been built on the campus. The University competes fiercely each year with the University of Kansas for the freshman from Kansas City and when it gets a majority of these it is as pleased as if its football team had pushed the Jayhawkers all over the field in the annual football game.

The University of Missouri is noted for its School of Journalism, which was one of the first in the country. It is conducted by home talent, Walter Williams, the dean, having been a Columbia newspaper editor, but is exporting large numbers of reporters to the United States at large each year.

The University of Missouri has never caused the eastern schools to tremble in their shoes during the football season, but it has just perfected and turned loose upon the field meets of the country a high hurdler who can hop a series of three feet six inch fences faster than anyone else in the world. This accounts for the large and enthusiastic attendance of Missouri alumni at the last western intercollegiate field meet.

Views Of The Press

Concerning Word "None"

IF THE metropolitan newspapers which insist on their writers always using "none" with a singular verb, knew a little more about the English language, they'd get hep to the fact that the word "none" is both singular and plural. "None are" was good English long before the scholarly editors of the King James translation of the Bible wrote "none of these things move me," and has been good English ever since. The trouble is that many metropolitan editors, ignorant of the history of the language and the older literature, humbly accept as law the views of prim purists who want to iron all the life out of the language and substitute starched rules of grammatical regularity for the good old idioms.

To say that "none of the victims was killed," as most big papers so scrupulously insist on doing, not only flies in the face of the natural, colloquial usage of the present day, but it isn't even good English judged by literary standards. Shakespeare would never have said it.

"None" is simply an old Anglo-Saxon word written "nan" when singular and "nane" when plural. We write both singular and plural in the same way—"none"—and good authorities use the word generally as plural. When they want to be more specific, they use "not one" for the singular, as "not one of the victims was killed."

The word "any," which many newspapers insist on using with the same silly restriction, is likewise either singular or plural. "He didn't believe that any of them was hurt" is bad English, in spite of the big papers. Steele, Thackeray or Hawthorne would have written "that any of them were hurt," or "that one of them was hurt."

These facts may be verified from any unabridged dictionary.—Owensboro Messenger.

Each Man His Trade

Q. I want to make a contract in writing with another man with reference to the manufacture of certain articles. Is there anything difficult or technical about this and could I do it myself?

A. You might or might not be able to draw a contract with reference to this matter in such a manner as to protect your interests and at the same time safeguard those of the other man. If the matter is at all intricate, or if you are in the least doubtful, it would be better to consult a lawyer and have him prepare it for you.

A. Ordinances of this character are usually held to be reasonable police regulations and therefore valid.

But They Don't

Good-by

Sometimes it seems as though Life was nothing but a series of How-do-you-dos, Glad-to-meet-yous, and Good-bys. But I think that Good-bys are the ones in which the human world seems most touched.

There are many kinds of Good-bys. But perhaps the main ones all come under these three: the Good-by to the one that you hope you will never see again; the Good-by to the one that you hope you will see again; and the Good-by to the one you know you will never see again, but whom you will always long to see again.

So that in Good-bys there are Tears as well as Smiles, Hope as well as temporary Despair.

But, in reality, to the great soul, there can be no real sorrowful Good-by. We human beings are so saturated with mere sentiment and precedent that we little appreciate seriously the aftermath of the meaning-full Good-bys.

For myself, I can never be brought to believe that this life ends all. For in these present days we have Love. And Love has no Death. So, for me, there can be no Good-by forever—no matter to whom or under what circumstance the Good-by is said.

So, why don't you join with me in making every Good-by the happiest, grandest Good-by possible?

Making A Bad Matter Worse

When my Uncle Alexander in his conduct got so queer
That the squirrels began to chatter every time that he drew near,
I consulted with a doctor, who declared: "It's mental strain;
He has all the early symptoms of a badly skidding brain.
What he needs is some distraction to clear up his cloudy thinks,
I advise a daily session on some quiet golfing links."

So I bought a bunch of niblicks, mashies, brassies and the rest
Of the curious utensils of which golfers are possessed.
And I hired a husky Scotchman, for a handsome wage per day,
To take on my wavering uncle and instruct him how to play.
And so fascinated was he with his drives and putts and swats—
In a week he left off claiming he was Mary Queen of Scots.

But, alas! his conversation, never lucid at the best,
Now excites profound misgivings in my apprehensive breast.
All he talks about is stymies, drives and brassies, greens and tees—
He's become a hopeless victim of the deadly golf disease.
And my conscience gnaws my vitals and my guilty heart is sore;
How I wish my poor old uncle was a harmless nut once more.

After That He Had a Tub Bath Every Week.

"ONCE upon a time there was a little boy who had a pet rabbit," daddy began.

"His name was Pinkie, wasn't it?" asked Jack.

"Yes, because he had very pink eyes, and the insides of his tall upstanding ears were lined with pink velvety fur. Now, the strange thing about this bunny was that he was a city pet.

"The little boy used to take him out in the park, and when he was in school his mother took Pinkie out. All the small children in the neighborhood knew her and used to call her 'the bunny lady.'

"Now, Pinkie was a very well behaved pet. He had a corner all to himself in the little boy's room, but he slept in the library nights because he used to wake people too early mornings. When it came time for the little boy to get up every day his mother used to put Pinkie in his room. Pinkie would sniff around the bed, jump up on it, scratch down the bedclothes with his strong front paws and then lick the little boy's chin till he awoke.

"Also he was very fond of the little boy's papa, and nights he would crouch by the doorsill and listen for him, just as a dog would. If a stranger passed the door he would growl, and when it was papa's step he would frisk around."

"Are bunnies so very intelligent?" asked the kiddies.

"Pinkie was, but then he had had the best of training. Once when the little boy was going to have his bath Pinkie came sniffing, sniffing around the tub. Just in fun the little boy's mother picked him up and put him in the water.

"He loved it. He dashed around the tub and flittered water over the wall, and after that he had a tub bath every week. The little boy's mother used to put blueing in the water to keep his coat white, and once she put in too much, and Pinkie turned a beautiful blue. It took a month to wear the blueing out of his coat."

"What do city bunnies eat?" asked Evelyn.

"They love a nice head of lettuce from the grocer and young clover that can be found in the parks, and every day Pinkie ate a basketful of plantain leaves. Every morning the little boy's mother used to go to the park and pick a fresh lot for him to eat during the night. This kept him quiet."

"What finally became of him?" asked Jack.

"Sad to tell, a man accidentally kicked Bunny in one of his beautiful pink eyes, which got so sore he had to be put out of his pain. But he lived a good old age for a bunny—six years," said daddy.

Household Hints--

BREADS, BUNS, BISCUIT.

Soft Gingerbread—Three-fourths cup sugar, half cup butter, one cup molasses, one teaspoon each cloves, cinnamon and ginger, two scant teaspoons soda dissolved in one cup boiling water, two and one-half cups flour (three cups if needed). Add two well beaten eggs the last thing before baking.

Eggless Gingerbread—Half cup Orleans molasses, half cup granulated sugar, one tablespoon melted lard, one teaspoon ginger, one heaping teaspoon soda in one cup boiling water; add flour enough to make thin batter; put all together before mixing; mix well.

Cornbread—One egg, half cup sugar, half teaspoon salt, one tablespoon butter, one and one-half cups sweet milk, two cups flour, one cup cornmeal, two teaspoons baking powder.

Nut Bread—One cup granulated sugar, one egg, three and one-half cups flour, three heaping teaspoons baking powder, one cup or one-fourth pound pecans (ground), one pinch salt, one cup milk. Beat egg, add milk; sift dry ingredients three times; mix with eggs and milk; put in pans and let rise half hour. Bake forty-five minutes. Use empty one-pound baking powder cans to bake this bread in and they turn out fine, making dainty sandwiches for afternoon luncheon, or can be served plain.

Buns—One cup yeast, one cup water, one tablespoon lard, two tablespoons sugar, one teaspoon salt, enough flour to make a nice batter. Beat thoroughly, set to rise until light; when light add enough flour to make a soft dough, let rise again, then mold into rolls, set to rise and when light bake thirty minutes. This will make twenty rolls.

Quick Buns—One quart flour, three teaspoons baking powder, one-half cup granulated sugar, one-half teaspoon each of salt and cinnamon. Sift all together three times. Rub in two teaspoons lard (not melted). Add one beaten egg and sweet milk enough to make like biscuit dough. Bake same as biscuits.

Buns—When baking bread, before mixing bread in the morning save out one quart of the sponge. Thicken this and let rise until light, then add two-thirds cup sugar and lard size of a large egg; mix into a dough not quite as stiff as for bread, let rise a while, then work down; let rise again and make into cakes about size of an egg, then mash each cake flat with the hand and place in greased pans (not touching). Let rise again until light, then bake from twelve to fifteen minutes, or until a light brown, in a hot oven. They require a hotter oven than for bread, as they should bake quickly.

"Sunny Smile" Biscuit—One egg, one-half cup sugar and a little nutmeg, mix together; two and one-half cups sifted flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one cup milk. Mix flour and milk alternately with first mixture and bake in gem pans in moderate oven. Makes about fifteen.

Quick Biscuit—Two heaping cups flour, two heaping teaspoons baking powder, half teaspoon salt, one heaping tablespoon lard and one cup cold water. Bake in hot oven.

Drop Biscuit—Three and one-half cups flour, one heaping tablespoon lard, two teaspoons cream of tartar, one teaspoon soda, one pint sweet milk, salt to taste. Mix well with spoon and drop on greased pans. These biscuit are easily made and very delicious served warm.

To Freshen Cold Biscuit—Dip cold biscuit in cold water and place them in a tin or thick paper sack in a hot oven long enough to become heated thoroughly. They will be as good as when freshly baked.

Parker House Rolls—One pint scalded milk. Let cool and add two tablespoons each of sugar, lard and yeast; a little salt. In winter mix in batter over night and in morning knead, set to rise again and at noon roll out very thin. Cut in large rounds, put on a piece of butter, lay the dough over and let rise again; bake. In summer mix early in the morning instead of at night.

Breakfast Muffins—Two cups flour, two eggs, one cup milk (sweet), two teaspoons baking powder, pinch of salt; put into a hot muffin pan, and bake.

Corn Meal Muffins—Three-fourths cup corn meal, one and one-half cups flour, one teaspoon baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, two tablespoons melted butter, one egg, one cup milk. Mix and sift dry materials, add milk gradually, egg well beaten and melted butter. Bake twenty-five minutes in buttered gem pans. This recipe makes twelve muffins.

CHAPTER XI.

A Visit From Father.

DURING this trying month old Cyrus Martin, the soap king, had sat in his library in Fifth avenue, or in his swivel chair at his office, and wondered how things were going with the boy anyway. From such information as reached him, he was not so encouraged as he would have liked to be. A month was not long enough to tell, of course, in the normal course of things, but that fool advertising made another matter of it. Those huge billboards and electric signs and balloons and sandwich men—piffle all of it, but Martin knew what such things cost, and was sure that Rodney's company could not possibly stand it. He was worried. And he was annoyed too. These abominable sandwich men; he had had one set of them arrested that afternoon on the avenue. He couldn't stand it. People might know who were in this ridiculous 13 Soap company, and he should be well laughed at.

Another and contradictory thing was the rumor he had heard downtown yesterday that the Andover Soap people were backing Rodney's company, going to build a plant for them. In fact, putting one thing and another together, he decided he would drop down and give the boy a call at his office. It wouldn't be bad to see him again, and Mary Grayson too. So he presented himself at the new soap company's office, on Broadway, and was kept waiting for his pains. A Miss Burke took in his name, and he guessed that it caused some excitement, for he could hear Rodney's voice and another chatting inside while he cooled his heels.

When he was at last ushered in the place looked like a real office, on the whole, and there at a desk sat Rodney, talking through the telephone. His father caught something about "not considering it," and "not having any stock for sale"—"quite out of the question," et cetera, et cetera, as he took a chair.

"Well, well," thought Mr. Martin, rather pleased and proud. "What's this?"

Rodney in a moment dropped the telephone and espied his father.

"Why, hello, father!" he greeted him genially.

"Hello, son!" said Mr. Martin. He observed with astonishment that Rodney was very busy filing papers, opening and closing drawers and that every now and then he signed a typewritten letter viciously with a rubber stamp.

"Sit down, won't you?" said Rodney presently. "I'll be with you in just a moment."

"Thanks," said his father dryly.

"Have a cigar?" said Rodney, handing the old gentleman a box in an absentminded way.

"Thanks," said Mr. Martin, biting off the end and lighting it at the match which Rodney held for him. Rodney lighted one too.

"Surprised to see me, I suppose?" said his father presently.

"Not a bit," said Rodney, flourishing a contract and signing it. Mr. Martin had some curiosity to see what it could be, this thing which really looked like a contract, but his son turned it upside down and blotted it ostentatiously on his desk pad.

"There, that's done," he added. "Now, father, what can I do for you?"

"Well, my boy," said Mr. Martin, "I just dropped in for a social call. The fact is I've rather missed you."

"I've missed you, too, father," said Rodney.

"Thought I'd have a look in and find out how things were going," said Mr. Martin abruptly.

"Fine—fine!" said Rodney. "Everything breezing right along. Of course I'm always glad to see you," he added, pushing the buzzer, "but right now, father, I'm pretty busy, so you'll excuse me if"—

He got very busy indeed again with his papers.

"Well, if you can spare the time I'd like a little business talk with you, Rodney," said Mr. Martin, with a certain sarcasm.

"Certainly, in just a minute," said Rodney, still preoccupied with his papers, but pricking up his ears.

Ambrose Peale, coming in, stopped suddenly when he saw who their visitor was. Rodney looked up at him.

"That's all right; come right in," he said. "Father, you remember Mr. Peale? Peale, my father"—

"Indeed, yes, I recall very well," began Peale effusively.

Mr. Martin gruffly cut him off.

"How are you?" he said.

"A bit tired," said Peale, sitting down comfortably; "just back from Buffalo, where we're conducting a big campaign."

"Is that so?" said Martin, senior, crustily.

"Perhaps you've heard about it?" inquired Rodney, looking at his father.

"No. Why should I hear about it?" said that gentleman for Peale's benefit especially.

"I don't know," said Peale helplessly.

"You see, Mr. Peale handles all our advertising, and perhaps"—began Rodney.

"Oh, he does, does he?" said Mr. Martin dangerously. "Then it is to him I should address myself."

"Either or both of us," chirped Rodney.

"Then both of you listen to me," Martin began. "You've got to cut out this nonsense you call advertising"—

"What nonsense?" asked Rodney.

"Yes, what?" echoed Peale weakly.

"This morning there was a parade of sandwich men in front of my house for two hours," Mr. Martin went on indignantly. "I had to have them arrested. I got to the office to find another bunch. It annoys me."

"I'm sorry, father," said Rodney.

"You're trying to make a fool of me," said his father. "I open a letter. It's a circular for 13 Soap. I open my newspaper; you have a page ad. I look out of the window; there's a billboard. I take a train; the porter apologizes because he's all out of 13 Soap."

"Well, of course, all that proves how wonderful our publicity is," said Rodney bravely.

"You're a grand young bluff, my son," said Martin grimly.

"Why, father, what do you mean?"

"I'll tell you exactly what I mean. I've let you ramble on to see just how far you would go, but you've been spending a lot of money advertising, hoping that by annoying me I'd buy out your business to get rid of you. Well, I'm not going to. Now what have you got to say to that?"

"Nothing—absolutely nothing," said Peale, taking heart again, and Rodney resumed quickly:

"But I have a lot to say. We may not have a big business now, but we have got a trademark—the catchiest trademark ever invented for soap. We're a growing concern. Just because our advertising annoys you you mustn't think it's valueless. Why, it's so good that capital is chasing us. Our money is practically unlimited. Is that a fair statement, Peale?"

Rodney Lighted One Too.

"Very fair, very fair, indeed," agreed Peale, dazed at Rodney's daring.

"Bluff, son, bluff," Mr. Martin repeated.

"Not at all," protested Rodney, "and since you're so skeptical, father, I don't mind letting you see the plans for our new factory. These are the offices. Here is the power house, and this is my office, and here is Mr. Peale's"—

"Aren't you going to make any soap? Who's putting up the money?"

"Now, father," said Rodney reprovingly, "you cannot expect me to divulge a business secret to you, a rival manufacturer."

"Oh, why not tell him. He is your father," said Peale nobly.

"Well, Peale, if you really think it's wise," said Rodney.

"Oh, yes, I think it's quite wise," said Peale.

"It's the Andover Soap people," declared Rodney boldly.

Mr. Martin was at once impressed and annoyed.

"The Andover Soap people," he repeated, flicking the ash from his cigar.

"Yes, the Andover Soap people," echoed Peale, rubbing it in.

"You mean John Clark?" asked Mr. Martin, getting out of his chair.

"Yes," said Rodney.

"Absolutely," said Peale.

Mr. Martin turned and reflectively walked up and down. Peale very obviously picked up a push button and pushed the buzzer twice. There was a pause, and then in a moment Ellery Clark stuck his head through a door on the left. Mr. Martin did not know it, but this was all by prearrangement with Ellery. Peale, when he had come in just now, was fresh from tutoring Ellery in a little speech. The idea was to impress Mr. Martin overpoweringly on the subject of the Clark family's connection with the new factory. But Ambrose was, to tell the truth, a little nervous as to Ellery's ability to overpower the soap magnate. Ellery's first idea, too, seemed to be of bolting.

"Oh, excuse me. I didn't know your father was here," he began politely.

"That's all right, Ellery," said Rodney very genially.

"Yes, come right in," said Peale.

Ellery came in.

"How do you do, Mr. Martin?" he inquired.

"How are you, Ellery?" Mr. Martin responded gruffly.

He didn't like all this, but what was the matter with Ellery?

"Well, I really can't wait any longer," began that youth. "The party downstairs in the taxi—you follow me?"

"Yes, Ellery, you told us that," said Peale, shutting him off.

"Well, goodby, then," said Ellery.

"Was that all you came in to say?" Rodney took him up hastily, looking at Peale, and Peale added sharply:

"Yes. Have you decided about that deal?"

Ellery's mouth fell open, and a look came over his face as of one remembering a lesson.

"Oh, of course. If you'll keep it open until Monday I'll have the money for you then," he said.

"But we can't wait till Monday," said Rodney.

"But Mr. Peale told me"— Ellery answered, puzzled.

Peale came quickly to his rescue.

"We'll see what we can do, but just now, Ellery, we're very much occupied," he said, taking him by the arm and starting toward the door.

"Oh, just a minute," said Rodney. "You'd better give your father back the plans—say they're quite satisfactory."

"What plans?" queried Ellery helplessly.

"Oh, didn't he tell you about them?" Peale put in. "Perhaps after all, Rodney, I'd better give them to Mr. Clark myself. You remember I have an appointment with him today?"

"Oh, yes, it was today, wasn't it?" said Rodney.

"But father's out of town," Ellery protested.

"I know he is. Otherwise I could have kept the appointment," said Peale.

"We'll give you a definite answer tomorrow," added Rodney.

"But I don't understand," Ellery persisted. "Really, now, you say one thing, and Mr. Peale came in and"—

But already Peale was leading Ellery gently and firmly to the door.

"We'll have to see you later in the afternoon, Ellery," he said politely.

"But what did you want me to come in for?" quavered Ellery.

"Don't you see?" said Peale.

"No."

"That's too bad. Well, goodby, Ellery."

"I say, I do find business very confusing. I prefer the countess," murmured Ellery, going out.

"Ellery talks too much," said Rodney when Peale came back.

"He is very indiscreet," Peale agreed. "If it had been anybody but your father he'd have given our whole plan away."

"What's he doing here—acting for his father?" inquired Mr. Martin. His ideas of Ellery were undergoing a change.

"Absolutely," said Peale.

"You're not going to take him in," said Mr. Martin, "that pinhead? Why, he didn't even seem to know what he was trying to get at."

"No, he didn't, did he?" agreed Peale.

"But, after all, he does represent Andover soap," said Rodney.

"Great soap, Andover—ninety-nine and fifty-seven hundredths per cent pure," said Peale.

Mr. Martin grunted. There was something funny here, some kind of play acting, though he couldn't quite make out what it was. Old Clark's Ellery was a fool; you could see that with your eyes shut. Yet a fool made a good go-between sometimes, and you never could tell what John Clark would be up to. Ellery sounded for all the world as if he were trying to recite some piece that Rodney and that fellow Peale had taught him. And yet what did he happen to be doing there in the 13 Soap company's offices? That couldn't have been prearranged. John Clark was up to anything.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Everybody who was anybody in Fairport had received a big, beautifully engraved announcement of the Jaynes house-warming reception. The gold-beveled edges gleamed a quarter of an inch wide. Dick said he had never seen any firm's opening so extensively advertised. On the eventful night the scent of moth balls floated out of all the principal houses, and while the ladies viewed with pride the results of their refurbishing of evening gowns, the men wriggled into dress collars.

The Jaynes castle blazed with electricity.

"By George," called Parsons, who led the way, "if they haven't got the turret coping outlined with electric lights. Now, that's going some!"

"And hear those crashing bands! Must be two regimental aggregations from Leavenworth."

"No," answered the doctor, "it's an orchestra and caterer from Kansas City. Yes, the caterer has something to do with it; it's his pans you took for cymbals and instruments of percussion."

Out of the [illegible] came [illegible] enthusiasmed music with shouts of people trying to talk above it, together with an overpowering perfume of flowers and cologne. A red carpet led from the door to the street. The colors were striking, to say the least. The Jayneses had made the most of the carved reception hall by loading it with red plush furniture, brass jars, bronze heads, and a blaze of purple and gold flowers. A huge butler in a dress suit bowed and announced everybody at the door.

"Fairport has never seen the beat of this," whispered Jo Parsons. "Those purple things are orchids, I suppose; they're like nothing else under the sun.

The Jayneses, the father and mother and son and older daughter, stood in line to greet Fairport society. Mr. Jaynes's store dress-tie had slipped its moorings and hung below his collar button; his collar was a limp rag, and he shifted from one patent leather boot to the other. His broad red face was streaming.

"Hot—O my!" he called out to Dick as he passed in line. "Wish we could slip out back of the garage and get out of these things and smoke."

Dick was not so overawed by the ladies before him that he failed to respond with a cheerful nod and grin. Mr. Jaynes's wife and daughter were so decollete that all the resident ladies stood about with their mouths slightly open and expressions of doubt and concern on their faces. The swathings of silk were extreme in cut and very youthful indeed. Both shook hands mincingly high in air and smiled sugary smiles. The son, in a flowered waistcoat and with hair plastered back on his head, copied smile and handshake accurately.

"So good of you to come," said the daughter.

Mrs. Jaynes proceeded to smooth over her husband's breach of propriety. "Mr. J. didn't want so much of an affair, but it isn't much, truly. We've just a little cold collision served in the con-servy-tware, if you will kindly step across the next two rooms. The flowers are exquisite, aren't they?"

"What did she mean about the accident?" inquired Dick when they were safely out of range and the sugary smiles had been turned on the next arrivals.

"Sh!" cautioned Nell. "It's something to eat—collation, isn't it?"

"Ah, lead me to it," said the doctor eagerly.

But they waited a while to watch. Until the reception broke up, Mrs. Jaynes was observed to look often toward the front doors in nervous expectancy.

"What's she after?" inquired Parsons.

"I know," Dick asserted. "The Scotts and Frazees haven't come, and they're the only people worth while in this burg."

Later, in the conservatory, Miss Jaynes, very coy and charming under blonde ringlets, ladled the punch, and erect and solemn serving men carried glasses of ices and cake to those who sat in attitudes of expectation. In one corner sulked a pretty, dark little girl of about fourteen. "The other daughter," explained Nell. Young Jaynes wandered about vapidly.

"Wish he'd upset the punch bowl or something," said the doctor unkindly. But after they had waited some time and he hadn't, they all went home, much edified by their adventures.

AMERICAN FOREIGN TRADE SHOWS GAIN

First Time in History Exports Exceeded $3,000,000 in Value for 12 Months.

Washington, September 24.—Figures made public Tuesday by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce, show that for the first time in the nation's history exports exceeded $3,000,000,000 in value for a 12-month period. For the 12 months ending with August 31, 1915, exports from the United States aggregated $3,035,033,280, against $2,280,185,791 in a like period one year ago. Twelve months' imports of merchandise totaled $1,669,698,934, compared with $1,906,657,515 last year.

The month of August showed exports valued at $261,975,771, against $110,367,494 in August, 1914, an increase of $151,608,277, or 137 per cent. August imports totaled $141,729,638, against $129,767,890 in August, 1914, a gain of $11,961,748, or 9 per cent. Thus, August trade this year shows an export balance of $120,246,133 as compared with an import balance in August, 1914, of $19,400,396, a favorable change of $139,646,529.

Of the August imports, 70 per cent. entered free of duty, against 62 per cent. in August last year.

Our international gold movements during the first year since the outbreak of the European war included imports of gold, $244,004,045, against $59,312,328 in a like period one year ago; exports of gold, $97,749,270, against $153,984,944 a year earlier.

The 12 months ending with August 31, 1915, showed an excess of exports over imports of merchandise amounting to $1,365,334,346, compared with $373,528,276 in a like period one year ago and $711,755,672 in a like period two years ago. It also recorded a net inward gold movement of $146,254,775, compared with a net outward gold movement of $94,672,616 in 1913-14 and a net outward movement of $4,315,591 in 1912-13.

The aggregate foreign commerce of the United States in the year ending with August, 1915, the first year of the European war, was, including merchandise, gold and silver, $5,129,715,002, against $4,480,304,760 in the year immediately preceding the war. The net increase of $649,410,242 for the year included a gain of $754,847,489 in exports of merchandise and of $189,749,922 in imports of gold and silver, and a decrease of $236,958,581 in imports of merchandise and of $58,228,588 in exports of gold and silver.

NEW YORK AMUSEMENTS

At the Strand Theatre Donald Brian will be seen next week for the first time as a moving picture star in "The Voice in the Fog," a photodramatization of the novel by the same name, written by Harold MacGrath, author of "The Goose Girl" and "The Puppet Crown." "The Voice in the Fog" was produced by Jesse L. Lasky, who has given the star an excellent supporting cast.

Other film attractions on the bill are some beautiful and interesting travel and educational studies—the Topical Review, containing the latest news pictures from this country and abroad, a newly arrived lot of interesting and realistic European war pictures, and a new comedy, which is said to be strictly original and extremely funny.

The musical program, which is an important factor in the Strand entertainments, is an exceptionally attractive one. The soloists are: Martha De Lachmann, soprano; Alfred De Manby, late baritone with the Royal Opera, Covent Garden, London, and Autumn Hall, the gifted violinist. The large concert orchestra will play incidental music to the subjects shown on the screen and also render symphonic concert numbers under the able direction of Carl Edouarde.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

New Orleans—Mother Superior Catherine L. Drexel, daughter of Francis Drexel, one of the wealthiet bankers of Philadelphia, is superintending the final touches of the Southern University of New Orleans, which will be opened on Monday to colored students. Mother Drexel, who gave up her immense fortune to church work, and is devoting her talents to education and uplift, has been directing laborers and mapping out the plans for the university opening. For twenty-seven years she has labored with the poorest of the poor, all she possesses having been given to the cause of Indian and Negro education. The new university is another monument to the philanthropy which she bestowed.

Chicago—The German-American socialists have arranged for a speaking tour of the United States by Alexandra Kollentay, one of the leading women of the International Socialist movement. She is a Russian, of noble family, but has been exiled because of her views. She was arrested in Berlin about a year ago, and then went to the Scandanavian countries, where she has been living since. She speaks many languages, and is said to be a wonderful woman.

LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN MONUMENT

Chattanooga, Tenn., Sept. 24.—Business as well as pleasure will be the portion of the Ohio General Assembly when it reaches Lookout Mountain today. The Ohio lawmakers will examine the monuments erecteed here by New York, Iowa and Illinois and decide how much money the State of Ohio should spend for a battlefield monument to its hero dead. Ohio has appropriated $20,000 for a monument here, but the solons believe such a small memorial would not compare favorably with the others.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

All class elections were scheduled to be held during the long assembly period yesterday, but the time was too short to permit the carrying out of the intended program. No class elected its full list of officers and nominations were only considered. As a result of the delay senior and junior class meetings will be held this afternoon at the close of school. The sophomore and freshmen classes will also hold meetings.

Le Roy Apgar, captain of next year's Red and Blue baseball outfit, has been induced to try his hand at football. According to reports "Box" is a success in this line of sport, but not so good as he is on the diamond.

"Boom The Oracle" is now the seniors' slogan.

Herbert Peacock, who has been elected senior class president, has been president of the class when its members were juniors and when they were sophomores. "Herb," as he is generally called, is the right man for the honor, having had plenty of experience. Peacock received forty-seven votes and Richmond Ritterbusch twenty-eight. The election came as a result of a second ballot. Among those nominated for this office were: Townsend Dickerson, Richmond Ritterbusch, Herbert Peacock, William Wheelan and William Victorson. All of these, with the exception of Ritterbusch and Peacock, were eliminated by the first ballot.

When the competition for the Princeton cup begins at the Country Club, tomorrow morning, P. H. S. will have a very formidable band of aspirants to the title on hand. All four courts will be kept in action and many, perhaps, all but the finalists will be eliminated from the competition. Selected to represent the Red and Blue are Fred Smith, Phil Mills, Eustace Eggie, Bob Vail, Burnham Carter, Rodman Parvin, Peter McDonough, S. Wright McAneny, Robert McDowell, Alan Stevenson, Everett Case and Donald Henwood. Registration will close today with either Burnham Carter or Rodman Parvin.

Football practice on Parker Field is still in vogue and the stiff-jointed ones have begun to limber up.

Swimming is very popular these days, candidates for the proposed team exhibiting their prowess daily.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

Charming Blanche Sweet will be the principal attraction at the U. S. Astor Theatre this afternoon and evening in the film produced by the Jesse L. Lasky Film Company, "Stolen Goods," a drama of five acts. This picture contains thrills by the yard and shows Miss Sweet at her best in every scene. "Stolen Goods" is interesting. It is one of those screen plays that the audience follows with rapt interest until the end for thrilling incidents crop up with great frequency.

Frank Sheridan will make his photo-dramatic debut in Plainfield tomorrow afternoon and evening in "The Money Master," produced by the Kleine Picture Company.

This play affords such an excellent example of what is coming to be recognized truth among motion picture directors and followers that it might well serve as a text. The net result is thus one of artistic satisfaction if the director be a capable one. Such a film is "The Money Master."

MARTINE SPEAKS AT HARVEST HOME

United States Senator and S. S. Swackhamer Address Gathering at Stirling.

MUSIC IS A FEATURE

Plainfielder Discourses on War and Democratic Assembly Candidate Talks About Temperance, Local Option and Suffrage.

The annual harvest home of the Stirling Presbyterian church was held last night in the historic church edifice, and was attended by a number of Plainfielders, who heard a fine concert by the Dutch Arms Band, of Trinity Reformed church, this city, and stirring addresses by United States Senator James E. Martine and Assembly candidate Samuel S. Swackhammer. The harvest home was a huge success and the women of the church, under whose auspices it was given, were greatly pleased at the support given the affair, especially by people from surrounding towns.

The "feed" was a genuine country dinner, with chicken, ham, vegetables of the choicest, fresh from the gardens, pies of all kinds made by experienced country cooks that melted in the mouth, and all the "fixin's" that go with such a repast.

After the eatables had been put out of the way, the speechmaking came. Senator Martine was in his usual jovial mood and discussed at some length the attitude of the people of the United States to war. He declared that this country does not want war. He carried his hearers in imagination all the way from Washington to the Hawaiian Islands, where he went on a trip last spring, and said that there was not a person along that entire route who wanted war.

Mr. Swackhammer took temperance, local option and woman suffrage for the subject of his address, and, being an ardent supporter of all three, dilated upon them at length. Local option is one of the planks in the platform which he espouses in the New Jersey campaign this fall, while another plank in his platform is suffrage. That he had struck a responsive note in his reference to woman suffrage was evident by the loud applause which greeted his allusion to the great question.

Touching upon the great world war, Mr. Swackhammer pleaded for the evangelization of the world, the only remedial measure, he said, which would really prevent war.

The Dutch Arms Band played from about 8 o'clock until after 11. The members were transported to Stirling and back in the new auto bus of the Suburban Transit Company.

RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES TO DEBATE LIQUOR QUESTION

Those who hear the debate in the First Baptist church next Tuesday night, September 28, will hear both sides of the liquor question discussed by men who are well qualified to handle the subject. "John Carlisle," a lawyer and candidate for the State Senate, will have a heated discussion with "Alexander Pierpont," a wealthy business man and a prominent church official.

The debate has been arranged by the Federation of Men's Bible classes and the Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union. A silver offering will be taken.

APPEAL FOR DONATIONS.

The Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild will be pleased to receive donations of flowers, fruit, vegetables, delicacies and food suitable for the sick Monday afternoon from 4 to 6, and Tuesday morning from 9 to 10:30 in the rooms of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, 10 Madison avenue, Babcock building. Netherwood residents may send donations to Miss Miller, 919 East Seventh street, and a boy will call for same Monday afternoon. Persons having no way of sending may notify Joseph M. Harper, 237 East Sixth street, telephone 758-W, and a messenger will call for same.

Important Notice to Delinquent Taxpayers.

Notice is hereby given that on Monday, September 27, 1915, according to law, I shall publish in the Plainfield Daily Press and Courier-News all 1914 taxes and assessments confirmed prior to said date. Check or money must be in my hands before 11 o'clock a. m. on said date. This notice is not required by law, but is just a reminder.

SIGMA GAMMA KAPPA ENTERTAIN FRESHMEN

Pleasing Affair is Given at the Young Women's Christian Association Rooms.

The girls of the freshmen class, of North Plainfield High School, spent a very enjoyable evening with the Sigma Gamma Kappa at the Young Women's Christian Association last night. There was a novel form of entertainment arranged by the three delegates who were sent to Altamont. They were the Misses Katherine Giddings and Selena and Florence Cornwell.

The guests represented books, such as "The Old Curiosity Shop," "The Man On the Box," "The Five Little Peppers," and others. Much fun was derived from guessing the names of the books. [illegible] freshmen class, [illegible] for guessing the most.

"The Homely Ladies' Journal" was acted out in pantomime. Miss Katherine Giddings, a graduate of the class of 1915 at the N. P. H. S., acted as coach. The journal consisted of advertisements, a story entitled, "Firelight Reveries," written by Miss Giddings, also fashion and beauty hints.

The committee in charge of the affair was: Refreshments, Misses Margaret Smith, Elsie Kurzhals, and Marion Emmons; invitation, Misses Agnes Griffiths, Marion Emmons and Elsie Kurzhals; entertainment, Misses Katherine Giddings, Selena and Florence Cornwell.

Mrs. F. W. Goddard, the leader of the club, gave a talk on the purpose and work. Refreshments were served about 9:30, after which the guests departed for home, all declaring they had spent a very enjoyable evening. Much credit is due the girls who took part in the different performances.

Y. W. C. A. PLANNING FOR ACTIVE SEASON

All Classes to Be Resumed at the Association October Eleventh.

Extensive preparations are being made at the Young Women's Christian Association for the fall and winter activities, and October 11 will see the opening of all classes at the building on East Front street. Registration in the various departments may be made at any time previous to that date.

The classes in handcraft promise to be the most attractive, and those desiring to enter should enroll at once. Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery's book, "The King's Highway," will be the subject matter for one very interesting course. Later in the season Mrs. Montgomery will give a series of lectures on her book, under the auspices of the association.

The new physical director, Miss Winifred E. Mann, has taken up her work, and it is expected that the enrollment in this department will be larger than ever before. Miss Mann is a graduate of the New Haven Normal School of Gymnastics and also took the summer course for physical directors at the National Training School, New York City, in 1913. She has been physical director at the Higbee School, Memphis, Tenn., and was also in charge of similar work in one of the Brooklyn public schools. Miss Mann comes with high recommendation from the National Board of the Y. W. C. A. and has made excellent progress in her previous work. She will be at the association Monday, Tuesday and Friday afternoons and every evening except Thursday, to meet all former pupils and talk with any one interested in gymnasium work. The work offered consists of Swedish gymnastics, exercises with wands, bar-bells, dumb-bells and Indian clubs. Artistic gymnastics, fancy steps, apparatus work, basketball and folk dancing are also pleasant features of the course.

Invitations for the fall rally on October 7 at 8 o'clock have gone out and it is hoped that a very large representation of the membership will be present to meet Miss Lean Farrar, from Association headquarters, who will make the address.

RECEPTION MARKS OPENING OF SCHOOL

Miss Hartridge Provides Delightful Entertainment for Many Guests.

A fine entertainment was given yesterday afternoon by Miss Hartridge for the friends of The Hartridge School. The reception was held in the Auditorium, which was decorated entirely in yellow, with masses of gay zinnias and marigolds exquisitely arranged. The electric lights were shaded with amber and amber colored candles and lamps were placed throughout the hall.

Miss Hartridge spoke for a few minutes on the work of the school during the past twelve years, on its standard of scholarship, its purpose and plan as a whole, and on its relation to modern movements in education. Miss Williamson, who received with Miss Hartridge as the guest of honor, then gave a great deal of pleasure by her beautiful playing, and later the guests had an opportunity to become acquainted with the staff of teachers who assisted Miss Hartridge by acting as hostesses. Miss Dorothy Burke, Miss Edith Mellick, Miss Lillian King, Miss Helen Irons, Miss Katharine Browne, Miss Helen Terry and the Misses Mary and Lillian Fiske served the refreshments.

The school will be re-opened Monday when the resident girls arrive at Oakwood. Tuesday class work begins.

Mis Hartridges goes to Smith College early in October for a conference on the subject of standards and the relations of secondary schools to the colleges. Later she will be among the guests of honor at the Fiftieth Anniversary of Vassar College, where she has been asked to address the student body on The Relations of the College and the City.

SCHOOL BOYS ARE GUESTS OF Y. M. C. A.

Event Marks the Formal Opening of Boys' Department of the Association.

Boys from the various schools of the city and borough were guests of the Y. M. C. A. today, the occasion being the formal opening of the boys' department, in charge of the new boys' secretary, Frederick S. Lynn. About thirty-five non-members took advantage of the invitation of the association to participate in all the activities of the association as its guests, and they availed themselves of the opportunity in a way that was very gratifying to Mr. Lynn and other association officials.

The number of boys present today was not as large as the attendance at the previous "open house" two autumns ago, but the boys today were granted privileges that were not given them on that occasion. Then the non-members were invited to be present at the Y. M. C. A. in the guise of spectators, and were permitted to be passive onlookers at their more fortunate brethren, the members. But today everything that the members had, the guests were free to enjoy, from the games and books in the reading room, the pool table and shuffleboard, to the swimming pool.

The boys began arriving at 9 o'clock and stayed until noon. Mr. Lynn was early on the job and some time during the morning had a personal word to say to each boy present. It was not hard to get the boys interested in the games, especially the pool table and the shuffleboard. Physical Director Robert L. Meermans assisted Mr. Lynn in greeting the boys and seeing that they had a good time. The morning closed with a moving picture depicting a day in a Y. M. C. A. camp.

At the next meeting of the West End Civic Association, which will be held Friday, October 8, the members will be invited to bring their wives, daughters and sweethearts, and a discussion of the establishing of a community center for West End will be the principal business.

The executive committee of the league met last night at the residence of John J. Carroll, on West Fifth street. That will be held on the third anniversary of the founding of the league and a special program is to be arranged.

STUDENT DIES IN PRINCETON RUSH

Heart Fails Him in Annual Excitement of Entering Class.

Princeton, Sept. 25.—In the annual rush between the sophomores and freshmen of Princeton University held yesterday in front of the Princeton gymnasium, Stockton Wells, of Madison, a member of the entering class, died of heart failure.

Wells lost consciousness soon after the start of the rush, which lasted less than three minutes, and immediately was attended by five physicians. Restoratives were applied and artificial respiration was continued for an hour and three-quarters. It was thought at first that an injury had caused Wells to lose consciousness, but a careful examination disclosed no signs of an injury except a slight abrasion over the hip.

The student's mother, Mrs. C. W. Wells, came to Princeton at once. It was learned that Wells always had been subject to heart attacks as the result of illness.

PATRIOTIC SOCIETY TO HOLD DISTRICT MEETING

The Union County District Meeting of the P. O. of A. will be held on Monday night, at 8 p. m., in the rooms of Camp 60, P. O. of A., in the Jr. O. U. A. M. Hall, on Broad street, Elizabeth. The meeting will be a joint gathering between Camp 60, of Elizabeth, and Camp 1, of Plainfield, and Mrs. Andrew McDowell, president of the local branch, will preside at the meeting. All members desiring to go are requested to meet at the Watchung avenue trolley station in time to take the 6:45 car.

Miss Hannah Meyers, national vice-president, of Jersey City, will be present at the meeting, as well as several other officers. This meeting is arranged previous to the national session, which will be held on October 19 and 20, inclusive, in New York City. Mrs. Helen Freeman, of Camp 1, is the delegate chosen to attend the New York session. An invitation was extended to Camp 67, of Dunellen, to attend the union meeting.

PRESENT A GAVEL TO LYDIA CHAPTER, O. E. S.

The semi-monthly meeting of Lydia Chapter was held in the rooms of the order in the Babcock Building last night, a large number of members attending. One new member was initiated into the chapter and routine business was transacted. It was decided to hold a cake sale on Friday, October 15, at the residence of Mrs. Frank Wyncoop, of Dunellen. A feature of the meeting last night was the presentation of a gavel to the chapter, made from a beam of the old Masonic Temple, which was formerly in the Gloeckler Building at Front and Somerset streets. Guy D. Peck presented the gavel to Mrs. Lulu Krinic for the chapter. A banquet and social time followed the meeting last night.

MUNICIPAL DANCE.

The Washington School municipal dance will be given in the Washington school tonight, beginning at 8 o'clock. The committee in charge of the affair has secured an excellent orchestra and fine music is assured all. A nominal fee is charged to defray the expense of this music. The dance is open to the public.

Rev. Dr. Everett T. Tomlinson will preach at the Congregational church tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock.

AUTOISTS ESCAPE FROM BURNING CAR

Mr. and Mrs. Painter Have Lively Experience When Machine is Destroyed.

While taking in a supply of gasoline in front of the garage of the Martin Automobile Company on Park avenue, about 10 o'clock last night, an automobile belonging to W. H. Painter, of Stirling, caught fire. Mr. Painter's hands were scorched and a heavy coat which his wife wore caught fire, but neither was burned seriously. The car was so badly damaged, however, before the blaze could be extinguished by the fire department, which was called to the scene, that it had to be left in a local garage for repairs.

The car, a seven-passenger Chalmers, was stopped at the curb in front of the garage and it is said gasoline was pumped into the tank with the side oil lamps burning. The vapor from the gasoline came in contact with the flame in one of the oil lamps and an explosion occurred. An alarm of fire was turned in from box 13 and the fire department responded, soon extinguishing the blaze with the chemical, but in the meantime the front of the machine, hood and dash, were badly burned and the engine was put out of commission. The car was valued at $3,500, and the damage done was estimated at about $200.

JAIL SENTENCE FOR WILLIAM HEATH

Fifteen Days Imposed by Judge Connolly on $100,000 Heir.

Elizabeth, Sept. 25.—Penniless and working for a small salary as a draftsman, William Heath, of Plainfield, a youth who squandered $100,000 left him by his grandmother, will have to spend fifteen days in the county jail for contempt of court. He was sentenced yesterday by Judge James C. Connolly, after counsel for Walley Donato, a plaintiff against him, charged that he had not satisfied a judgment of $211.97 found against him for non-payment of a bill presented by Donato for carpenter work on Heath's home.

JUDGE SHOWS ITALIANS THAT TRUTHFULNESS PAYS

That truthfulness is the best policy was impressed on four Italian prisoners in the city police court this morning when arraigned on the complaint of Patrolman John Neylon, who charged them with gambling in the Netherwood section last Sunday afternoon. Because they came into court and admitted their culpability Judge DeMeza dealt leniently with them and imposed fines of $2 each in the place of heavy sentences which he had determined to levy for such offenders. The men found guilty of the patrolman's charges were Tony Machina, Alexander Asoldo, Mike Van Duren and Andrew Baroni. Patrick Hauley was also arrested, but he proved to the satisfaction of the court that he was not implicated in the gambling game.

Neylon's "round up" is one of several that has been made in that section recently, the police having instituted a vigorous campaign to break up the Sunday gambling that has been practised by foreigners for some time past. Netherwood citizens have complained to the department and future offenders will probably be given stiff sentences by the court magistrate.

CITY HEALTH LAWS MUST BE RESPECTED

Judge DeMeza Commends Local Department and Warns Violators.

From the bench in the city police court this morning Judge William G. DeMeza had some words of praise to offer on the activity of the Plainfield Board of Health in its crusade against violators of local and State health laws. His remarks were prompted by the summoning of several offenders before him after repeated attempts had been made by the health inspectors to make the guilty parties live up to the regulations. He said in part:

"Health Officer Chandler and his inspectors are to be commended in this work and while I am sitting in this court I intend to co-operate with them in every way. The city health ordinances are to be respected and those who persist in ignoring the warnings of the health department may expect no leniency when brought before me. In the future I am going to fine offenders, and fine them heavily, as I am of the opinion that digging down in their pockets will serve as a lesson to them that they must conduct their businesses in strict accord with the sanitary code of the municipality.

"Up to the present time I have been inclined to treat the guilty persons leniently because for the most part they have been individuals of limited means, but the time has come when some radical action is needed and future violators may expect no mercy. No person who is not familiar with the laws of sanitation and cleanliness is competent to conduct a shop or store where eatables are handled and ignorance of the law will excuse no one in this court."

Two more names were added to the collection of violators in the city court this morning, W. T. Hutchinson, a garbage collector, and Frank Moskowitz, a butcher, being given severe reprimands. Hutchinson was accused by Inspector William S. Addis of leaving refuse in the rear of French's Mill on Somerset street, the obnoxious fumes issuing from the debris disturbing the business men in that section last Saturday night. He was let go on a suspended sentence with the understanding that a future appearance would mean a $10 fine.

Inspector Collis H. Case and Health Officer Chandler appeared in the role of complainants against Moskowitz, who conducts a store at 525 West Third street. They testified as to the uncleanliness of the establishment and accused the proprietor of plucking chickens in the shop and allowing the feathers to scatter about. Judge DeMeza scored Moskowitz heavily and warned him that his arrest a second time would mean the imposition of a $20 fine with the option of spending sixty days in the county jail, where Warden Hughson would probably give him a course in sanitation.

BALKAN RIDDLE STILL UNSOLVED

Greece, in Arms, Awaits First Move of Bulgarian Soldiers.

MARTIAL LAW ASKED

All States Are Prepared for War and May Be Plunged Into Battle by One Overt Act—German War Loan Subscribed to Six Billion.

London, Sept. 25.—The last of the Balkan States is in arms.

Greece has ordered 27 classes of citizens mobilized. A news agency despatch from Athens says that the country will establish a moratorium immediately and the chamber of deputies has been convoked on Wednesday to pass an active martial law, and to put at the disposal of the government all State railways.

The steps toward preparedness are called "a measure of elementary prudence," in an official statement.

The Balkan situation is still unsolved, however. It is even more of a riddle than before. One fact stands out, that Bulgaria and Turkey, enemies for many years, have settled their differences. Bulgaria's army is mobilized on the Serbian frontier. It lies with her to plunge the Balkan States into war. If she strikes Greece will rush to the aid of Serbia, it is generally admitted.

How to Keep Our City Moving

We must keep moving. A city booms only so long as its manufacturers and merchants keep moving. The wheels of every line of endeavor must be kept turning if the city is going to develop, and what is of deeper concern than the wheels of Plainfield kept turning?

Should every one who has the interest of Plainfield close at heart buy goods from our merchants, the benefits all around can easily be seen. Thousands of dollars that would otherwise go out of the city will be kept circulating here and contribute a big share towards making a bigger and busier Plainfield.

A dollar spent at home will keep that dollar at home and all will share in the profits.

NERVES OF FIGHTING MEN MAKE NEW TEMPERANCE PROBLEM

A BOTTLE OR TWO AFTER A HARD FIGHT

The European struggle, now smashing methods of warfare and throwing all kinds of old theories on the scrap pile, is geing to have tremendous influence on the temperance question throughout the world. This is the opinion expressed by some of Europe's leading specialists and psychologists. One of the results they see at the end of the war is an international commission to report on the result of the moderate indulgence in beer and other stimulants by the men at the front, as against laboratory experiments on which a great part of the argument against mild stimulants is based now.

"The merits and demerits of alcohol are now on their trial on a scale never before possible," declared Dr. T. Claye Shaw of London, past president of the Society for the Study of Inebriety, in a clinical lecture just delivered. "When this war is over here will be room for a commission on the whole medical question. It is probable that many of the dicta of the anti-alcoholic enthusiasts derived from laboratory experiments with delicate time instruments will be modified or upset, whilst other reasons for abstention will be strengthened and upheld. It is a colossal experiment that we are witnessing and it is bound to have a great influence upon our future handling of the great question."

"War brings about an "abnormal condition of health," said Dr. Shaw. "It is very easy for armchair enthusiasts to rave about the danger of the rum rations, but the nervous condition of those engaged in actual warfare is one of rapid exhaustion, and the tentimony of those actually on the spot is not to be gainsaid, if, as I am told, it is in favor of the ration for the men in the very exceptional circumstances in which they are placed."

many's experts on army efficiency, especially on the Russian front, to recommend a moderate ration of beer for the Fatherland's fighting men.

This condition has caused Ger- Recently, the problem of providing beer for the German army became so serious that ordinances were passed by the German Federal Council authorizing the seizure of the barley supply in order that the German soldiers might not be deprived of their moderate ration of beer. The personal observation of Kaiser Wilhelm, particularly on the Russian front, it is said, led to a statement by him that good beer is essential both for sick and well soldiers, especially when the water supply is bad.

In Bavaria, if any brewer fails to provide his share of beer for the army, he is punished by imprisonment for one year, or a fine of 10,000 marks. For that reason the Bavarian laboring classes, especially the agricultural workers, are reported as suffering from a beer shortage brought about by the seizures for the army. Beer is food for the Bavarians and the German experts have found that substitutes or "equivalents" will not maintain the customary high standard of labor.

Up to last October Mrs. Tinsman was a resident of Port Murray, Warren township, where she was actively identified with the M. E. church and from which the funeral services will be held Tuesday morning. The Rev. G. W. C. Ramsey, of Dunellen, will officiate, and burial will be made in the family plot at Port Murray.

Mrs. Rinsman is survived by one brother, William Lake, of Cresskill, Pa., and six sons, Louis, John, Charles and Theodore, of Dunellen, and Frank, of Pompton Lakes, and Harry, of Plainfield. She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Lake.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Gerald Linke, one of the end men in last year's minstrels, has already begun agitation for the annual "blackface" show. Linke has been delegated to look up the latest jokes and song hits. It is likely that a coach will be chosen soon and the tryouts will begin in short order.

"Oracle Rally Day," while productive of over 500 subscriptions to the school paper, was not as successful as occasion demands. It is necessary for the paper to have 400 subscriptions, payable now or later, before the expenses of running it for a year can be successfully borne.

Willard McKay, P. H. S. '13, will leave for college soon. He is now a junior in Yale.

Next Saturday the football season will be introduced, when the hardest proposition of the year, Easton H. S. will combat with the Red and Blue boys on Parker Field.

Miss Dorothy Crane, one of the mainstays of the P. H. S. girls' basketball squad, has moved to Newark. Her departure will leave the basketball hopes for the P. H. S. maidens decidedly at a low ebb.

Sophomore, junior and freshmen class elections will be held during the long assembly period next Thursday. An attempt was made to hold the elections after school, but a quorum could not be had.

Chemistry laboratory work will commence Monday. Professors Lester Beers and Clarence L. Woodman have charge of this branch of study.

SPECIAL SERVICES AT FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

Inspiring services may be expected tomorrow morning and evening at the First Baptist church. At 9:45 occur the rally exercises, followed by the regular preaching services at 11 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong will have an appropriate discourse for the occasion. At 7 p. m. the Christian Endeavor Society holds its session and judging from the past weeks it will be notable for spiritual power. At 7:45 the second preaching service of the day occurs, when the pastor again will have a message of interest. Attention is also drawn to the fact that it is expected that no less han a hundred men and boys will be present at the mid-week service next Wednesday.

MRS. ELLIOT T. BARROWS EXHIBITS AT DAHLIA SHOW

The first annual exhibition of the American Dahlia Society, working in co-operation with the New York Horticultural Society, opened at the American Museum of Natural History yesterday afternoon. The new organization, made up of lovers of the dahlia, was formed last May, and has 200 members, of whom 75 per cent. are amateurs. It filled the centre of the big foyer of the museum, sharing the space with the collection of meteorites of the museum. This is the first all-dahlia exhibition to be seen in New York City and there were displays of different ways in which the flower could be used. The fall bride can now have a flower all her own for her wedding. There were two examples of shower bouquets made of the smaller white flowers combined with white tulle; dahlias were shown in big baskets and vases and were used with excellent effect as table decorations. Among the exhibitors was Mrs. E. T. Barrows, of this city.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY BOARD PLAN FOR COMING SEASON

The Woman's Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital, at its first meeting of the season yesterday, made plans for its work during the coming months. The "Twigs" will be continued on October 29, that being the day set for their opening meetings.

The thirteen "Twigs" made 5,527 articles for Muhlenberg Hospital last year. The Woman's Board purchased the materials, expending about $1,000. It is proposed to organize additional "Twigs" this year. Four dances, similar to those of the last two seasons, are to be held, the first one early in November. It was also decided to have a "Tag Day" next June.

CHRISTIAN FIELD

First Church of Christ Scientist, subject, "Reality"; golden text, Isaiah 66:22, "For as the new heavens and the new earth, which I will make, shall remain before me, saith the Lord, so shall your seed and your name remain."

At the Monroe Avenue church tomorrow night the Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, pastor, will preach on "The Most Touching Story in Literature."

Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, will preach tomorrow morning on the subject, "Willing the Divine Will," and the evening topic will be "The Gospel of Victory." The Bible school rally will be held at 9:45 o'clock in the morning, when Bibles will be presented to those promoted.

The topic for the morning services at the First M. E. church tomorrow will be "The Church in Revival;" evening topic, "Pentecost, Its Results." Rally Day will be observed at 9:45 tomorrow morning and there will be a special meeting of the Official Board at 12:30, immediately after the morning service.

FORESTRY EXHIBIT AT TRENTON'S FAIR.

Experts to Give Demonstrations on Trees and Fires.

Arrangements have been made by the division of forestry and parks of the state department of conservation and development to place novel features at the Trenton Fair from Sept. 27 to Oct. 1. The exhibition this fall will be developed from that of last year, which met with so much popular approval. The purpose of the display is to illustrate the protection and development of New Jersey forests and to show the various products New Jersey can produce.

The protection of forests from fire consists primarily of prompt discovery and extinguishment of every incipient blaze. To illustrate this work a collection of the various tools actually used in fire fighting and a miniature forest showing the effectiveness of fire lines in stopping fires are planned for the exhibit.

Scientific utilization of the forest is to be demonstrated by trees which are mature or defective and those which are in vigorous condition and suitable for future growth. The various industries using wood, such as the manufactures of baskets, crates, barrels and excelsior, will be illustrated by specimens at each step of the operation from the tree to the finished product.

Shade tree care and planting will also be demonstrated. A small plantation of white pine has been established in the back part of the plot on which the forestry cabin is located, and a number of the various kinds of more serviceable shade trees have been planted along the borders of the plot. Methods of tree doctoring will be demonstrated by specimens of injured trees.

Within the cabin there will be a large collection of photographs illustrating the various types of forests within the state and the work on the state reserves.

TO INSPECT FOOD AT TRENTON FAIR.

State Health Department and Officers of Exposition Co-operating to Protect Patrons.

Greater efforts than ever before are to be made this year to insure the purity of foods and drinks sold on the grounds at the Trenton Fair, which will be held this year from Sept. 27 to Oct. 1. For several years the State Department of Health has had its inspectors visit the Fair for the purpose of preventing the sale of fraudulent or harmful foods and drinks. Most of the venders of such products have honestly endeavored to supply the best, and they will receive aid to accomplish that object this year.

The food laws were strengthened by the last legislature, so that the authorities this year will be operating under laws that cover the subject more completely. Another important factor in the plans is an arrangement between the state department of health and the Fair Association whereby the two bodies are to co-operate for the benefit of the public who visit the Fair.

One provision of the contract between the Fair Association and all persons who obtain concessions on the grounds is that the concessionaire agrees to conform to the state laws in the exercise of the privileges granted under the contract. It is provided further that a violation of this condition shall forfeit all rights under the contract as well as the fees that have been paid for the privilege. According to the plan of co-operation between the state department of health and the Fair Association, persons who refuse to conform to the state laws in regard to the character of foods and drinks sold and the method of handling them will have their contracts immediately revoked by the Fair Association.

PREMIUMS OFFERED FOR GARDEN WORK.

Interest among the children working in school gardens has been stimulated this year by the offer of premiums at the Trenton Fair, from Sept. 27 to Oct. 1, for the best display of products that have been cultivated by pupils.

All students have been allowed to enter the competition without cost.

In order that lasting benefit may be obtained by the contest Hon. Jonathan H. Blackwell, president of the Interstate Fair Association, formulated a plan of paying some of the prizes with orders for seed to be sowed in the gardens next season. The entire state will receive the benefit of the sustained application of the pupils. Prizes are also to be paid in money.

Another innovation this year is the offer of prizes for the best homemade candy. Recipes that have made their owners wealthy have been discovered through such competition in former years, and a large entry list is expected.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS

WILL AWARD TENNIS PRIZES AT RALLY

Many Features Arranged for Program at First Baptist Church Tomorrow.

Rally Day will be observed at the Sunday-school of the First Baptist church tomorrow, at which time a special program will be given, including the presentation of prizes to the two Bible school prize winners; the public promotion of scholars from department to department, and addresses by two prominent Sunday-school and young people's workers of the State.

The program will open with a cornet solo by Miss Violet Jewell, followed by responsive reading and the roll-call by classes. In this exercise each teacher will be expected to state the total active membership of his or her class as well as the number present and on time tomorrow.

After greetings from Miss Edna Earle Cole, Field Worker for the New Jersey Sunday-school Association, the presentation of diplomas to scholars promoted from department to department will take place. Twenty-one beginners will be promoted from that class to the Primary Department; thirteen from the Primary Department to the Junior Department; twelve from the Junior Department to the Intermediate Department, and twenty-three from the latter department to be Seniors.

Interest will center in the part of the program following the promotions, the presentation of prizes to winners of the tennis tournament. The winner in the ladies' singles is Miss Margaret Hawkins, and in the boys' singles, Irving Scarborough. An address by Ivan P. Flood, secretary of Young People's Work of the New Jersey Baptist Convention, will follow. The Home Department of the Sunday-school will be presented with a banner.

TOYS FOR CHILDREN AT VESPER SERVICE

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring Will Also Preach Sermon for Young Folks.

Toys are going to be provided for children at the vesper services in the First Presbyterian church at 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The entire gallery has been set apart by the Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the church, for the use of parents with children.

Since the vesper services have been held in this church increasingly large congregations have attended. The primary object of the five o'clock service is the bringing of the young people to the evening meeting. The morning service is featured by a special sermon to children and it is the purpose of the pastor of this church to make the evening hour of worship equally as popular.

An officer of this church said today, when asked about this innovation:

"The First Presbyterian church is conveniently situated on the main street of the city, just removed from the business section, and on the principle Sunday afternoon promenade. A count was taken one pleasant Sunday of the number of young married couples with children passing a given corner on their Sunday afternoon stroll and between 2 and 5:30 there was a total of 109.

"After a sauntering walk for an hour or two the mother is likely to be tired. A few minutes' rest on the way home will be likely to hearten her prior to the children's bedtime hour and the time for the preparation of supper. Why not make the First Presbyterian church a resting place and incidentally hear some good organ music and a short sermon. The vesper service idea was laid before the people of the church and it was voted to adopt the plan. Its popularity has been proved and the idea of providing toys for restless children in the gallery is merely a part of the plan to make it a rest place for entire families on Sunday.

"Accordingly toys and other means of entertaining children will be found on the end of the two rear seats in the gallery of the church tomorrow afternoon at 4:45, when H. J. Harold begins his weekly organ recitals. The exits from the gallery are so arranged as to permit of easy and unobserved departure in case the children are unable to remain for the entire service. Provision for the entertainment of the children by young women of the congregation or by one of the parents while the other is attending worship will be made in the chapel."

The Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring will continue his talks on "The Life of Christ," at this service. This topic is designed primarily to interest young married couples.

MISS EDNA COLE AND IVAN FLOOD TO SPEAK

Rally Day will be observed by the Temple Baptist Bible School tomorrow morning. There will be no church service, the school and church service being combined, beginning at 10:30 o'clock. It will be promotion day and diplomas will be given those graduating from one department into another.

A program has been arranged which will be full of interest to all. The address will be by Ivan P. Flood, Young People's Secretary of the New Jersey Baptist State convention. Mr. Flood has appeared here before and has made a favorable impression. Miss Edna Cole, the newly-elected elementary secretary and field worker of the State Sunday-School Association, will also be present. All the members of the school and church are expected to attend this service.

Flag Funerals.

Britain is probably the only country that has ever allowed historical regimental flags to go in the pawnshop or auction room. As an instance, the First battalion Gloucester regiment in 1886 recovered from a pawnbroker at York four flags which the regiment had borne from 1795 to 1810 through the Egyptian and peninsular campaigns.

Another flag which for three years had proudly waved over the gallant Thirty-ninth foot during the great siege of Gibraltar was actually found covering the soft cushions of a tradesman's sitting room.

In the year 1888 a pair of old colors belonging to the Second battalion border regiment were rescued by Lord Archibald Campbell from a London upholsterer who had advertised them for sale as if they had been mere window curtains. These flags were afterward preserved at Kendal Parish church, and probably they are there still.

To prevent old colors meeting similar fates to the foregoing many of them have been cremated with great ceremony and the ashes carefully preserved in a box. Others have been buried with full military honors.—London Globe.

Harmless Flowers.

What a freedom from cares and perplexities one finds among the flowers! They are never unkind. You may be with them from morning till night and not have one bitter memory or disagreeable thought to take with you to your pillow. A tiger lily won't dig its claws into your breast, the calla lily will not prolong her call indefinitely. The sweet William's honeyed personality is honest and sincere; sweetness that will not under fancied provocation turn into vinegary revenge. The snowdrops will not chill you with cold words and looks. The dogwood will not bark at you or dog your footsteps. Jack-in-the-pulpit does not preach too loudly or make awkward gestures, taking your mind insensibly from the heavenly message he is striving to deliver and which your soul earnestly desires to grasp, the mind being willing, but the body weak.—Christian Herald.

Jupiter's Belts.

It has been suggested by Lau that the reason Jupiter has belts instead of zones of spots is to be found in its rapid rotation. The material forced upward from the lower strata of the planet, bringing with a smaller linear velocity than that of the surface, streams eastward and assumes the appearance of elongated streaks. If the centers of eruption are sufficiently numerous belts are formed, and it is suggested that, were the sun's rotation much more rapid than it is, the solar surface at spot maximum would also present dark streaks or belts. In accordance with this theory of belt formation the Scientific American notes that the great revival of Jupiter's north equatorial belt in 1912-13 began with the outbreak of a few isolated dark spots, which quickly spread out around the planet.

The want ad way of tenant-finding is the accepted way—and means small expense and delay.

These are the policies that develop the trade that made the store that Rothberg built:

To give a little more value than seems necessary.

To strive to see how much goodness I can put INTO every article, and not how much profit I can take OUT.

To make every sale pave the way for another.
To annoint every transaction with the best of feeling.

Isn't that the kind of a store you like to deal with?

Hahne & Co.'s Store

We are prepared for and expect the greatest sale in the history of this store because we have found from actual comparison that the prices advertised in this sale are lower than in any other store here or in New York. That is a broad assertion, but we have worked along these lines for over three months, and stand ready to back up every word we say. Our prices average 10 per cent. lower than in any other Anniversary Sale we have ever held—our styles are most up-to-date—which reminds us to call attention to our Women's and Misses' Departments. MANY TEAMS WANT TO ENTER A LEAGUE

Basketball Project Has Provoked Considerable Interest to Date.

Notices have been sent to a score of local basketball organizations of the meeting to be held in the Daily Press editorial rooms Tuesday night, when the City Basketball League will be organized. Numerous aggregations have announced their intention of taking out franchises on the circuit and it is expected that a committee will be appointed Tuesday night to select a suitable list of league competitors from the delegates present.

While it will be impossible to handle a circuit of any unusual number of teams it is desired to get the best of the combines for the new circuit and the judging will be done on the merits of the players submitted by each manager. The strongest set of quintets will be taken in.

President Walter C. Dobbins, of the City Baseball League, will be present at Tuesday night's session and has promised to assist in the work of organizing.

PLAINFIELDERS TO PLAY IN BIG AMBOY BALL GAME

Cliff Randolph will do the pitching and "Nibs" Hand the receiving for the Perth Amboy Pacers when they lineup against the Rahway Tigers tomorrow afternoon at Amusement Park, Perth Amboy. Frank Bruggy, the old Bound Brook athlete, will play third base for the Pacers.

Tommy Mullin and Jim Emery will bat against Randolph's shoots, Emery playing third and Mullin short.

BEAGLE CLUB IS ALL READY FOR SECOND ANNUAL TRIALS

Plans have been perfected for the second annual field trials of beagles under the auspices of the Beagle Club of New Jersey. The trials will be held on the club's coursing grounds at Roseland, beginning Monday, October 25, and continuing until all the scheduled events have been run. The meet will last three days at least, and perhaps four.

The events will include derby races for both thirteen and fifteen inch dogs, all age races for thirteen and fifteen inch dogs, both male and female, and championship races for all winners in other events, as well as for winners at any other field trials held under the auspices of any incorporated state beagle club, making eight trials in all.

In addition to money prizes amounting to about $40 for each race, there will be ten silver trophy cups and numerous other prizes given. Championship cups will be presented by the club and by Fred Horn, of this city. Other cup donors are: Dr. J. Roland Teed, of Roseland, the club president; Prosecutor's Detective William Parker Teed and Harry Vosburg, of Roseland; Miles Hanchet and Mrs. Joseph Sinnich, of West Orange; Henry Lang and Gordon Phillips, of Newark, and Richard Lister, of Chatham.

It is expected that more than 100 dogs will compete. Numerous entries have already been made by New Jersey owners as well as from Missouri, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia.

Ten members of the New Jersey Beagle Club are planning to take thirty-five dogs owned in this State to the field trials to be held under the auspices of the Empire State Beagle Club to be held at Saratoga, beginning Friday, October 15. At the Saratoga meet Councilman George A. Flammar, of Roseland, the first president of the New Jersey club, will be one of the three judges.

BEECHMONT STAKE.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 25.—The second of three big stakes at the Douglas Park race meet is the Beechmont Stake, which will be run this afternoon. The distance is five and a half furlongs, the entries are limited to two-year-olds, and a cash purse of $1,500 has been added. Among the probable starters are J. C. Welsh, Pochichoo, Little Sister, Miss Atkin, Cardome, Impressive, Rochester, Poppee, Checks, Gypsy George, John, Jr., Brizz, Edison, Old Charter and Port Light. The third and final stake race is the Louisville Cup set for next Tuesday.

NOTED AUTO RACER KILLED.

Cedar Falls, Iowa, Sept., 25.—Roy Canfield, an amateur auto race driver, was killed here yesterday, when his machine went over a fifteen-foot embankment on the twenty-eighth lap of the fifteen-mile automobile race at the County Fair. The accident was due to a blowout. Canfield was 26 years old and unmarried.

LOCAL ATHLETES TO ENTER AT CORNELL

Smalley, Stewart and Franklin Leave Tomorrow Night.

Ralph Smalley, Chauncey Stewart and E. Franklin Lowe, three Plainfield boys, will leave tomorrow night for Cornell, where they will matriculate for the coming term. Smalley and Stewart are both Yale cup men, and they will enter Cornell athletics. The former was captain of the North Plainfield baseball team and Stewart is a star basketball player.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL READY FOR WHISTLE

Local Schools Will Probably Follow Early Start of Other State Teams.

Feminine basketball activities will start within the next two weeks if the present weather continues, according to several members of the city and borough High Schools. Managers of both quintets are already busy sending out challenges to former opponents as well as many new aggregations, and each promises her school some spicy court games for the coming season. Miss Elsa Palmer is managing the Plainfield High School forces this year, while Miss Theresa McCullough is attending to the managership of the borough girls.

Giving the two schools the "once over" brings out the fact that both fives will have many new faces in their lineups, this fact being especially noticeable in the city High School, where several players have been lost either by graduation or removal from the city. The latest one to leave the Ninth street institution is Miss Dorothy Crane, captain of the basketball team. Her removal has left that position vacant, necessitating the election of another member, which will undoubtedly take place next week, when the G. A. A. meets. Miss Irma Good, who captained the five through last year, is the only first team player left, and she will probably get the position again. The following young women who played occasionally by substituting last season will again be out for the team: The Misses Florence Ryder, Elsa Palmer, Irene Moy, May Simons, Clementine Bremble and Jennie Bremble. Beside these there will be a wealth of material available from the incoming freshman class and no doubt the former players will be given hard runs for their berths.

Miss Ruth Wean, a graduate of the Plainfield High School and Syracuse University, will coach the Plainfield girls this winter. Miss Wean has had considerable experience in the court game, being a star player on her alma mater team and college five, and the city girls are especially fortunate in being able to secure her services.

Miss Ethel Bernard, who put the North Plainfield girls through such a successful season last winter, will again coach the boroughites. The following will be out again for the team as well as many new members: Miss Lillian Spencer, captain; Miss Margery Burtis, Miss Bertha Keller, Miss Margaret Barkalew, Miss Rose Cooper and Miss Adelaide Ricketts.

T. A. B. S. AND BAPTISTS ONLY GAME FOR TODAY

T. A. B. S. and the First Baptist teams meet this afternoon in the last game, but one, of the City Baseball League schedule for the year 1915. The game will be played on T. A. B. S. field. It will start at 3:30. Next Saturday the First Baptist will play Saurers and this ends the City League season.

SCULLING CHAMPIONSHIP.

Springfield, Mass., Sept. 25.—Edward Durnan, of Toledo, American professional sculling champion, and Frank S. Hagney, the Australian professional, will row a match race here tomorrow, for the American professional sculling championship and a purse of $1,500. The race will be rowed on the Connecticut River, over a three-mile course, with one turn. Hagney and Durnan are the fastest scullers outside of Europe, and the race will be closely contested.

CHICAGO BEATS JAP TEAM.

Tokio, Sept. 25.—Chicago University baseball team defeated the nine of Keio University today, 4 to 1. Though the American players made four errors they outhit and outran the Keio men.

A few dimes may "turn the tide" for you if you invest them in a "Situation Wanted" ad.

CURE FOR BIG HEADS.

Eleven rules were posted in the training quarters of the football squad at Northwestern University a few days ago by Coach Fred Murphy. Rule 7 reads: "You can do me personally and incidentally yourselves a great favor by refraining from reading newspaper reports at Northwestern University and other institutions with whom we compete. The reports are garbled and generally instigated by an interested party for a particular purpose. The coaching staff will see to it that you are given correct information concerning the matters which you should know. If you wish to preserve a scrapbook you may have some one cut out and preserve the articles for you."

TYNG TAKES SENIOR TITLE.

Although the tournament in which he won his laurels is not an event arranged by the United States Golf Association, James A. Tyng, of Baltusrol, chairman of the handicap committee of the Metropolitan Golf Association, can lay claim to being the champion senior golfer of the country in consequence of having made the best gross score for thirty-six holes in the eleventh annual tournament for golfers fifty-five years of age and more, which came to a close yesterday at the Apawamis Club links, after a successful run of four days.

106 MILES AN HOUR.

Dario Resta in his racing Peugeot car made the fastest time in the trial spins over the two-mile track at the Sheepshead Bay Speedway yesterday afternoon. It was the first time that Resta has driven his racer since he lowered the world's record for ten miles on the new track last Saturday. His fastest time for one lap yesterday was 1:08.10, or 106 miles an hour.

LOCAL ELK DELEGATES TO STATE MEETING

Senior League Bowlers Will Gather in Jersey City Club House Tomorrow.

At a meeting of the Elk Bowling Committee held in the clubhouse last night Messrs. V. W. Nash, Jr., and John J. Campbell were chosen to be the local delegates to the meeting of the Senior Bowling League to be held in Jersey City tomorrow afternoon. It was also decided to hold the individual house tournament on October 5. Entries for this event will close on October 1.

Delegates of the Senior Elks' Bowling League will gather tomorrow afternoon to arrange for the season. While no change is expected in the present circuit a number of matters will occupy the attention of the delegates.

Some of the rules now governing the league may be changed and others added. At present the rules do not cover all of the points. Because of this fact the delegates will likely be asked to vote on some changes which are now being discussed by the bowlers in the various Elks' homes.

At present there are ten lodges represented in the circuit and all but two, New Brunswick and Rahway, have alleys. There is some talk of allowing only lodges that have alleys to hold franchises in the circuit. It is suggested that Rahway and New Brunswick be retained this year and requested to install alleys before next season. The other teams in the league are Newark, New York, Paterson, Hoboken, Jersey City, Elizabeth, Rutherford and Plainfield.

THIRTY-SIX OUT FOR TENNIS SINGLES CUP

Preliminary Rounds of Play at Country Club Result in Easy Victories.

Competition in the opening round of play for the interscholastic tennis singles title at the Plainfield Country Club this morning under the auspices of the Plainfield Princeton Club, singled Sidney Dunning and Sherman Chandler, of North Plainfield, and Rodney Parvin and Phillip Mills, of Plainfield, out as the most formidable aspirants to the silver trophy significant of the championship. The initial round of preliminary play was noticeably one-sided, a majority of the matches being won by the stronger contenders with apparent ease. This condition, however, must be credited to fate, as the drawings were made from a hat and the experienced racquet wielders were fortunate enough to pick easy victims.

A large "gallery" of interscholastic tennis devotees witnessed the play, thirty-six exponents of the pastime starting in the preliminary rounds. Ideal weather conditions favored the contestants, and all of the players appeared to be exhibiting their best form.

The first three matches of the first round resulted in victories for Walter Place and Rodney Parvin, of Plainfield High School, and Roy Force, of North Plainfield, with love scores. These, however, were the only clean sweep wins of the opening round.

The scores follow:

First round: Walter Place, P. H. S., defeated Gano Larsen, N. P. H. S., 6-0, 60; Roy Force, N. P. H. S., defeated Robert Baurer, P. H. S., 6-0, 6-0; Rodney Parvin, P. H. S., defeated Horace Bunker, P. H. S., 6-0, 6-0; Phillip Mills, P. H. S., defeated Harvey Thorn, P. H. S., 6-1, 6-2; Horace Fisher, N. P. H. S., defeated Vernon Carter, P. H. SHOOTERS TO HONOR PLAINFIELD MAN

"Apgar Day" will be celebrated at the Smith Gun Club at Newark, September 25, when more than 500 trap shooters from this section will meet in an all-day shoot. The event is in honor of Neaf Apgar, the well known professional trap shooter, who lives in Plainfield. Others from this city will participate.

BREAKS PLAYER'S JAW WITH THROWN BALL.

Neal Ball, once with the Indians and Red Sox, broke a base runner's jaw with a thrown ball during a game between the Bloomington (Ill.) and Cedar Rapids (Ia.) teams seven or eight years ago.

Ball was playing second base. The other team had runners on first and third. A zipping grounder was hit toward Ball and the man on third raced for home, while the man on first—O'Connor by name—scooted for second.

Ball made a dazzling stop of the grounder and threw toward home. O'Connor ran right into the ball. It caught him flush on the jaw and broke the bone in three places.

HUGGINS LIKES PILOT HERZOG.

Says He Is Better Balanced Player Than Bush or Maranville.

Fans who have picked Bush of Detroit, Weaver of Chicago, Fletcher of the Giants or Maranville of the Braves as the greatest of shortstops will be surprised to learn that Manager Huggins of the Cardinals considers Charley Herzog the greatest shortstop in baseball today.

"His think tank and his aggressiveness, as well as the fact that he is a better balanced ball player than any of the four men mentioned, make Herzog to me the grandest shortstop in baseball," says Huggins.

"Herzog will block a man off the bag in a pinch if necessary, he will bunt with an infield playing on its heels or he'll deliver a long hit when necessary. He'll steal a base when it may mean the ball game, and he plays against all kinds of teams and hits against all kinds of pitching the same. I think Herzog is beyond doubt entitled to All American honors as a shortstop, though peculiarly few, if any, critics have given him this honor."

HARD SCHED. FOR SYRACUSE.

Orange Team Will Make Many Long Jumps This Fall.

The members of the Syracuse university football team will be able to qualify as veteran globe trotters when the 1915 gridiron season has ended. No eastern college eleven of recent years has faced as many and as long jumps, with a season which begins at home on Sept. 25 and ends at Portland, Ore., Dec. 1.

The team starts touring on Oct. 9, when Princeton will be played at Princeton. The following Saturday Rochester will be met at home, and a week later the Salt City eleven will go to Providence to face Brown. Ann Arbor will be visited on Oct. 30 for the purpose of playing Yost's University of Michigan gridiron clan. The first two Saturdays of November will be spent at Syracuse, entertaining Mount Union and Colgate teams. Dartmouth will follow on Nov. 20, and then the Orange eleven will trek westward. Thanksgiving day will see the team engaged with the Montana players at Missoula, and on Dec. 4 Syracuse will close an exceedingly busy season by tackling the Oregon Agricultural college team at Portland, Ore.

PROGRESS AND PROSPERITY IN PLAINFIELD

STEEL STRUCTURE AFFECTED BY WAR

Every Department of Building Material Market Between Two Fires.

PRICES ARE INCREASED

However, There is a Desire to Give Builders Every Opportunity to Take Advantage of Current Lists.

New York, Sept. 25.—Almost every department of the building material market considers itself between two fires. Mill demand is increasing, but not with the proportion of building orders generally expected for September. Portland cement interests, for instance, are operating at continued high pressure in anticipation of export, municipal and State road work. Structural steel is affected by war conditions, and while an increase in price for building purposes is wholly warranted, based upon mill activity, there is hesitation about boosting quotations just now owing to a general desire to give builders every opportunity they can to take advantage of current lists. Common brick manufacturers fell that they, too, ought to get more than $6 for their brick, based upon winter supply and the volume of brick now held in the hands of dealers, but there is found to be a tendency in this department to hold back until the splendid plan filing record of August can be gauged by actual operations going ahead.

Suburban dealers say there is a better inquiry. Prices are being held pretty steady by dealers everywhere, competition by means of price cutting being rather guarded among speculators because of the inability of manufacturers to make long quotations at current levels.

Continued instances are shown where well-backed dealers are unable to make reservations at existing levels longer than sixty days. A case was reported this week where a builder wanted to be covered on a Bronx operation for basic materials into November, and the best he could do was to come within 5 per cent. of an average price of his requirements on the present quoted levels. Other buyers not able to make such close purchases said they were unable to get quotations at all on some lines, notably crushed stone, Portland cement and wire lath for delivery after the first of the year.

Steel is assured of an active fourth quarter. Railroads are beginning to realize that mills are filled up, and accordingly they were more eager to get into the market. The Erie bought 20,000 tons for next year, the New York Central, 150,000 tons; the Southern, 20,000 tons, and scattering railroad orders were reported aggregating an aditional 170,000 tons for first quarter delivery, all at prices considerably above those now ruling. There is a tendency to make 1916 prices very much higher than even these large buyers were able to get, and if war orders continue, such a course will be a certainty.

This activity on the part of the railroads prompted more eagerness among builders to get in touch with fabricators this week in the metropolitan district. The fact that standard basic pig iron is stiffening at $15, Valley and foundry iron manufacturers are strongly tempted to run their $14.75 price up to $15, would seem to indicate that quotations by fabricators for fourth or first quarter deliveries will be more guarded than they have been.

The possibility of extensive speculative construction this year is made rather remote by this turn of the structural steel and basic building material market. The building situation is getting to be more and more a specialty proposition— that is, the erection of definite buildings for definite tenantage throughout the metropolitan district. There is very little construction based upon pure investment. Buildings are being put up, and doubtless will continue to be erected, perhaps until the spring of 1916, because of an actual compulsory demand for them. Operations inspired by the hope of turning tax-eating property into paying investments will not be prevalent, at least so long as present price conditions exist in the basic building material market.

Reports from architects' offices throughout the district show a preponderance of factory extensions, apartment house construction and working men's homes in the neighborhood of new industrial centers. Residence construction is noticeably lacking, while dwelling operations are moderately active. Commercial operations are taking the lead and, from projections being filed in the district, it is apparent that this form of building will be that which will be the most prevalent during the last part of this year. Commercial operations as a rule are not hindered by a few cents change in prices, and after September it is probable that this type of building will have to pay more for the material required.

WORK RESUMED ON BOROUGH SCHOOL

Early Completion of the New Structure is Now Expected by Contractors.

Work was resumed on the Harrison School early this week, and with all financial difficulties adjusted on a basis satisfactory to the Borough Board of Education and the sub-contractors, no more delay is anticipated.

The New England Equitable Insurance Company, successor to the New England Casualty Company, of Boston, which bonded L. Belluccio & Brother, the general contractors for the building, has assumed its obligation as bondsman, and with the corporation's promise to pay them, the sub-contractors were perfectly willing to complete their contracts.

The workmen have made a good showing during the few days that they have been back on the job. Plumbers and carpenters were principally in evidence. There were doors to be hung throughout the entire building and most of the plumbing fixtures to set. The carpenter work will be pretty well finished by night, but the plumbers have several days' more work ahead of them. It is doubtful if the school can be made ready for use before October 11.

Work on the improvements at the Somerset School are progressing slowly, but this is mostly on the outside and does not greatly interfere with the usual work of the school.

MANY RESIDENTIAL CHANGES REPORTED IN PLAINFIELD

A few of the changes in residence to take place among Plainfielders shortly are as follows:

Walter W. Stryker has rented C. Gustafson's house on George street, near Emerson avenue, and has already taken possession.

Postoffice Inspector C. A. Larrabee, of East Seventh street, has rented the Harry J. Northrup residence at 431 East Second street.

L. A. Williams has leased the George Kluppel house at 547 East Second street.

The house at 40 Sandford avenue has been leased by H. Schuldenfrei.

Ernest Zeek, president of the Zeek Baking Company, will move from 968 West Sixth street, October 1, to 1125 West Front street.

WESTFIELD PROPERTIES SOLD BY SHERIFF

Three Westfield properties were included in the list sold this week by Sheriff George C. Otto, of Union county. All three were sold as the result of mortgage foreclosures.

A large tract of land on Rahway avenue, Westfield, was bought in by the Westfield Trust Company, complainant, in its action against Lillian B. La Rue. The price paid was $5,800.

The complainant in the action of Katherine M. Hoffman against Clarence M. Haight, purchased a parcel of land on Westfield avenue, Westfield, for $2,000.

The property at Scotch Plains avenue and Park street, Westfield, was purchased for $1,000 by Lizzie S. Sanford, executrix of the will of William M. Sanford, complainant, in a suit against Charles A. Reed.

LUMBER MARKET DULL.

While there are indications of coming improvement, irregular and generally unsatisfactory conditions still prevail in the eastern lumber market. Owing to the prospects of increased building activity this fall, there is a better feeling in the suburban districts, where lumber is used more freely in construction work than in the cities. Boxmakers are placing orders with more freedom than for some time, but the supply of lumber suitable for their use is so heavy that the reduction in stocks is insignificant. Operations of the sash and door factories are considerably below capacity as a rule, due to the falling off in building.

HEATING MEN BUSY.

Heating men are busy these days. While they report little new house work, they are finding much to do installing heating plants in old houses. People would do better, the heating men say, if they would have work of this kind attended to during the summer months when business is dull and the contractors are not rushed with orders.

HEAVY RAINS HELD UP BRIDGE WORK

Better Progress is Now Being Made on Grove Street Structure.

Complaint is made that work on the new concrete bridge over Green brook at Grove street is progressing very slowly. Begun nearly three months ago, the only apparent progress made on the work to be seen are the two buttresses on the North Plainfield side of the brook.

But while progress has apparently been slow, the work done has been of such a character that it has made no showing. The tedious task of forming the abutments under water had to be accomplished before the buttresses could be built. That work is all done on the North Plainfield side now, and the abutments on this side of the brook are finished and the forms for one wall are in place. When the four buttresses are all completed, the work of constructing the bridge proper will be begun and ought to proceed rapidly.

Then the flood which visited this section several weeks ago delayed the contractor considerably. Not only was a great gap gouged out of the bank on the North Plainfield side of the brook just west of where the bridge is to go, but the flood swept away some of the contractor's material. It undid a lot of work, and made it necessary to do it over again.

The flood also carried away a temporary bridge which had been erected for foot passengers. This has only recently been replaced.

Arthur E. Smith is the contracting engineer, and the bridge will be a Luten, of reinforced concrete. A feature of the new bridge will be four handsome lighting standards, two of which will grace each side of the structure. This lighting scheme was adopted through the efforts of Freeholder J. Hervey Doane, of this city.

The old bridge was sold to the Somerset county freeholders for $200. To effect this deal Somerset county turned over to Union county the sum of $100, this county's share of the proceeds, as the bridge was constructed jointly by the two counties. The old bridge, an iron trussed affair, was taken down and moved away. After being repaired it was placed in position over a stream in some part of Somerset county.

It is thought that at least two months more will elapse before the new bridge will be completed.

ONLY FOUR PERMITS ISSUED THIS WEEK

Three Dwellings and a Garage Are Included in the Applications.

Four building permits, representing in estimated cost an outlay of $9,525, were filed with Building Inspector T. O. Doane this week. The application of Daniel F. Dugan, of East Seventh strett, for a permit to erect three dwellings on East Sixth street, was the largest of the four. This application shows that there is being experienced a revival of speculative building. The permits by wards follow:

First Ward.

Dr. Alfred Pittis, of 178 East Front street, made application for a permit to make an extensive alteration to a garage in the rear of 178 and 180 East Front street. The extension will be 9x34 feet, and the work will cost $300.

A garage to cost $175 will be erected by F. L. Sopher, of 616 East Second street, near Berckman street. The building will be of frame construction, 14x18 feet in dimensions, one story high. P. W. Fisher is the carpenter.

Second Ward.

Daniel F. Dugan, of 511 East Seventh street, will build three single family dwellings at 628, 630 and 634 East Sixth street. The houses will be of frame construction, two and one-half stories high, 20x30 feet in dimentions, and will cost $3,000 each Mr. Dugan is given as the general contractor.

Third Ward.

Charles L. Ryder, Jr., of 302 Grant avenue, will build a frame garage on the rear of his property to cost $50. The building will be 16x18 feet in dimensions. Mr. Ryder will build it.

CONTRACTS FILED.

The following contracts have been filed with the county register at Elizabeth: Thomas J. Beaman with Anothony Albert, carpenter work new building, Chestnut street, Westfield, $3,567. Frank H. A bungalow to cost about $3,000 is to be built on Warrenville road, Middlesex borough, by William F. Weidenhaupt. The contract, which has been filed with the Middlesex county clerk at New Brunswick, names Edward Daniel as the contractor.

DAIRY CATTLE CONGRESS.

Waterloo, Ia., Sept. 25.—The sixth annual Dairy Cattle Congress will open here on Monday, and will attract dairymen from far and wide all next week. This show, although only six years old, is today recognized as one of the two great dairy exhibitions of the country. Prizes to the amount of $1,600 will be given for butter, and special medals, trophies, etc., will be given for the other contests. A unique innovation is a judging contest for boys and girls. The object is to create an interest and arouse enthusiasm among the younger people in pure-bred dairy cattle.

TONNAGE ON GREAT LAKES.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 25.—A wave of prosperity has struck the freighters on the Great Lakes, and some of the old ships long discarded are filling their holds with the big cargoes that are offered. The increased grain and ore tonnage has found use for old wooden ships that have been idle for years.

EXPERTS AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, La., Sept. 25.—The League of American Municipalities will open its annual convention here on Monday. Four days will be devoted to discussing city marketing and other problems.

LEGISLATORS ALIVE TO HEALTH NEEDS

Many Important Laws Enacted During Year Ending June 30.

The United States Public Health Service reviews in the current issue of the Public Health Reports the more important health laws adopted during the year ended June 30, 1915. Massachusetts, New Jersey and West Virginia have reorganized their health departments. The Bureau of Health of the Philippine Islands has been superseded by the Philippine Health Service.

The model law for morbidity reports has been adopted in part, by Ohio, Maine, Michigan, Delaware, Louisiana, Montant, Porto Rico, Vermont, Massachusetts and New York. Michigan has appropriated $100,000 for the purpose of making a tuberculosis survey of the state. Minnesota and Indiana have enacted advanced anti-tuberculosis legislation. Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas have passed measures looking to the control of the bubonic plague.

Maine legislates on milk, while many of the states have adopted laws or regulations looking to the control of communicable diseases in general. Medical inspection of school children has received legislative attention in Hawaii, Vermont, North Dakota, Porto Rico, Mississippi, New York, Kansas and the Philippine Islands. Indiana authorizes the establishment of open-air schools.

SOCIETY HORSE SHOW.

Philadelphia, Sept. 25.—The famous Bryn Mawr Horse Show will have its opening on Monday, when the greatest display of horseflesh ever exhibited in Pennsylvania will be shown. The show will continue until October 2. Many new features hav ebeen added this year to the society horse show. There will be breeding and polo mount classes galore. The Hound Show Association, comprising men of prominence from all over the United States, will hold its show in connection with hunters and cross-country horses.

GOES TO ELECTRIC CHAIR.

Last March Liebman, while in a rage because his wife had summoned him to court for non-support, threw the children from a window in their home. The daughter, Sadie, was killed, and his son, Samuel, was made a cripple for life by the injuries he received.

POLITICAL NOTES

September 28—Primary day and second registration day.

October 2—County committees meet for reorganization.

October 4—City committees meet for reorganization.

October 5—Republican and Democratic State conventions held in Trenton.

October 19—State referendum election, and third registration day in municipalities of more than 5,000 people.

October 26—Third and final registration day in municipalities of less than 5,000 inhabitants.

November 2—General Election Day.

The interesting freeholder campaign in Bergen county in which there are forty-three candidates to be voted for at the primaries for nomination to the new small board has brought forward something new in the way of campaign features. A pamphlet has been issued by the Bergen County Citizens Committee, which is called "The Voters' Guide," and is a record of queries sent by the committee to all of the candidates asking their position on certain questions, together with their answers. Twenty of the candidates openly express their willingness, among other things, to oust the county engineer and his staff, and nineteen decline to answer the committee's questions. One openly attacks the organization for its efforts to "butt in." The voters' guide is strictly "non-partisan," the committee merely stating that it is the duty of voters to vote for those candidates who were manly enough to tell where they stand, rather than for those who declined to commit themselves.

There is considerable speculation in Elizabeth as to just what effect the trial of the excise commissioners will have upon their chance of election. While their friends are of the opinion that the disagreement strengthens their position, more impartial persons hold that a disagreement is almost as bad as a conviction, insofar as the effect upon election is concerned. It is pointed out that the board expressly stated that it was going to seek a "vote of confidence" and "vindication" by the people.

Edmund B. Osborne, of Newark, erstwhile insurgent, who has returned to the Republican fold, is lining up behind Mayor Raymond in his fight to unseat the "bosses" within the party as represented by Alfred N. Dalrymple. In addressing an open air meeting at Market and Washington streets Monday night he urged party harmony and invited members of the Progressive party to return and aid the G. O. P. in its honest endeavor to maintain clean politics and to promote progressive policies.

Wittpenn Democrats in Hudson county are so sure of success at the coming primaries that they are offering to bet real money with Kinkead or his supporters on the outcome of the vote. Thomas F. Meany, who is said to have already laid a bet of $1,000 with Sheriff Kinkead, is now offering to place another $1,000 at even money that two-thirds of the Wittpenn Assembly and Freeholder candidates will be nominated.

Because Republican candidates in Stanhope, Sussex county, have failed to designate their campaign manager, Borough Clerk Valentine has refused to print the candidates' names on the primary ballots. As the time limit for amending petitions has expired, the primary ballots will appear on Monday minus the Republican candidates. The candidates thus disqualified are: For Mayor, John Wills; for councilmen, Charles E. Baldwin and Frank Stackhouse, and several others for minor offices.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1915.

On Saturdays the editorial columns of the Daily Press are conducted by citizens who are free to express their own views. The contributing editor for today is Councilman Francis J. Blatz.

In present-day road-building the local Common Council is keeping ever in mind the logic of permanency, with the ensuing certainty that usage will prove that this theory in the long run is both a money and labor saver. Too general is the belief that roads are something to tear up and put down and the sooner Plainfield realizes that good, substantial paving is the surest and best solution to the problem of facilitating traffic and the shortest route to economy, the better it will be for all concerned. This city, like other municipalities, has learned its little lesson about brick pavements and the result of the improvement in the business section is a vindication of brick. Not many years ago any number of pessimistic citizens could be singled out who predicted general dissatisfaction for the experiment in permanent paving; but the experimental stages have now passed and hardly an individual can be found who will not endorse the brick construction for durability, ease of repair, safety and comfort in travelling for both horse and motor-drawn vehicles. On parts of Front street, Park avenue and Watchung avenue the material has done good service and has been kept in first class condition at a minimum expenditure because of little wear.

Now the Councilmanic Street Committee has assumed another similar responsibility in the improvement of West Third street, between Liberty street and Plainfield avenue. This srtip of street is subjected to more than its share of the city's traffic during 365 days of the year and the result of the concrete roadbed will be awaited with keen interest. Those who expressed nothing but disapproval of the project when it was first launched are now taking on a more optimistic view and few there are grumbling over the assessment levied upon them as their individual share of the expense incurred in doing the resurfacing; for the cost was relatively small when the increase in property values sure to follow is considered. In that section of West Third street Plainfield has one of the most up-to-date specimens of road construction, designed for long service and lasting satisfaction.

With the completion of the work on this thoroughfare the question as to whether brick or concrete is superior naturally arises. From experiences in other cities, however, it is safe to predict that time will do the same for the concrete strip as it has for our brick improvement.

Residents and property owners of West Third street are to be commended for taking the initiative in his work and it is to be hoped that streets in other parts of the city will be similarly improved in the immediate future. A street sufficiently wide to cope with any situation, culverts of the most approved type, and a surface unsurpassed for any variety of traffic, has replaced the rocky, wabbly macadam that called for constant attention and repair. Its claim to permanency goes unquestioned and the fact that the builders have foreseen future trouble by installing gas and water mains and other underground necessities to the curb line, will tend to discourage the all too common "tear-up" policy. It is expected that there will be no necessity of tearing up even a portion of this new concrete street for years to come.

The time has arrived when at least a part of the money collected by the State Department of Motor Vehicles for licenses should be distributed among the municipalities whose citizens contribute it. A large proportion of autoists in Plainfield, it can be safely said, do eighty per cent of their driving on roads which have to be kept in condition by this municipality and there is no reason why a percentage of the fees they pay for licenses should not be returned to the city to be used exclusivly for improving the thoroughfares. Under present legislation the entire revenue from this source goes to the State for the upkeep of State roads and there are many local autoists who rarely have occasion to use other roads aside from those within Plainfield's limits. There were many hundreds of dollars collected in licenses this year and next year the amount will soar even higher and in view of the fact that increased traffic will naturally call for additional care of municipal roads it is high time the State made some satisfactory adjustment with the city.

REUNION OF CLASS 22 WILL BE HELD

Attractive Program for Rally Day at First Presbyterian Church.

A reunion of Class 22, the promotion of about fifty children, the first exhibition of the memory chain system of instruction for Sunday-school beginners, singing led by Charles L. Lewis, instructor of music at the Plainfield High School, and the presentation of an allegory will be the features of the Rally Day exercises at the First Presbyterian Sunday-school at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Class 22 is the one out of which the boy scout movement in this city has grown. In the last seven years seventy-eight boys have been members, of which there are thirty-eight in active membership today. A reunion of all the former members of the class takes place tomorrow and a general invitation to young men between the ages of fifteen and nineteen to join has been issued to those not now identified with any Sunday-school.

A feature of the promotion exercises will be the presentation of handsome Bibles by Grove Hinman, to the members of the school passing from one grade to another. Master Francis Kriney, Miss Ethel Hazel, Howard W. Allegar, Jr., and the Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, will take part in the allegory which will depict Stoutheart joining the army of the Lord.

CRESCENT AVENUE RALLY.

The senior and junior departments of the Crescent Avenue Sunday-school will hold their special rally day exercises tomorrow at 12 o'clock in the Sunday-school rooms, immediately following the morning service in the church. The children will render a service entitled "Brothers of the Flag." Those who will take part are Katherine Holt, Helen Thomas, Emily DeForest, Betty Fenner, Frances Abbe, Marion Evans, Mary Genung, Kitty Swan, Polly Wallace, Dorothy Frost, and Harold Searles, Herbert Seaman, Edward Ladd, Sanford Roome, Billy Palmer, Randolph Hubbard, Alex. Stewart.

Self-interest will induce hundreds of people to read and consider your "Business Opportunity" ad.

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

At The First Encounter

IT IS strange how fickle the memory of the first time invalid. Especially if he has been a pretty healthy fellow up till now. His ancestors all seem to have died of old age or infancy—at least they never had what you could really call a disease of any kind, if you know what we mean. No use bothering about that—what the patient wants is a little something for this stomach trouble.

It is a good idea for one contemplating a consultation with the doctor to read his Bible over the night before—the page where the family pedigree is kept. And then a sort of examination of conscience might not be a bad plan either. Get your past sins and illnesses consequent thereto arranged in good order so you will be ready to give the doctor a fair history, neither exaggerating your various felonies nor belittling the penalties you may have paid for them.

This is the most difficult problem a doctor has to contend with in general private practice, obtaining a clear and accurate history. Somehow such important past events as typhoid fever, pneumonia, appendicectomy and mania a potu, to mention only the mentionable, utterly escape the memory of the new patient unless the doctor firmly but gently recalls them to view.

People little realize how very important a clear history is in the matter of diagnosis and sometimes in the treatment. Think what a calamity it would be for a patient to develop a sudden colic in the right lower quadrant, have his appendix removed in a great hurry and then, when it was all over, but doctor's bill, to remember that his former occupation had been that of a carriage painter—to learn that the colic was only lead colic after all! Not at all a fanciful episode. Quite a possible occurrence, in fact. A mere error of deduction based upon incomplete data.

While it matters less and less these days, as science marches ever onward, just what one's parents and grandparents and other relatives had and died of, it still does matter tremendously what one's own past habits, occupations, environment and illnesses may have been. Only by an intelligent review of these data can the doctor arrive at sound conclusions, and so the responsibility for an accurate diagnosis and correct treatment rests partly upon the patient's shoulders.

Too many illnesses grow in duration faster than time itself. At the first encounter the patient has been sick a month or two; at the second, a week later, it seems to have been about six months since the trouble first started; and then in another week or so it comes out that he has really been complaining for two years about that stomach.

LITTLE GEOGRAPHY LESSONS—ARCHANGEL

ARCHANGEL was a summer resort for Eskimos until Russia got hard up for a seaport last summer.

It is located at the southern end of the White Sea. However it is not very far south. No one suffers particularly from sunstroke in Archangel even in July. It is about 100 miles farther north than Nome, Alaska.

Autumn begins at Archangel shortly after the spring thaws have set in and in the winter, the man who turns off the gas lights on the streets gets a two months vacation.

Archangel is a paradise in summer for the man who like to go out with the boys, because if he comes in at sunset he doesn't get home until 3 A.M. On the other hand a man can rise at noon in the winter and still get to work at daybreak.

Because of these facts Archangel is growing rapidly and now contains over 25,000 people and is very modern, having moving-picture theatres and war extras.

Archangel got its name originally because no one ever expected to see it. However it is now connected by railroad with the rest of Russia and since the Baltic has been infested with *submarines it has become the na*tion's second most important seaport.

To reach Archangel by water one must take a boat in a secluded port free from German spies and travel to the North Cape. Here the warm southerly regions are left behind and the steamer works east through the Arctic Ocean, dodging icebergs at a latitude of 74 degrees until it reaches the White Sea.

At this point on the map the nearest steam heater is some hundreds of miles away and the explorer who reaches these shores goes home and writes a book about it. But the deck hand on the freight steamer full of ammunition merely draws a month's pay and signs on for another trip. When an adventurer or explorer gets into trouble in an unknown region there is usually a seaman of some sort standing around ready to help him out.

*The only difference between ex*ploring and going to sea is that the seaman gets $30 a month and a kick in the face while the explorer gets $500 a night from the Chautauqua bureau and a medal from the government.

People's Legal Friend

Not A Free Agent—Will?—Nil

Q. A woman made her will, disposing of all her property. She was in bad health, physically and mentally, and was unable to understand, without being prompted, the character or importance of the transaction. Do you think the will would stand?

A. If the facts as you have given them are correct, the will would not be valid.

Was The Train Damaged Much?

The engine struck the auto and the man was badly injured. Could he recover damages from the railroad company?

A. Relying on your statement of the facts as correct, he could not recover damages.

The Nat Goodwin Habit Again

Q. An agreement of separation was drawn up for a man and his wife. The purpose seems to have been to bring about a divorce. Will the agreement be valid?

A. If it was made for the purpose of bringing about a dissolution of the marriage, and its tendency is to have such effect, it will be wholly void as contrary to public policy.

The Life Line

BY LAURA KIRKMAN

The Woman Who "Chose Matrimony Instead Of A Career"

As if she couldn't have had both! As if she were less capable of development because of marriage! If she had ever been bent earnestly on full development, not even the man she loved could rob her of her rights. Nothing, nothing, could limit her—buy her up! A real career can't be checked. If what we called our career dies, then it was never a career, but just an occupation. This is where the woman who "chose matrimony" makes her mistake; she's mixed her terms. "I worked for money," or "I worked to kill time," we would have her confess frankly. But instead, she tells us a tale of denial, and expects us to bare our heads. Deep down, she knows that there would be nothing to keep her back now, if she cared to make the most of herself—that her domestic duties do not take all her time—that her husband could feel only pride in such an ambition. Deep down, she knows that the only thing that holds her back is lack of ambition.

She's hibernating.

Real Comfort

What is comfort? Widening lands,
Farm and forest, rocky wold?
Can they bring an endless peace
When our frame is weak and old?
Nay, Consider, says the Muse,
Taxes and Succession Dues.

What is Comfort? Mansions fair,
Hardwood floors and tapestries?
Radiators hissing hot,
Turkish rugs and chairs of ease?
No. They have a hundred ills.
Think about the plumbers' bills.

What is Comfort? Yellow gold,
Bonds and stocks and dividends?
Melons (cut in Montreal),
Monthly Statements, hosts of friends?
Nay, the times are out of joint
When the Market drops a point.

What is Comfort? Motor cars
Fitted with electric lights,
Humming here and everywhere
In the placid summer nights?
Nay. Consider, when you roam
Punctures fifty miles from home.

What is Comfort? It is found
In this madly whirling sphere.
All may have it an they will
Ease a grief and dry a tear.
Comfort? Yea. It has its roots
In a fine OLD pair of boots.

Snap Shots

By Jay E. House

A New York woman has been sentenced to three months in jail for beating her husband. The lesson to be gathered from the incident is that no man should be permitted to marry until he is capable of defending himself.

Frankly admitting that the baby resembles its father is the shortest way. It also is the safest.

When it comes to combing a customer's hair, the barber does his best. But that is all that can be said for the job.

The New York woman who left her money to her lawyer merely took the shortest cut. Ordinarily there is more or less circumlocution in vesting the title to a client's property in his attorney.

If a man is afraid to say it himself he nearly always asks a newspaper to do it for him.

There are all kinds of chumps, including the one who has a ship tattooed on his arm.

"The lunch counter," says one of the advertisements, "is the cause of indigestion, dyspepsia, catarrh of the stomach, and heart disease." The lunch counter will have to be more careful. It is getting over into the cigarette's territory.

One of the compensations of life is that a man can't study himself through a microscope.

It may be true that marriage is a failure. But so, for that matter, is remaining unmarried.

In a small town most of the scorn and contumely is directed toward the man who wears white flannel trousers. But a little of it is saved for the man who beats his wife.

"Where is the dragon?" she kept asking him.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — How Masha Visited the Zoo To Find a Dragon.

"HOW would you like a story about a little Russian girl?" asked daddy.

"Goodie, goodie!" cried both kiddies.

"Her name was Masha, which means Mary, and she was born near the border of a vast plain that wheat grew on each summer. One year her father thought America a better land to raise his family in, so, with many little brothers and sisters, Masha got on a huge boat and about two weeks later became a little American."

"How old was she?" asked Evelyn.

"About eight. Her father did not have much money, but as soon as he found a home for them he put all his children in school.

"She made friends very fast, for she was lovely to look at, with her dark curls and flashing eyes and happy disposition. All the children loved her, for she danced strange Russian dances, and a little girl took her to a club.

"Now, there was a man much interested in this club for little tenement children, and he used to take the boys and girls off on delightful picnics. He liked Masha so much that he invited her to go with him and spend Saturday in a big park where there was a wonderful zoo. So her mamma dressed her all up in a clean dress and a red hair ribbon, and when the man came to lead her off she was quite the belle of her street, with all the other children tagging along behind her, cheering.

"The man took along a huge box of sandwiches and cake and planned to keep Masha outdoors all day, for the air where she lived was not very pure.

"The first thing Masha did when they reached the park was to dart in and out among the cages, hunting, hunting something which she seemed not to find. She took the man's hand and led him three times around the big zoo. 'Where is the dragon?' she kept asking him. 'I want to see a dragon!' The man tried to comfort her with the truth that dragons are make believe animals. But Masha had read a great many fairy stories and believed in dragons even when she could not find one. At first the man was amused, but when he saw that she would not be happy without her heart's desire he tried to please her in other ways. But candy, soda water and all the other zoo animals together could not bring back her joy. 'Please, I want I should go home,' she kept begging him. 'What's the use I should stay in a park all day with a man which can't find a dragon?'"

"She couldn't use very good English yet?" asked Jack.

"She had been in America only four months," explained daddy. "When she took no more interest in the park he carried her home."

Household Hints

CANNING AND PRESERVING

Dill Pickles—Pack in one-half gallon jars well-washed cucumbers, one level teaspoon salt, one-half cup cold vinegar, alum the size of pea (either pulverized or lump). Add as much dill as you wish, then fill jar with cold water, screw on cover, and tip back and forth to mix ingredients.

Sweet-Sour Pickles—Two hundred and fifty to three hundred tiny cucumbers, wash well and pack in jars. To one gallon vinegar add one-half cup salt, two teaspoons mustard, one level tablespoon powdered alum, one teaspoon saccharine (from drug store), four tablespoons mixed spices. Mix all these thoroughly in a large pan and pour over cucumbers in jars till brimming full, then seal at once.

EASY PICKLES

Use one cup granulated sugar, one cup ground mustard, one cup salt, one gallon cider vinegar. Mix cold.

Wash cucumbers, put into glass cans or stone crocks, pour this mixture over them cold and seal. If put into crocks, they must not have had butter or lard in them, as that ware is porous and absorbs grease which kills the vinegar and spoils the pickles.

One-half of the above recipe is enough for 150 cucumbers, which will fill four quart cans.

THE TABLE

Nut-Cabbage Salad—Select a medium firm head of cabbage. Then cut or shred very fine as for slaw. Sprinkle salt and sugar over this. Prepare one cup of English walnut meats and crush rather fine. Then make a dressing of three eggs beaten very light; one-half cup cider vinegar; salt, sugar, mustard and curry powder to taste; one tablespoon flour. Let boil and lastly add one-half cup rich cream. Add all ingredients and mix well together with a spoon. Serve on individual chilled head lettuce leaves.

Pecan Cream Cake—Take two cups powdered sugar, two tablespoons butter, three eggs, one cup sour milk, one teaspoon vanilla, two teaspoons baking powder, pinch baking soda, pinch salt; mix well and stir up, then add three cups flour and beat well. Bake slowly. Frosting: Whip one cup sweet cream, stir up with one-half cup powdered sugar, a few drops of vanilla and one pound chopped pecan nut meats. When cake is baked, put on frosting.

Hot Water Sponge Cake—One and one-fourth cups granulated sugar, four eggs, one and one-half cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder, four tablespoons boiling water. Cream sugar and yolks of eggs, then add beaten whites; then flour and baking powder. Stir thoroughly, add pinch of salt and flavor to taste. Lastly, add the boiling water and stir thoroughly. Bake in moderate oven forty to forty-five minutes.

MISCELLANEOUS HELPS

For Baby's Milk—No bottle baby can thrive during hot weather on milk that is not kept on ice. If there is no refrigerator at hand take two wooden boxes, one about three feet square and the other five or six inches smaller every way.

Place the smaller box in the larger one and fill the space between them, bottom and sides, with sawdust. In the center of the smaller box keep a four-quart tin can or covered kettle in which two or three cents' worth of ice may be kept and placed daily. The milk bottles can be stood around it. Painting the outer box improves the appearance. Hinge the lid to close perfectly and line it with a few layers of newspaper. This box can be used by small families as a refrigerator.

Fly Eliminator—Oil of lavender drives away flies better than anything else. Buy an ounce of the oil, pour half of it into a pint bottle of cold water, and shake. If scattered on the tablecloth at meal time the flies will quickly leave.

To Remove Ink—If ink has been spilled on table linen, carpet, gingham, etc., the ink spots should be covered with soda—put on the soda before the ink dries, if possible. If the ink is dry cover with soda and soak in lemon juice. It may take several days to remove all the stain, but it has been done with good success.

YOUR GARDEN

To reset rambler rose, or any kind of roses, take some cuttings from old part of bush, insert them in potatoes and bury the potatoes in the ground; they are sure to grow.

CHAPTER XII.

"I'll take my medicine."

AS Cyrus Martin paced up and down the office he caught an exchange of gleeful glances between Peale and Rodney. That decided him.

"Andover soap!" he grunted. Then to Rodney in a more propitiatory tone he added, "Have a cigar?"

Rodney took one of his father's Havanas and threw away his own stub.

"Thanks," he said.

There was a pause.

"Have a cigar, young fellow?" said Mr. Martin to Peale next.

"Thanks," said Peale, surprised.

"Allow me," said Mr. Martin, lighting his cigar and then walking over to Rodney.

"Well, thinking things over, why should you and I fight?" he began.

"You started it, father," said Rodney.

"Quite true," said Martin, "and therefore I should be the one to call it off. Now, son, here's the idea: I'd rather have you with me than against me. The money doesn't matter much. In your way, while I don't indorse that kind of publicity, I suppose you boys have done some good advertising."

"Thank you, sir," chimed in Peale.

"Not at all," said Martin, then added to Rodney, "And if you're going to have a backer shouldn't I be better than the Andover soap people?"

Rodney's throat gave an involuntary cluck of pleasure.

"After all, blood is thicker than business. What do you suggest?" he said.

"Suppose I buy you out," Mr. Martin said, "including your trademark and good will?"

"Oh, you have our good will now, sir," put in Peale.

Rodney reflected:

"Buying us out might be expensive for you, father."

"Oh, I guess it won't take all the money I've got. What's your proposition?"

"What's yours?"

"How is the business—what are the assets and the liabilities?"

"How fortunate! It was only this morning that Mr. Peale roughly copied off the totals from our books," said Rodney.

"I try to keep up with every detail of the business," chirped Peale.

Rodney passed out the pink statement.

"There you are, father," he said.

"H'm, liabilities $133.13, assets $22,818," read Mr. Martin.

"And 9 cents," added Peale.

"That's a remarkably good showing," admitted Mr. Martin. "Well, I'll give you $50,000 for your business as it stands."

Rodney took a good hold of himself.

"But we don't want to give up our business," he protested. "I like business. I wish you'd made me go into it years ago, father."

"We wish to continue in our chosen profession," added Peale grandly.

"Well, suppose you take 25 per cent of the profits," suggested Mr. Martin.

"It's wonderful weather, isn't it," said Rodney; "these crisp, cold, bracing mornings?"

"Well, I hardly thought you'd grab at that," said Martin. "What will you take?"

Rodney rose to the occasion quickly.

"One hundred thousand dollars cash," he said; "you assume all the contracts and obligations of this company, give us 40 per cent of the profits, a contract for me at $20,000 a year, for Miss Grayson at $10,000"—Peale coughed audibly behind him—"and another for Mr. Peale at the same figure."

Mr. Martin looked at the two men a moment, chewing his cigar.

"Done," he said finally. He could see, out of the corner of his eye, Peale and Rodney exchange looks and shake hands. Well, he had come down to buy them out.

"I congratulate you, father," Rodney said.

"You needn't," said Mr. Martin. "As a business proposition I don't think much of it, but I guess it'll show old John Clark he can't butt into my family affairs or get Ellery mixed up with my boy's business."

"Yes, father, we'd much rather have you than Ellery," asserted Rodney.

"Oh, much rather," echoed Peale.

This important deal was no sooner agreed on than Miss Burke came in inopportunely and conveyed to Rodney the information that the agent of the landlord wanted to see him at once.

"Yes," said Rodney. "You see, father, we're thinking of taking larger offices," he added. "Come, Peale. We'll be right back, father."

"Yes, father, we'll be right back," echoed Peale as they went out.

Mr. Martin stood there watching them proudly.

"Bully kid!" he said; then changing to a contemptuous tone, "Ellery Clark!"

Well, that was a load off his mind at any rate, he reflected contentedly. Of course he had bought a pig in a poke, more or less. You couldn't tell whether their books were carefully audited or not. If Mary Grayson kept them they were probably pretty straight. He was glad to have the boy back anyway. And there would be no more sandwich men parades.

Altogether he was in a quite mellow mood when Mary Grayson opened the door and came in. From the look on her face she was glad to see him and extraordinarily relieved too. Alas for the soap king! He did not realize how short his satisfaction was to be.

"Why, Mr. Martin!" cried Mary happily.

"Hello, Miss Grayson!" he said. "It's mighty good to see you again."

"Oh, Mr. Martin," responded Mary, "I'm so glad Rodney finally sent for you!"

"Sent for me?" repeated Mr. Martin in surprise.

"Have you talked to him?"

"Oh, yes. He's just gone out for a minute to see the agent of the landlord."

"Oh, then he told you about that too?"

"Yes, he told me. Why not?" asked Mr. Martin, puzzled.

"Oh, I'm so glad you've settled with him. You have settled, haven't you?"

"Yes; sure."

"Oh, good! Isn't it wonderful for him?"

The relief in Mary's voice was genuine, absolutely, as Ambrose Peale would have said. Poor Mary had had a trying day. There had been that dreadful man Jones to begin with. Rodney's $2,500 check must have gone through the clearing house in double quick time, Mary had thought, as the advertising dun appeared again. The fact was, it seemed that he had gone to the bank to get it certified and was furious to find that there were no funds there of the 13 Soap company to meet it with. He roared loudly about the sheriff. Unless the check was made good at his office in an hour he would have the sheriff round and sell them out, cover up their billboards and send them all to jail.

Mary didn't know much about sheriffs, and they sounded terrifying. She had heard about the law's delay, but the law sounded swift and terrible as interpreted by the irate Jones. She couldn't laugh about it and chaff about a cell with a sunny exposure, as Ambrose Peale did. That awful countess too! A woman swindler who had tried to get into them for $5,000. And the electric agent threatening to turn off the light from all their beautiful signs if he wasn't paid at once. How unreasonable people were! How could you pay them when you hadn't any money? And now, last of all, the rent agent making a fuss. No wonder Mary had begged Rodney to send for his father and give in. She was sure old Mr. Martin would help Rodney if he was sent for. Very naturally Mary thought on seeing Cyrus Martin smoking his cigar there contentedly that he had come in answer to Rodney's summons. She went on, sighing:

"Just think, without you he couldn't have lasted out the day."

"Couldn't what?" ejaculated the astonished soap king; then, recovering himself swiftly, he added: "Quite so. Quite so. Oh, by the way, in our negotiations the one thing Rodney didn't go into fully was the nature of the assets."

"The assets!" laughed Mary gayly. "They must have amused you. Why, we haven't any."

"Ha, ha! Haven't any?" echoed Mr. Martin, trying to laugh with her.

"But everything's all right now," went on Mary sweetly.

"Oh, yes! Great, great!" said Mr. Martin. "By the way, there was a report on the street today that the Andover Soap people were going to make a deal with Rodney—build him a factory"—

"Oh, there's nothing in that," said Mary innocently.

"Are you sure? As I got here I thought I saw Ellery Clark."

"Oh, that wasn't business. He just

"Oh, what have I done?"

came to try to borrow some money from Rodney. Wasn't that funny?"

"Oh, yes, very funny," said Martin; then, changing his whole manner, he added angrily:

"The young scoundrel!"

"What!" said Mary.

"Thank you, Miss Grayson, for telling me," said Mr. Martin. "Do you know what he tried to do to me? Hold me up for $100,000, and but for you he'd have succeeded."

"Oh, what have I done?" cried Mary in distress.

"You've saved me a lot of money and kept me from being a fool. That's what you've done. Thank you. Good morning."

"You mean at last he had succeeded in getting you to back him?" cried Mary.

"At last! So that was his scheme all the time, was it? He didn't go into business on the level, but just for my benefit? And you were helping him. Well, he can thank you again for having failed."

"It's all my fault," cried Mary, breaking down.

"Yes, it was from the start. You got up the plan of my pretending to put him out of the house—a mighty silly idea."

"Oh, but I tell you you must help him," pleaded Mary.

"Help him yourself. You've got $5,000."

"But I gave it to him," cried Mary.

"My son took money from you!"

"He didn't know. I pretended it was

"It's up to me, and nobody else, to get out of this. Please go."

from a friend. It made him awfully jealous, too," blubbered Mary.

"Well, you got him in, now you can get him out," declared the soap king.

"But your bet," asked Mary—"you bet $30,000 with John Clark. You don't want to lose that, do you?"

"Well, if Ellery's trying to borrow money from Rodney it looks like an even break. And anyhow I'd lose the bet twice over rather than have my own son think he could make a fool of his father."

"But he is a good business man," pleaded Mary bravely. "He'd make you proud of him. If he could keep on a little longer I know he'd succeed. If you'll just help him he'll make money, you'll see he will."

"Of course, you want him to make money," said Mr. Martin brutally. "You're thinking of that percentage contract with me."

"I'm not—oh I'm not!" cried Mary. "I can't see him fail. I don't want you to pay me. I'll try to give you back what you've given me."

"By George, I believe you really are in love with him, too."

"Yes, I am now," admitted Mary proudly. "But that doesn't matter. We've got to save him—save his business."

"I won't give him a nickel. Goodby!"

"But you can't do like this," Mary cried. "He'd be disgraced. He's in debt—in danger."

"Let him get out of it himself, then," said this Roman father. "It'll do him good. I've been a sentimental fool. I've made it all too easy for him."

"But that's your fault, too," persisted Mary.

"Yes, it is, and I don't propose to repeat the error. He's lied to me all the way through. We'll let him face the truth now. We'll see what he's made of."

Mary just sat and looked at him quite limply, letting her hands fall idle in her lap. What could she do? To make matters worse she could hear the rumble of men's voices outside as Rodney and Peale tried to soothe the rent agent's righteous indignation. Rodney and Peale came back, trying to look cheerful, but really quite crestfallen, as Mary could see very well.

"Well, we're going to move," said Rodney.

"Yes, nice chap, that fellow," said Peale.

"Well, Mary, have you heard about our deal?" asked Rodney next.

"The deal's off," Mr. Martin interrupted brusquely.

"Yes, off," repeated Mr. Martin brusquely. "Because you took me for a bigger fool than I am. My own son can't do that to me. I've found out now that you're broke."

"Oh, Mr. Martin!" protested Mary, crying.

But Mr. Martin stopped her.

"And all the time you were lying to me about the Andover Soap people and the factory they were going to put up. You thought you could make a fool of me—get the best of me, did you? Well, you can't. I'm finished with you and your 13 Soap. You're a smart Alec. You're a complete fake."

"I guess you're right," said Rodney.

"Ah!" said Mr. Martin.

"I did try to be smart," Rodney said. "I was stuck on myself. I thought business was a cinch. But you're right. I have been a fake. This whole thing never seemed real. It was just fun—like a game. But I've waked up, and now it's serious. I tried to get the best of you, but I'll take my licking. I don't want any charity. I know what's coming to me, and I'll take my medicine."

His father looked him over curiously.

"Well, maybe I've said a little too much," he said, relenting a little.

"No; it's all true," said Rodney.

"But, see here, I don't want you disgraced," said his father. "I"—

"You told me never to come back to you for a nickel," said Rodney bravely, "and I won't."

"Now, see here," began Martin.

"Please, father," Rodney went on. "It's up to me, and nobody else, to get out of this. Please go."

He held out his hand.

"Goodby, son," he said gently and went out.

"Oh, Rodney, Rodney!" cried Mary when the office door had closed on the old man's back.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"See!" Dick waved a draft for $80 before Nell's face. "Dividend on my oil shares."

"Good!" Nell's eyes glowed.

"I'm not quite so big a fool as I was last summer," he gloated.

"Oh, I'm so glad you didn't lose that money," said Nell. "I felt worried when I thought it was all gone. Now we can have the new leather chairs for the dining room."

"Remember, this was my personal money that I invested, and of course the increase is mine to spend as I like."

"What I asked was, wouldn't you like to spend it for the chairs? We need them so badly." Nell smiled up hopefully into his face.

"You are very active in helping me spend my money, it appears. I stipulated when we entered on this arrangement that if an allowance was what you wanted, we would have allowance to the bitter end."

"Don't be a fool, Dick. I'm not supposed to buy dining room chairs with my housekeeping money, nor with my own personal fund for dressing myself and baby. If you are never to buy furniture, what do you expect us to do, go without to the end of time?"

Dick looked at the ceiling and smoked with a superior smile on his face.

"My, but you are good company," remarked Nell, looking up from her darning after the clock had ticked away ten silent minutes.

"Would you mind getting your books, your housekeeping and personal account books?"

"W-y?"

"I want to look at the footings," he answered.

"There were to be no questions asked; you just said so," she objected.

"All right, only I was going to show you mine, and compare them." Nell rose and brought the books. He opened her private expense account and beside it laid his own.

"Your memory is short, it seems. Don't you recollect we were to have the same personal allowance? Now look here; in the six months we've been trying this, how much have you saved?"

"Ten dollars," said Nell triumphantly, "and I've dressed respectably, too."

Dick was going up and down the columns. "See here. I have paid $5 a month on my oil shares. When the assessments came I had to borrow from our little bank account; that was what worried me so. I paid back all I borrowed with the first dividend, so this $80 is really saved from my personal fund, 'and I've dressed respectably, too,'" he quoted.

"You have only one to dress, I have two; it's not a fair comparison," she objected.

"That's so, I never thought of that." Dick referred again to the book. "Go over these items and check all you've spent for Hal. I'll stand half of that from my $80, and after this we'll put $5 a month aside for his expenses. If it doesn't take it all we'll put the rest in the bank in his name."

"What are you going to do with your precious money?" Nell was fingering the check.

"I'm going to turn it in to help pay for the stock. Only $30 of the $400 are paid, so you see this is not ours to spend."

"You've only paid $30 and have got back $80? That's big interest."

"Don't you want to take a share to pay for out of your allowance?" he asked.

"Could I?" she asked.

"If you could save $5 a month out of your allowance," he answered.

"How long will the oil last?" was the next question.

Dick shrugged his shoulders. "There is where the gamble comes in."

"I'll ask Mother Morton before I venture." Nell carried her books away.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL.

Health Is Worth Saving, and Some Plainfield People Know How to Save It.

Many Plainfield people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Weak kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health—the slightest delay is dangerous. Use Doan's Kidney Pills—a remedy that has helped thousands of kidney sufferers. Here is a Plainfield citizen's recommendation.

Mrs. Anthony Wahl, R. F. D. No. 1, Plainfield, says:—"I had such distressing pains in my back that I could hardly stand and it was out of the question for me to stoop. I was all crippled up and I knew perfectly well that my kidneys were the cause of the trouble. Doan's Kidney Pills gave me almost immediate relief and three boxes changed me from a chronic sufferer to a healthy woman. I still take Doan's Kidney Pills occasionally, when a cold settles on my kidneys and they act as a preventive of any serious trouble."

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Cohan and Harris will stage at the Plainfield Theatre for one performance, Monday evening, Sept. 27th, a new farce called "It Pays to Advertise", by Roi Cooper Megrue and Walter Hackett. How they came to select this play is interesting, since it was the title that made a strong appeal to their marked sense for publicity. They are probably the heaviest advertisers in the theatrical business and no plays of theirs goes on the road that is not equipped with a tremendous variety of advertising material. Looking over the titles of plays that had been submitted to the firm, Mr. Harris' eye lit upon "It Pays to Advertise" first, for some unexplainable reason, and he at once sat down and read it. When he had finished reading the play he called up Mr. Cohan by 'phone at his home at Long Beach and told him he was sending by special messenger a farce which he thought was a corker and for him to read it that night and let him have his opinion in the morning. Mr. Cohan was of the same mind as Mr. Harris regarding the value of the play as a money maker and the two partners decided then and there to produce it. So that is how the Megrue-Hackett joint production came into the hands of Cohan and Harris. It was the title more than anything else that procured a reading of the play. The play is said to contain innumerable laughable situations and witty lines. Cohan and Harris produce more farces and comedies than any other management, so their judgment is to be relied upon.

"Things new and old" will be the Rev. John Baltzly's subject at All Souls' church tomorrow morning. It will be a sermon on preaching—on the ministry of the spirit as distinguished from a ministry of the letter.

DOOLIN'S STILE.

I went walkin' out one mornin'
By Loch Bannaeraggie's side,
When the sun was just a-risin'
An' the sky was blue an' wide;
All the birdies were a-singin',
An' the whole world wore a smile,
An' I knew the sun was shinin'
On the top o' Doolin's stile.
But the heart o' me was weepin',
For a lonely man was I;
It takes two to make all perfect
On a mornin' in July.

I was walkin' with me head bent low,
Me thoughts were sad and long,
When the ears o' me were captured
By a liltin' little song.
An' me feet they double-quicked it,
While me heart kept time the while,
For I knew fair Meg was swingin'
On the top o' Doolin's stile;
An' it would have been most cruel
(An' no cruel man was I)
To have left her there all lonely
On a mornin' in July.

So I up an' says "Good mornin'."
An' the little smile she gave
Took me almost into heaven,
An' me voice would not behave;
But I managed to inform her
That I'd run full half a mile
Thinkin' that me arm was better
Than the top o' Doolin's stile.
So we two walked off together,
An' a happy man was I,
But the poor old stile was lonely
On that mornin' in July.

UNSUCCESSFUL BIDDERS ASK TO SEE ELIZABETH RECORDS

Elizabeth, Sept. 25.—Because the Board of Works had rejected the bids of the Newton Paving Company, of Trenton, the company wrote the Board asking permission to see "certain city records," which tell of tests made by J. W. Howard, consulting engineer, in behalf of the city, of paving samples submitted by the company in recent competitive bidding for improving more than a score of streets. The request was referred to a committee.

The company bid low on one street only, but all its bids were rejected on the ground that they did not meet the specifications.

The Board voted to advertise notice of intention to pave parts of Seventh and Grove streets.

STEVENS INSTITUTE OPENS YEAR WITH 176 FRESHMEN

Hoboken, Sept. 25.—Stevens Institute opened its doors once more yesterday, 176 freshmen forming the entering class. As President Alexander C. Humphreys is attending the American Gas Congress at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, the opening address was given by Professor Charles E. Kroeh, secretary to the faculty and also the oldest member of the faculty. After the address a student assembly was held, with J. Arthur Scheller, of Newark, as chairman.

Professor Homer Higley urged the freshmen to show the proper college spirit immediately, and Stewart Bell, 1911, also gave a talk along the same line. Coach George E. Rogers, of the football team; Captain Guerin Todd, of Short Hills, and Trainer "Doc" Traeger talked football.

Dr. Donald MacKenzie has been appointed instructor in French and Spanish. Dr. MacKenzie has taught at Harvard and the University of Pennsylvania.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

"The School Playgrounds," which has been playing at the Proctor Theatre since Thursday, closes its engagement at that house this evening, and all those who want to see a unique act should not fail to attend the theatre today. A glance at the bill for the first half of next week will convince one of its merits. For instance, there is the Philipi Four, singers, instrumentalists, somewhat above par—a little better than the average best. Music that hath charms to soothe the restless spirit of man is the specialty of this production, and no mistake can be made in attending the show here on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

But that is not all. Note that the great colored artists, Baldwin, Braxton and Carter, the versatile entertainers and Arabian tumblers, are included in this bill. This is an act that will please local theatre-goers. Add to this, Sorretti and Antoinette, in a novel and eccentric act, which has played in many of the larger houses, and more than made good. "Just Half Way," a novel comedy sketch, is also booked, and a number of good laughs are promised. Thomas Potter Dunn, the widely known comedian, will be among those who are to furnish the entertainment.

Those who take to classic dancing will be catered to in the Harvey-Devore Trio, in a comedy dancing review, that is sure to please the most critical of the patrons of the Proctor Theatre. Feature photo-plays are still playing a prominent part in the Proctor program, and adds considerable interest to the varied bills of this house.

In "the Game of Life" generally, as well as in want advertising, persistence wins in nine cases out of ten.

A flea and a fly, in a flue
Got caught, so what could they do?
Said the flea, "Let us fly,"
Said the fly, "Let us flee,"
So they flew thru a flaw in the flue.

An old flue, out of repair, is one of the surest fire traps, but a fire insurance policy from this office is one of the best cures.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

"The Money Master," founded on Cleveland Moffett's famous stage success, "The Battle," is the latest product of the George Kleine's studios to visit the U. S. Astor Theatre, where it will be shown this afternoon and tonight.

Frank Sheridan, favorably known to the theatre-going public, plays the part of the flinty-hearted man of millions, supported by such well known players as Paul M'Allister, Fania Marinoff and Malcolm Duncan.

The story is a blending of riches and poverty with many scenes taken in the famous East Side Ghetto district of New York. "The Money Master" is in five parts. "The Circular Staircase" will be the chief attraction on the Astor screen Monday afternoon and evening. This is a five-part Selig drama, with thrilling situations and just enough humor to afford relaxation.

Elizabeth, Sept. 25.—Except for the strike of 100 laborers at the Jenkins rubber works, the industrial troubles here, which threatened to tie up many factories two weeks ago, are over. Approximately 200 men returned to the Central Railroad shops yesterday, after Chief of Police Michael Mulcahy had conferred with the men and then reported back to the Central officials. No concessions are involved in the settlement.

ANNIVERSARY OF CATHOLIC CHURCH

Services Mark Completion of Forty Years of St. Mary's Parish.

REMARKABLE GROWTH

Father Bernard M. Bogan, Pastor, Delivers Eloquent Sermon Reviewing History of Church—Fathers McDonald and Sciolla Assist.

Beginning at 6:30 yesterday morning and ending with solemn vespers at 8 p. m., the parishioners of St. Mary's church celebrated the fortieth anniversary of the erection of the present structure, and the fifteenth of its consecration, dedication, free from debt, to the solemn service of religion. During that time four thousand, seven hundred and sixty-five baptisms have been administered, and one thousand and fifty-eight marriages celebrated. The last mass at 11 o'clock yesterday was the occasion of ceremonial celebration, the celebrant being Rev. Joseph S. McDonald, Father B. M. Bogan acting as deacon and Father Sciolla as sub-deacon.

In his sermon Father Bogan referred to the beneficient significance of each step in the progress of the parish, from its Christmas gathering in the Verdon barn over fifty years ago to the present structure crowded five times with each Sunday morning's service. "In that early day the neighbor looked with harmless contempt upon the poor, deluded Catholics of whose religion he knew nothing and for which he cared less. Today, you are respected by the intelligence of the community, while futility marks the efforts of the remnant fanatic whose hired calumniators present the sad travesty of religion to the disgust of the God-loving people of our city.

"Apostles of the laity, see to it that you preach the sermon of eloquent living where honest labor gives congregation, whether in shop or store, in office work or in the great 'out-doors.' Take for your daily text: 'My Duty' and preach in its performance the manliness of religion independent of investigation, but bent upon the approval of a well-directed conscience. The 'Boss' may not always be on watch—nor need he be—for there is an all-seeing Eye Whose gleam of satisfaction you covet. Then shall Monday be as sacred as Sunday for religion shall live in 'my duty' throughout the week day's work. That being done what matters it to you that 'infant damnation' or 'Papal immunity from sin' be served as brain food for the disordered mind free to indulge their vaporings against you. Let yours be the retaliation of honest living, and your continued contribution to an intelligent citizenship, the rest you may well entrust to the justice and let us hope to the mercy of the Lord God Almighty."

TRAIN HIT AUTO; TWO BADLY HURT

Lincoln Crossing, Scene of Two Previous Accidents, Produces a Third One.

ONE MAN IN HOSPITAL

Joseph Cashin, of This City, Seriously Hurt and Charles Fuchs, of Dunellen, Slightly Injured—Were Delivering Groceries.

Suffering from injuries, the exact nature of which cannot be determined at the present time, Joseph Cashin, of West Third street, is lying in Muhlenberg Hospital, the victim of an automobile accident, which happened on the Lincoln crossing of the Central Railroad, Saturday afternoon, shortly before 5 o'clock. Cashin, accompanied by Charles Fuchs, of First street, Dunellen, was driving an automobile delivery car across the tracks when he was struck by a westbound P. and R. passenger train. Fuchs was only slightly injured about the hips and is confined to his home in Dunellen.

The truck was reduced to splinters, and both men dragged themselves from the wreckage, Cashin exclaiming with tears in his eyes, "There is my car all gone to smash." After saying this he collapsed and the crew of the train, which had backed up to the scene of the accident, placed the injured man on a stretcher and took him to the Bound Brook depot, where temporary relief was given.

Cashin was later removed to the home of his brother, Frank Cashin, a Dunellen grocer, in whose employe he was when the mishap occurred. During lapses of consciousness Cashin conversed with physicians and members of the family concerning his hurts, and it was at first thought that he was suffering chiefly from shock. At 7 o'clock, however, his condition became such that it was deemed advisable to remove him to the hospital, and at that institution today it was said that he is suffering from serious internal injuries together with shock.

That either man escaped death in the crash is considered little more than a mircle, as the auto was overturned twice. Both were flung high in the air and landed many feet from the spot where they had been hit.

The spot where the car was hit has been the scene of two other similar accidents. Andrew Hazlin, the proprietor of a Dewey Park hotel, being killed there on August 29, 1914, while driving a truck across the tracks, and Louis L. Block, of Dunellen, being seriously injured when his wagon was struck.

At the time of his death he was pastor-emeritus of the Baponne church.

Mr. Jones was born on June 9, 1829, in Antigua, West Indies. He was educated in Albert College, England, and came to New York in 1849. Six years later he was graduated from the theological seminary, New Brunswick, and became at once pastor of the Bayonne church. He remained there eighteen years and had been pastor-emeritus since his retirement, that being the only charge he ever had.

The "tariff-instinct" in people makes the "For Sale" ads interesting to them.

CHARLES HURTT DIES SUDDENLY

Veteran Plainfield Life-guard at Asbury Park Victim of Asthma.

HELD WATER RECORDS

Had Spent Greater Portion of His Life in This City, Where he Was Popular with Younger Set—Captain of Beach Guard.

Charles Hurtt, a well known Plainfielder and for six years a life-guard at the Casino bathing grounds, Asbury Park, died suddenly at his summer home, 921 Mattison avenue, Asbury Park, Saturday, following a long illness with asthma. He was twenty-seven years of age and although he had been a sufferer from this ailment for several months he did not discontinue beach duty until last Tuesday. Friday night, as on the night before, physicians attending him administered hypodermics and when his wife went to his room Saturday she found her husband on his knees in his familiar posture while resting. He had been unable to lie down and slept propped up against the bed, finding relief in the bending position. When Mrs. Hurtt spoke to him, however, the lifeguard did not answer and she became alarmed. Summoning relatives she managed to turn her husband over and found him dead.

Hurtt was an unusually large man and comparatively short in stature. When last weighed he tipped the scales at 300 pounds, but his usual weight was about 330 pounds. He is survived by a widow and two children, a boy of three and a girl of five months; his mother, Mrs. Minnie Brown Hurtt, of Asbury Park, and a sister, Mrs. Ehrhart, of 820 South

GERMANS LOSING MEN AND CANNON

Great Drive of Allies in Western Theatre of War Successful.

TEUTONS DRIVEN BACK

Ferocious Fighting Day and Night Between Arras and La Bassee—Germans Lose 22,000 Men, Miles of Trenches and 33 Big Guns.

Paris, Sept. 27.—With the full strength of the Allies engaged in the greatest drive yet undertaken against the Germans in the western theatre of war—an offensive which has already cost the Teutonic armies more than 20,000 men in prisoners alone, thirty-three cannon and from one to three miles of territory—the assaults continue day and night. Official dispatches from the front dwell upon the ferocity of the fighting between Arras and La Bassee, where the Anglo-French forces attacked in a driving rainstorm after a bombardment of the German positions for three days and three nights without cessation.

The French war statement says:

"In Artois we mainfained our positions to the east of Souchez. Our progress at first reported as having reached the destroyed telegraph lines north of Thelus has step by step passed the Folie orchards and the Arras-Lille Highway and has been completely mantained. On the front to the south of Somme there were battles with bombs and torpedoes. In the direction of Andechy our artillery replied vigorusly to the enemy batteries, which cannonaded our positions at Queennevieres. In Champagne conflicts continue tenaciously on the whole front. We occupied several points, notably Troubrioot, north of the Wacques farm, and some positions which we had previously passed where enemy forces had succeeded in maintaining themselves. It was not 200 but 300 officers we captured in Champagne. Between the Meuse and Moselle and in Lorraine there was a violent cannonade by both sides. A violent storm in the Vosges has temporarily suspended all operations there."

Greeks Call Out 40,000 Men.

English War Committee.

London, Sept. 27.—It is announced that Premier Asquith has appointed a special committee of the Cabinet to be charged with the general oversight of the war. The committee, which is composed of the Premier, Lord Kitchener, David Lloyd George, Arthur J. Balfour, Sir Edward Grey, Lord Lansdowne, Andrew Bonar Law and Winston Spencer Churchill, will act as a sort of executive committee absorbing the functions of the Cabinet's Dardanelles' committee.

British Transport Sunk.

Marseilles, Sept. 27.—A German submarine has shelled and sunk the British steamship, "Natal Transport," 2,655 tons, south of Crete, in the Mediterranean. The crew of 34 was saved.

Germans Shift Troops.

Petrograd, Sept. 27.—Five corps, or approximately 200,000 men, are being transferred from the eastern to the western theatre of war by the German General Staff to meet the Allies' offensive, according to reports received today.

Bulgaria Calms Russia.

M. Madjarion, the Bulgarian minister to Russia, has assured Foreign Minister Sazanoff that the mobilization of the Bulgarian army is not intended for an offensive movement that will menace Russian interests in the Balkans.

British Bombard Belgium.

Amsterdam, Sept. 27.—British warships are still lying off the Belgian coast throwing shells into the German positions. The bombardment on Friday was the heaviest yet directed against the coast, says the Tyd. Many shells fell in Zeebrugge, the German naval base, causing fires and tremendous explosions. The railway station at Lisseweghe, five miles southwest of Zeebrugge, was hit.

RALLY DAY PROGRAMS IN BORO CHURCHES

Pleasing Exercises Presented in the Methodist and Presbyterian Edifices.

Rally day was observed by the Methodist Episcopal and the Presbyterian Sunday-schools in their respective churches yesterday afternoon with appropriate programs.

METHODIST.

The service of the Methodist Sunday-school was held at 2:30 o'clock. The church was decorated in autumn fashion. On two tables in front of the church and below the pulpit were all manner of fruit and vegetable piled up high, and surrounding these tables were corn stalks arranged with pleasing effect.

The service opened with the singing of "Onward, Christian Soldiers," by the school. This was followed by a prayer by the pastor, the Rev. D. W. C. Ramsey. The school then sang another hymn, "Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus." Then came the address of the afternoon by James Richard Joy, of Plainfield, editor of the Christian Advocate, the organ of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Mr. Joy commenced by giving the dictionary definition of rally, which is "a lively assembly for a common purpose; especially a reunion after disorganization." He said that rally day was held for the purpose of rallying the various Sunday-schools' organizations after the summer's partial disorganization, and gave a very pleasing talk along this line. Mr. Joy is superintendent of the Sunday-school of the First M. E. church, and during his talk he gave many helpful hints in Sunday-school work, and acquainted the assembly with the fact that the Methodists are the biggest Christian family, outside of the Catholics, in the United States.

Another feature of the service was the awarding of diplomas by Superintendent H. S. Townley to forty pupils graduating from the beginners' department to the primary, and from the primary to the juniors. The program closed with the song "The Son of God Goes Forth to War."

PRESBYTERIAN.

The Presbyterian church was comfortably filled at the rally day service of its Sunday-school, which commenced at 2 o'clock. The church was artistically decorated with American flags and the various pennants of the classes.

The program was as follows: Processional, organ; singing, the school; prayer, Superintendent George Cameron; responsive reading, congregation; graduating exercises, primary department; awarding diplomas, Assistant Superintendent T. W. Day; welcome song to new juniors, junior department; recitation, "Little Knights," Stanley Day, Jr.; graduating exercises, junior department; song, junior department; awarding diplomas, Superintendent Cameron; recitation, "Your Niche," Madaline Sutphen; report from Cradle Roll by its superintendent, Miss Van Fleet; report from home department by the superintendent, Mrs. H. J. Swackhamer; reading, "My Opportunity," Miss May V. Day; singing, school; solo, Miss Beatrice Cameron; remarks, Rev. E. R. Brown; singing, "America," congregation; benediction.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH FAIR WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

The fair of St. John's Roman Catholic church came to a close in Junior Hall Saturday night. The contest for the gold watch between Miss Margaret Ryan and Miss Catherine Rinehart was won by Miss Ryan, who collected $314.80. Miss Rinehart collected $257.62.

Owen Mohan won the gold watch contest. Mr. Mohan collected $866.95. Valentine McLoughlin, his opponent, collected $249.60. Josephine Leibel and William Guest won the card contests. Rev. Father Dunphy made the following remarks about the fair:

"I wish to thank you from the bottom of my heart, every man, woman and child who helped to make the fair such a great success. First, I thank the children, who accomplished so much. Certainly their little feet must have traveled many miles to have brought the results they did.

"Secondly, I thank the women, who, through their wonderful efforts, did so much to make our fair a success, and last, but not least, I feel greatly indebted to the men for their great work.

"My thanks goes beyond the pale of this parish, and I thank, in behalf of all my people, our good, non-Catholic friends, who were so kind and generous during the fair. It was certainly edifying to see how these good, liberal people came to our support. It is just such acts as these that broaden out and strengthen a community."

Mr. and Mrs. J. Raymond Hamley, of Washington avenue, returned yesterday from a week's vacation at Lake George.

Mrs. Martha Apgar, of Front street, is visiting her sister at Califon.

Mr. and Mrs. John P. Faber spent the week-end at Ocean Grove, the guests of Mrs. Faber's cousin, Miss Nancy Thomas.

Mrs. Grace Gangloff, of Greenbrook road, entertained her mother, Mrs John W. Goodwin, of New York, over Sunday.

Miss Alice Apgar, of Front street, was the guests of Mrs. L. T. Churchill yesterday.

TENNIS TOURNEY.

The Crescent Tennis Club was defeated on its Madison avenue courts yesterday afternoon by a team from the Bronx Field Club, of New York city. The different matches were hard fought from start to finish and brought forth some brilliant tennis the local players being a trifle unsteady in the pinches. Vernon Eckert and Alton Eckert, of the locals won their doubles match, defeating Brown and Goulden by a score of 6—6, 3—6, 6—4.

Swan and Smith, of the Bronx team, defeated Markle and Ralph Eckert, 6—4, 1—6, 6—3.

In the singles matches Fedderman lost to Smith, 6—3, 6—4, and Westcott lost to Swan, 6—3, 4—6, 6—4.

'Plains & Fanwood.

Friends and relatives of the children crowded the Methodist church yesterday afternoon when the members of the Junior League rendered a rally day program of vocal and musical numbers, as follows: A song "Our Gifts," by Irene Walker; a song by Mrs. Lewis' class; "A Little Hindu Widow," recitation, by Drissila MacAuley; song by the league; "A Little Girl's Story," by Helen Lewis; solo by Augusta Macauley on the piano; "Gather the Jewels," a recitation, by Lillian Hanson; a song by the league; "Questions and Answers," by Francis Bopp and Lillian Hanson; a song by Florence Albert and Mae Meyer; "Our Hero Missionary," a recitation by Ernest Clark; a song by the league; "The Children's Gift," a recitation, by Lena Osonato; "Missionary Fruit," by Longcor, Ethel Robinson Dorothy Bopp, Margaret Bopp and Harriet Lewis, and a song by the league as the closing number.

Fanwood township residents will experience a considerable raise in their tax rate this year, it having jumped from $1.40 to $1.55. The addition of fifteen points is due to State and county tax, as the local budget was not made larger. The borough had a raise of 10 points, making the rate $1.82, which is also due to State and county tax.

An accident occurred at the corner of East Broad street and Martine avenue about 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, when an automobile owned and driven by Albert Benson, an operator of a sawmill in the southern end of the township, and occupied by two other men, turned over while trying to avoid striking another car. Benson was returning with two employes from Fanwood, and as he started to cross the corner an auto containing several women turned from Broad street into Martine avenue, and to avoid hitting it, Benson ran off the macadam. In trying to get back on the road without diminishing his speed he turned too short and the car turned over. The fact that the top was up saved the men from serious injury, as it kept the machine from crushing them. Neighbors helped the three to get free of the car, which was nearly a wreck, the front wheels and axle being broken, besides the top, lamps and mudguards. The occupants of the other car did not stop.

Larue, of New Market, seek the nomination, and in the Democratic party William Thornton, of this place and John Evans, of New Market, are after the nomination.

FIRST ANNUAL REUNION OF SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS

The first annual reunion of Class 22, of the First Presbyterian Sunday-school, was held yesterday morning, on the church lawn, thirty-three members being present. Many of the city's original Boy Scouts were present.

Announcement was made that the Boy Scout headquarters building in Terrill road, was almost completed, and that Alexander Milne, of the Boy Scout Council, expects to have it practically completed this week. The first series of lectures for the current year entitled, "Under Cover," were closed and it was announced that next Sunday will mark the beginning of another series. This class will be formally organized next Sunday at which time an election of officers will take place.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Football practice, including signal drill and scrimmage, will be held on Parker Field this afternoon. The chilly weather ought to infuse a lot of vim into the Red and Blue hopefuls.

Inasmuch as Oracle Rally Day was not as successful as it should have been, members of the board are still looking for subscriptions. If they fail to secure 400 subscriptions the school will have no paper this year.

Chemical laboratory classes begin today.

The election of all clas offices, including a secretary for the senior class, will take place Thursday morning.

First call for basketball artists is scheduled to be issued some time this week.

MINISTER INJURED.

John Trent, a colored minister, and John Brown, eight years old, of Plainfield, were thrown out of a carriage at South Plainfield, yesterday afternoon and injured. The horse, driven by the former, became frightened at a coal train and upset the carriage. The animal ran a half-mile before it was caught. The victims were removed to Muhlenberg Hospital, where it was found that Mr. Trent's right arm was broken and a shoulder dislocated. The boy was bruised and cut. The latter afterward went home. Thomas Turnell, of South Plainfield, has the horse. The wagon was wrecked.

MICHAEL DORAN'S FUNERAL.

The funeral service of Michael Doran, who died last Thursday, in Boston, Mass., was held at that place Saturday morning. Mr. Doran was well known in Plainfield, where he lived for the greater part of his life. He was taken sick with pneumonia a week before he died. Besides a wife and child residing in Plainfield, Mr Doran leaves a number of other local relatives. He was the son of Mrs. Hanora and the late Michael Doran.

"LADIES' NIGHT" AFFAIR.

Greenbrook Council, No. 1725, Royal Arcanum, will hold a "Ladies Night" tomorrow night. The committee has made arrangements to dispense with its business session the early part of the evening and the remainder of the time will be devoted to the entertaining of the fair sex. Herman Stadele's orchestra will furnish the music for the occasion. Address s will be made by John Beach and William Ward.

TWO STORES ENTERED.

Sometime during last night thieves attempted to enter the store of George Pope on East Front street and that of the United Shoe Repairing Company, next door. In the shoe store the intruders, whom the police think were of the juvenile type, stole a number of pairs of shoes, but in the Pope establishment they got no further than the cellar. Entrance to both places was gained by breaking open back windows.

GET ANOTHER CHANCE.

Morris Levine and Benjamin Ogons, two cattle dealers, were arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning to answer to a charge preferred by Health Officer Randolph Chandler, who alleged that they violated certain health ordinances. Each was given a suspended sentence after a fine of $20 and a jail sentence of forty days had been invoked for passage on a second appearance.

KNIGHTS TO CELEBRATE.

The committee in charge of the Columbus Day program held a meeting at the Knights of Columbus clubhouse, yesterday. Arrangements are being made to secure several noted speakers for the celebration, an entertainment will be provided the attendants and a dance will follow. A full program will be announced later.

THOUGHT STEAM WAS SMOKE.

What was thought to be smoke pouring out of the store at 304 West Front street, occupied by J. A. Laurie, caused some one to turn in an alarm of fire from box 42 about 8 o'clock this morning. A radiator had been disconnected and some one had forgotten to plug up the pipe, allowing the steam to escape.

COMBAT ANTI-SUFFRAGE ARGUMENTS WITH FACTS

Combating anti-suffrage arguments with wonderful ease, and at the same time presenting the wonderful facts in favor of the ballot, W. E. Nichols, of Westfield, held an intensely interesaed audience at the Saturday night meeting held at Madison avenue and Front street under the auspices of the Plainfield branch of the New Jersey Equal Suffrage League. Mr. Nichols proved a stirring orator, telling the men why he believed in women voting and the good that would come of it.

Mrs. Anna Fries, of Glen Ridge followed Mr. Nichols, and as a campaigner she can be ranked among the best that have been heard in this city After being a resident of California for three years, voting with the women of that State, she has wealth of reasons to bring forward at all times in favor of woman suffrage.

BEGINNINGS OF NEW YORK.

Except One, Its Early Colonial Governors Were a Sorry Lot.

Queer were the instruments with which the early history of Manhattan island was fashioned. Of the four Dutch governors not one was competent. Minuit was fairly wise, but was active in furthering the patroon system, feudalism pure and simple. Wouter van Twiller, who was five feet six inches tall and six feet five inches in circumference, was a fool; William Kieft was peppery, avaricious and dishonest, and old "Silver Peg" Peter Stuyvesant was a despot.

Of the English governors all but one; and he a shining exception, were as bad as the Dutch. Lord Bellomont was the partner of Kidd, the pirate; Lord Cornbury was a degenerate who painted his face and went simpering through the streets; Sloughter was a notorious drunkard; Lovelace, Hunter, Burnet, Montgomerie, Cosby and Clark were worthless; Nicolls and Andros have little to their credit.

The exception was Thomas Dongan. We perhaps appreciate the debt America and the world owe to Dongan. The bill of rights or charter of liberties, which he drafted while governor and gave to the colonists, formed the basis of the Declaration of Independence which Thomas Jefferson wrote nearly a century later. It marked the first step in the march of events that led to the birth of this nation of freemen.

Little, perhaps, did Dongan know of the mighty consequences of his act. How could he? He ruled but a portion of Britain's colony in America. New York, named for that ill fated Duke of York who became James II., was a mudhole. Berlin was a village of 9,000. Petrograd was a marsh Constantinople vied with London for the title of greatest city of the world Boston and Philadelphia were more populous than New York. The trade of Salem was larger.—Commerce and Finance.

CANINE SLAUGHTER.

When Dogs Threatened Paris During the Reign of Terror.

It is a curious fact that the French capital was once threatened by a horde of hungry dogs. This event was associated with many other and more startling ones of the reign of terror. It was due to a very natural cause. The greater part of the aristocrats who had fled or gone into hiding kept dogs, and very few were able to make arrangements for the care of their animals when they hurriedly left their homes.

The dogs, abandoned, took to the streets and shortly began to congregate in two packs, one occupying the Champs Elysees and one the Bois de Boulogne. Soon they became a public danger, as is evidenced by the duly recorded fact that Santerre, the brewer, proposed a law that all dogs should be hanged. So, in September, 1793, when thousands of starving animals were seeking subsistence in a city not over-provided with food, drastic measures were adopted against the Champs Elysees pack.

Two battalions of the national guard surrounded the area, leaving a gap toward the Rue Royale, while hundreds of men and boys "beat the cover." The game was driven up to the Place Royale, where troops made a battue of it. Three days consecutively was this repeated, and more than 3,000 dogs lay in the place.

It is said that one Gaspardin, who was ordered to remove the carcasses being short of means to effect this, applied for the royal equipages. To the revolutionists this appeared a timely jest and the application was granted gleefully and with applause. So Gaspardin packed the dead dogs in the gilded coaches and made a state procession through Paris.—Washington Star.

SURPRISE PARTY.

A party of school friends surprised Sidney Dunning at his home on Mountain avenue, Saturday evening. During the evening dancing and games occupied the attention of the guests. Those present included Helen MacDonald, Edna Mantz, Helen Spencer, Bernice Neir and Marion Neir, Walter Debele, Irving Scarborough, Malcolm Shepherd, Stanley Burner, LeRoy Force, Jerry O'Connor, Frank and Sidney Dunning.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank D. Force, of 657 East Seventh street, are the parents of an eight-pound baby girl born to them yesterday.

Buyers Are Found by Advertising—Because They Are Opportunity-Hunters!

If you have something to sell—real estate, personal property of any sort—there's a buyer for it. You don't know who he is, or where he is. You'd be helpless in trying to locate him—but for the fact that he is trying to locate you!

For buyers are opportunity-seekers. And they have learned that the Plainfield Daily Press classified columns are 'the Happy Hunting Grounds' for opportunities. Thus, when your "ad" starts upon its quest it meets the man for whom it was written—also upon his quest. And that's how "results" follow classified advertising.

THE JOHN WANAMAKER PIANO SALONS

Now comes the sale in which there is no profit to us except in the happiness it may bring to children and the parents of children in homes where there is today no MUSIC.

Sale of Good Used Pianos and Player-Pianos

We took most of them in exchange in the regular course of our large piano business The others we have used in concerts and demonstrations. They are all the instruments we have which we cannot sell as really new.

We have gone over them all. They are in good condition. They will give good service—many of them for a lifetime. The exchanged used pianos are priced at cost to us—in some cases a little below. On exchanged instruments we do not care to make profit. The others—virtually new—show a reduction of from $50 to $215 on each instrument.

Among them are such well-known names as Steinway, Chickering, Emerson, Henry & S. G. Lindeman, Vose, Kranich & Bach, Knabe and Weber. People only part with such fine pianos when they come to the conclusion that a player-piano is indispensable in their home life.

(And it speaks well, doesn't it, for the player-pianos we sell that people should give up such splendid instruments in order to get them.)

Dividing the instruments in the sale into price-groups, we find that—

14 Upright Pianos are from . . . $ 45 to $100
20 Upright Pianos are from . . . $100 to $150
17 Upright Pianos are from . . . $150 to $175
19 Upright Pianos are from . . . $175 to $200
10 Square Pianos (each) $5, $10, $15

TEAM UNDER 600 MAY WIN FLAG

New Record For 44 Years of Baseball May Be Set.

TIGHT FIGHT IN NATIONAL.

Four Clubs In Parent Baseball Organization Have Been Nip and Tuck All Year, With Percentage Little Over .500 Mark.

A new record for the forty-four years of major league baseball will be set this season, judging from the way things stack up now. Some club in the National league is going to win the pennant with a percentage mark under 600.

Since the National league was started in 1871 there have been fifty-nine pennant struggles, forty-four in the National and fifteen in the American league. In all these struggles only one pennant was ever won with a mark under .600. The Detroit Tigers turned the trick in 1908 with .588. They just nosed out the Cleveland Naps.

The National race has been so torrid this season that the Philadelphias, although they led for a long time, have not been able to get far above the .500 mark.

If any club is going to go above .588 that club will have to cut loose from the rest of the bunch and run completely away from everybody. It does not seem likely any of the clubs can do that.

Four clubs have been bunched around the top, and all seem of almost equal strength. None has been able to pull far ahead of the other. The race is getting hotter all the time, so the chances for a new record in low percentage are very good.

In the American league things are different. There is a bigger difference in division clubs. Boston has been well over the .600 mark for some time, and Detroit has beaten that figure. There does not seem much chance for the winning team to be under .600.

ROBBY BOOSTS MARQUARD.

Brooklyn's Manager Believes Former Giant Will Prove Big Help In 1916.

Wilbur Robinson, manager of the Brooklyn Nationals, says that Pitcher Rube Marquard has many more seasons of usefulness in the box. When Robby signed up Marquard shortly after he was released by the Giants the general opinion was that his pitching days were about over. But the Brooklyn's leader thought differently, and, judging by the showing Ruben has made in several games, he will be there next season.

It was Robinson's coaching that had a whole lot to do with Marquard's great showing in the box a few seasons back, when he won nineteen straight. He believes the change of scene will materially aid the former Giant and that next season he will prove a valuable addition to the Brooklyn pitching staff.

INNOVATION PRODUCTIVE OF A LARGE CONGREGATION

Despite the threatening weather yesterday afternoon, just before the hour for vesper services at the First Presbyterian church, the Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring preached to the largest afternoon audience he has had so far this year. The innovation of providing play things for restless children during the service proved to be a great success and will hereafter be a weekly feature. The organist, H. J. Harold, is planning some special music for next Sunday afternoon.

A corps of young married women have volunteered their services to serve as matrons in the chapel for children of parents desiring to attend the vesper service, those already promising to serve being Mrs. Charles E. Herring, Mrs. Allen E. Beals, Mrs. Howard W. Satterfield and Mrs. C. Leslie Bond.

TWO CROSS PLATE ON ONE HOMER.

Two runners crossed the plate on the home run made by Jake Thielman, formerly a star in the American and National leagues, in St. Cloud, Minn., although Thielman was the first man up for St. Cloud.

Thielman hit a long one to center, and the ball struck a rabbit carousing in the long grass near the fence. The rabbit ran toward the diamond, touching second base, and sped along the base line a few jumps ahead of Thielman. Seeing the bleacher crowd, the rabbit rounded third and dashed across the plate, with Thielman close upon his heels.

"If we'd had another base to go," said Thielman, "I would have had to tell the rabbit to get out of the way and let some one run that could run."

ELI COACHES OUTNUMBER MEN FROM OTHER SCHOOLS

Former Yale football players continue to hold their popularity as coaches notwithstanding gridiron defeats for the Blue during the last few seasons. A canvass of the leading colleges has shown more Eli players acting as coaches than represented any other college or university in football annals.

Among the other eastern institutions Princeton, Dartmouth, Pennsylvania, Lafayette and Syracuse are well represented in the coaching field. In sharp contrast Harvard and Cornell have few representatives. In the west Chicago and Michigan lead, with a fair sprinkling of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Notre Dame and Illinois alumni.

SHEEPSHEAD'S BIG AUTO MEET

New Track Is Greatest In Country. Cost Over $3,000,000.

The great interest shown in auto racing is indicated by the fact that seven or eight speedways have been completed within the past year, several others are planned and before the end of 1916 there will be at least a dozen rivals of the track at Indianapolis which has had the field to itself since 1910. Among the cities which now have speedways are Chicago, Omaha, Tacoma, Minneapolis, Des Moines, Providence, Detroit and New York.

The Sheepshead Bay speedway, the New York enterprise, having the largest population to draw from and being constructed on the most expensive land, naturally represents a greater investment than any of the other tracks. The group of New York and Chicago millionaires who financed it bought the old Sheepshead Bay racetrack for the plant. About $3,500,000 was invested in the 430 acres of land needed and another $1,000,000 will have been spent by the time the track, grand stand, bleachers and other improvements are completed.

The Sheepshead Bay track is declared to be a model. It is a two mile track, seventy feet wide and constructed entirely of wood. The track is made of 2 by 4 inch hard pine timbers set edgewise, which makes the surface only two inches while the depth is four inches. The track rests on concrete joists on the straightaways and on steel girders at the banked turns. The surface is as smooth as a dancing floor, and it is so solid that there is no jar even when heavy racing cars go around the curves at 120 miles an hour.

The curves at the Sheepshead Bay track are constructed on a plan different from any other track. The inclines are compound curves which make the ends of the track gigantic bowls. The steepest inclines are such that the outside of the seventy-foot track is twenty-six feet higher than the inside. This arrangement will make it possible for cars to negotiate the curves at a speed of 140 miles an hour without running so close to the edge of the track as to be dangerous.

When Barney Oldfield and Dario Resta inspected the track a few days before the final planks were laid in the flooring they were highly pleased. "The man who wins the Astor cup," said Oldfield, "will go more than 100 miles an hour for the 350 miles."

"That will be easy on this track," said Resta. "It will not be necessary to shut off power in going around the curves, and I expect to make a good many miles in thirty seconds."

The date for the Astor Cup race was set for Oct. 2, the formal opening of the track. The cup, donated by Vincent Astor, is twenty-seven and one-half inches high and twenty inches in diameter at the biggest place. It has a racing car going at full speed in relief on one side and is beautifully chased. It will be raced for annually for five years and will then become the property of the entrant scoring the highest number of points.

Prizes aggregating $50,000 were offered by the Speedway corporation for the Astor Cup race, the first prize being $20,000 and the second $10,000.

The grand stand and bleachers have a seating capacity of 120,000, and half as many more can be accommodated inside the oval. The track is inclosed on each side by a concrete wall thirty inches high and twelve inches thick, which insures safety for the spectators.

TRINITY PEOPLE HEAR MISSIONARY

Dr. Paul W. Harrison Tells Interesting Story of Work in Arabia.

CORDIALLY RECEIVED

Life and Customs of the Arab Are Pictured in a Vivid Manner—Many Are Converted Through Teachings of the Missionary.

Dr. Paul W. Harrison, who has just returned from the mission fields of Arabia, where he was working as missionary from Trinity Reformed church, this city, under the direction of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed church in America, occupied the pulpit at Trinity church yesterday morning, after he had spoke at the Bible school rally. Rev. J. Y. Broek, the pastor, in introducing Dr. Harrison, said it land of Arabia itself, but the work is home, one whom all love so dearly. Dr. Harrison said:

"It is a mistake to think of a missionary as sent out by a church to do its work in Arabia. We all of us work together for that field. Some are placed by God in Plainfield to do their share, and some work in the land of Arabia itself, but the work is one, and in God's sight, one sort of work is just as important and just as acceptable as another.

"Unto us, less than the least of all saints, has this grace been given to proclaim unto the Gentiles (the Mohammedans) the unsearchable riches of Jesus Christ. We are a small denomination, not over 125,000 in all, perhaps, yet it has pleased God to give to us what is possibly the most difficult and most important of all the tasks that the Christian church faces today. Mohammedanism has never been defeated. No province she has gained has been given up. The center of this faith is in Arabia, and in that part of Arabia which it is our task to enter and occupy for Christ. It is both an honor and a responsibility that God should have chosen us for a work as hard and as important as this.

"And what is being attempted and accomplished in Arabia? What are we out there for? In the first place there are many things that we are not out there for. We are not out in Arabia to tell the people what sort of food to eat and what sort of clothes to wear. They have learned already, better than we can teach them. We do not desire to teach them how to build houses like our own. Their houses need more light and sun and hygiene generally, but our primary purpose in Arabia is not this. We are not in Arabia to teach the people to read English literature and to think after the fashion of ourselves. We are not there to teach them good government. In their simple way they already govern their small communities exceedingly well. We do not care even to build up the Dutch Reformed church in that country. What, then, are we trying to do? What is it that the Arabs need?

"The Arab is desperately poor. He is indescribably dirty in his habits, his surroundings are ugly, he is the victim of many diseases. His life is cruel and immoral. The longer that we observe him, however, the stronger grows the conviction that in none of these external things does his real need lie. A blind man cannot see colors, and no more can a Mohammedan Arab see the wrong in his practices, and the beauty of the Christian faith. Until there is a new heart created, it is vain to attempt the correction of the manifold things that make Mohammedan life so hideous. The Arab's need is to be born again, just as the Bible says.

"So missionary work resolves itself into the simple effort to place before the Arab the life and the teachings of Jesus Christ. Nothing more than this, and nothing less. The missionary services might be attended for months and nothing would be heard derogatory of their faith. Nothing against their sacred book, the Koran; and never anything against their prophet. Our task is to present to them the Lord Jesus Christ, to make His example clear and His teachings plain. It is for this that we established preaching services. It is to accomplish this that we have hospitals and schools. And this work is often carried on against great obstacles. It is frequently impossible for a missionary even to reside in a Mohammedan village, unless there is also an established medical work to co-operate. In not a few instances even the doctor cannot gain admission.

"And what has been done? In the first place, a foothold has been gained. We have established work in many places, and apparently the time is near when we can set up our work in the very center of Arabia. This is only the beginning, but it is a very necessary beginning, and we thank God for it. In the second place, many obstacles have been overcome. The extreme bitterness of opposition is melting away. We are at least respected in most places, and the people know that the grotesque stories of hideous practices in our houses are not true. We can say more. In many places we have a certain number of sincere friends among the Arabs. Friends who are prepared to stand by us even at some cost to themselves.

"And finally, hearts are being won to Jesus Christ. This is the great test, indeed it is the only test. Unless our work reaches to the hearts of men and wins them for our Lord, it is in vain. In the midst of persecution, trouble, difficulty and perplexity, a few are seeing the vision of Jesus Christ and giving up all to follow. Numbers are small, and it is the weak things that God is choosing to put to naught the things that are mighty. There are three women in Bahrain who are open Christians, and for weeks one of them suffered a beating each Sunday that she dared come to church. But in the face of all these things they are proving faithful, and the Church of Jesus Christ in Arabia is beginning to appear.

"We are co-worers for Arabia. Let us not forget these little ones, who are emerging from darkness into the light of Christ. Ignorant of the rudiments of Christ's teachings, perplexed by customs and practices that are totally new and strange, opposed by the forces of earth and hell, they need all the help that we can give. And let us pray for the whole work, that the right methods may be used, that the missionaries' Christian grace may be made sufficient to endure all the little annoyances and all the large difficulties that he faces. So shall God's name be glorified and His kingdom be advanced, even in a field as hard and as important as Arabia."

The only fight of note on in the borough of North Plainfield is that for the Republican nomination for collector. This election is but for an unexpired term of one year, but there are five active candidates in the field. William J. Trembath, a member of the Dutch Arm's (Men's Club Band), is strenuously urging his candidacy and he has the support of the Dutch Arms' Club and the Young Men's Republican club, of North Plainfield. A rally will be held by the latter organization tonight in his interest. Opposing him is James K. Arnold, former borough clerk, who has strong political backing; Frederick A. Martin, Frank Rowley and John V. E. Vanderhoef, the present collector.

William L. Smalley is unopposed for mayor of the borough.

No Socialists are in the field in this borough, and the Democrats have but two candidates out. One is Samuel S. Swackhamer, who seeks the nomination for member of the general assembly. The Republicans have two men aspiring to this honor. They are William De La Roche Anderson and Ogden H. Hammond.

Edward E. Kenney is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for county committeeman. He is unopposed. Edward P. T. Smith seeks this honor on the Republican ticket. Other Republican candidates are:

CHAS. HURTT DIES SUDDENLY

Seventeenth street, Newark. The body will be brought to this city today and the funeral services will be held in Vincent chapel tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, the Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson officiating. Interment will be made in Hillside cemetery.

Having lived here since he was nine years of age, Hurtt was probably one of Plainfield's best known young men. His singular stature and remarkable aquatic ability, exhibited in local swimming "holes," gained for him a large acquaintance and he was known everywhere as "Fat" Hurtt. He was educated in the local public schools, following the removal of his family to this city from Manasquan, where he was born.

With Frank Kelley, of Asbury Park, Hurtt had been stationed at the Casino bathing grounds for six years and was a familiar figure to all who bathe at that point. The big brown mountain of flesh had many thrilling rescues to his credit, both in the Asbury Park surf and in southern climes, where he sometimes served as a life-guard in the winter months. He had also earned laurels as a long distance amphibian and had few equals as an endurance swimmer. On two occasions he swam sixteen miles without a rest from the Battery to Coney Island. He was one of the contestants in the race over this course in 1907, finishing second, and the following year he finished third in a similar race. In 1909 he was disqualified from amateur competition on the grounds of his being employed in the summer months as a life-guard.

Hurtt gained his first knowledge of the water art in "Sandy's," a swimming hole located in Greenbrook, near Clinton avenue, and even in later years he has frequently taken his spring training dips at this place.

He was the son of the late Lurine C. Hurtt, who for many years was a conductor on a local commuters' train to New York and who dropped dead while collecting tickets one morning as the train was passing through Elizabethport. Several years ago a brother, Louis Hurtt, a bakeman, was killed on the Central Railroad tracks near Grant avenue.

SCHOOL MAP OF U. S. FOR ONE CENT

Five Copies Are Sold for Three Cents if Included in Larger Order.

School-teachers who are not familiar with the many and various maps published by the United States Geological Survey will be interested to learn of a small map of the United States which is sold by that bureau at the nominal price of 1 cent. This map shows rivers, lakes, State boundaries, State capitals, and principal cities, but not the less important features, whose numerous names and symbols tend to create obscurity and confusion. This map does not show heights or mountain ranges. It measures 8½ by 21 inches and its scale is 260 miles to 1 inch. Five copies of the map are sold for 3 cents if an order for them is included in any order for maps amounting to $3.

The Survey publishes also maps of the United States on larger scales, one on a scale of about 190 miles to 1 inch for 5 cents retail, and one on a scale of about 110 miles to 1 inch, with contours to show relief, or without contours, for 15 cents retail. The wholesale prices for these maps are 3 cents and 9 cents, respectively.

A relief map of the United States measuring 18 to 28 inches, on a scale of 110 miles to the inch, is sold for 15 cents, or for 9 cents if an order for it is included in an order for maps amounting to $3. This map shows the rivers, principal cities, and State boundaries, and is shaded in colors to show the heights above sea level of all parts of the country.

Orders for these maps should be addressed to the Director, U. S. Geological Survey, Washington, D. C., and accompanied by remittance, in cash or postal money order.

CONTRACT IS MADE FOR COAST SURVEY

Secretary Redfield Awards Work to Manitowoc Shipbuiding & Dry Dock Co.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 27.—The contract for the construction of a new United States Coast and Geodetic Survey vessel has been awarded by Secretary of Commerce Redfield to the Manitowoc Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, located on Lake Michigan at Manitowoc, Wisconsin. The contract price was only $189,000 for the bare hull and machinery, but the ultimate cost of the vessel fully equipped will be $220,000.

The new vessel will be named the Surveyor and will be used in surveying and charting the dangerous waters of Alaska and the Bering Sea in the summer and the coasts of Washington, Oregon and California in the winter.

The Surveyor will be a steel steamer of about 1,000 tons displacement, with triple expansion engines and will use crude oil as fuel. She will accommodate 66 officers and men and carry enough fuel and stores to stay at sea on a surveying cruise for about three months at a time without returning to her base of supplies.

According to the terms of the contract the Surveyor must be completed within one year, but Vice President West, of the Manitowoc Company, who came to Washington to consult with E. Lester Jones superintendent of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, about the construction of the vessel, says she will be finished in much less time, possibly as early as the first of next August, which will leave ample time to take the vessel to the Atlantic coast before the close of navigation in the Great Lakes.

A remarkable feature of the award of this contract lies in the fact that a shipbuilding company located on Lake Michigan should build an ocean going vessel destined for service in Alaska. This brings home the important commercial fact that after all the Great Lakes extending for into the interior of the American continent are for all practical purposes a part of the Atlantic Ocean. It also speaks well for the enterprise of the shipbuilding company which is to build the vessel.

Secretary of Commerce Redfield is much pleased at the prospect of getting the new vessel ahead of time. He considers the charting of the waters of Alaska a vital part of the work of his department.

ROOSEVELT AND BRYAN.

Political prophets are already beginning to figure the effects of the disrupting influence of Bryan in the Democratic national convention of 1916 and that of Roosevelt in the Republican convention. There are many, however, who still believe that Mr. Bryan will refuse to become a lone filibuster at a time of need to his party. Such an action would hardly be in keeping with his public utterances of the past few months and Mr. Bryan cannot be condemned as a bolter until further evidence is in.

Even though Roosevelt does not show his teeth in the Republican national convention his strength, or rather that of the Progressive party, will be a deciding factor in the election of 1916. There are more than 1,000,000 progressive voters who really demand progressive policies and there is little hope of such planks in the Republican national platform.

As an indication of the preparations that being made by the Progressives witness the following from Victor Murdock, chairman of the national committee:

"It is impossible for the Progressives to get together with the Republicans. The Republicans cannot throw off the influence of former Senator Root and William Barnes. The chances are that the Republicans will nominate William Howard Taft. This will give us an excellent chance to show that we mean business. This will call for a vigorous candidate and a vigorous platform."

Herbert S. Hadley, former governor of Missouri, and a Progressive leader, says:

"If a conservative platform is adopted and a conservative or reactionary candidate named by the Republicans it is not improbable that the Progressive party will control enough votes in close states to give the election to the Democrats. * * At all events it is well to realize that a party that polled 1,500,000 votes in 1914 cannot be disregarded in forecasting results in 1916, and it is not wise to base too much hope on the disturbing and disorganizing capacity of Colonel Bryan in the next Democratic convention."

All of which practically puts the re-election of Wilson up to Mr. Bryan.

VICTORY FOR SUFFRAGE.

Plainfield suffragists were much encouraged the other day by the interview given by Mrs. Everett Colby, formerly Miss Edith Hyde, of this city, in which she said:

We'll win in New Jersey without the shadow of a doubt. Every intelligent thinker agrees that fundamentally suffrage is right, but some urge that, because of sex, it should not be granted.

Those are encouraging words to the suffragists, says the Trenton Times, who should be inspired to greater effort during the three weeks that remain of the campaign. A great victory will help the cause in New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, which will vote on suffrage amendments a few weeks later. Every man who is entitled to vote for members of the General Assembly may vote on the suffrage amendment.

This is a press notice of a theatrical attraction that is unsolicited by the Plainfield Theatre. We would be unfair to our own profession if we did not urge every reader who would spend a delightful evening to attend the performance of "It Pays to Advertise," at the Plainfield Theatre tonight. This comedy, undoubtedly the brightest and cleanest that has graced the boards in New York in years, demonstrates the advantage of using advertised articles in a way that no argument which we could possibly present would do it. While it carries a lesson which every merchant and every advertisement reader knows to be true, it at the same time is a typical American play. We hope that there will be a crowded house to greet the company.

New Jersey voters are letting slip their fast-fading opportunity to lord it over their wives and sweethearts. Tuesday is the last primary in which men alone shall be a factor, for the women are going to control the next one and, after that, they will let us in on election day if we are properly dressed, shaved and powdered.

There's ten times the interest in the world's baseball series, which begin next week, than is evidenced in the primaries which take place tomorrow. We cannot recall when things have been so quiet regarding politics as they are this year.

Young New York social leader walked down Fifth avenue last week with a live fox to match her fur. If our memory serves us right as to the favorite food of a fox, she was a very brave little girl.

Victor Murdock says that Roosevelt will run for president if he is convinced he can win. We thought he was original.

All men are sinners by nature, says the Bible. And by practice.

MRS. PEARSON'S DEATH.

Mrs. Pearson, wife of John F. Pearson, died at her home, 53 Wilson avenue, yesterday. The funeral will be held Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, in charge of the Plymouth Brethren.

Mrs. Pearson had been a resident of the borough for over forty years. She was born at Mt. Horeb and was the oldest daughter of the late Samuel Giddes, whose family were among the earliest settlers in Somerset county. Besides her husband, Mrs. Pearson leaves three daughters and one son.

Our Poorest Paid Profession

There stands an old man on the street,
With shiny elbows, shiny seat,
With harried look upon his face
As though he bore some deep disgrace.
Yet all he's done was, years on years,
To teach our chicks—precocious dears!—
For barely what it took to keep
Him in some food and where to sleep.

Now in his age, with high-brow tastes
And low-brow bank account, he wastes
His nervous energy in worry,
Unmixed with "Ray's" or "Lindley Murray,"
As to the way he may provide
For her who's struggled at his side.
Long years ago they two gave up
Their hope of more than shed and sup.

Their children missed, through poverty,
The college life that he and she
Had planned for them. Their dreams have died.
They are engrossed with how to tide
Them over through the long, long years
They're due to walk this vale of tears.
For he—'tis common! Do not sob!
Is due ere long to "lose his job!"

The Lincoln Highway

Fifty years from now the ultra ignorant will think Abraham was named after the road they all travel on.

Garage men along the Lincoln Highway are naming their places after the road, and the patrons are naming the garageurs "Lincoln highwaymen."

At present there are a few miles of the road you can travel on, but the only way you can stay enthusiastic about the movement is not to own an automobile or to keep it put away in mothballs.

You start out for a long trip on the Lincoln Highway and go four miles to a sign saying:

"Road Closed."

Then you detour for forty miry miles to another three-mile stretch leading you to another cross-bar bearing the familiar legend.

One sees more signs "Road Closed" than he sees of blue cap L's on a white splotch on a post, until he wonders which is its right name—"Lincoln Highway," or "Road Closed."

Some day there will be more of the former, and everybody will call the movement blessed.

But at present, calling the little bit that is fit for use "a trans-continental highway" is like hanging a black rubber trousers-button in a window and labelling it "a pair of full-dress pants."

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

A Friend In Need

IN TIME of sickness friendship is displayed as much in that which is not done as in that which is done. A friend is a person who feels privileged to reason with one about one's mistakes and doesn't. The friend in need in the sickroom is the fellow who can blow in, smile in the face of despair, absorb all the gloom he finds lying about the place, and blow right out again before anybody has time to be tired. He comes in without knocking and departs the same way. He takes it for granted you and your family know enough to know which doctor or what treatment you ought to have. He withholds his advice until you ask for it. His visit is as welcome as a north breeze in dogdays. You really hate to see him leave.

Mrs. Gamp is different. She slips in the back door when she sees the doctor arrive. She gradually works her way toward the sickroom—after the doctor has gone—and breaks in by hook or crook for a little visit with the patient. In her opinion there is something not quite right about the progress of the case—she believes a change of doctors is a good thing now and then. She changes doctors herself once a week or so; she never lets 'em fool her, no siree. These doctors don't know any too much, some of 'em. Now, there's Dr. Nicer—they do say he's fine in fever cases. He cured Jennie Soso when all the others had given her up. And besides, between friends——

Mrs. Gamp is a very numerous person, and not always of the same sex. She is accountable for a whole lot of misfortune in the sickroom—she and her "worm" theories. She is a born diagnostician, Her experience extends back to the time of Noah and what she doesn't know never worries her a little bit.

As one of our readers exploded recently: "I am sick and tired of having all the old women of both sexes stopping me on the street to exclaim, 'Why, how dreadfully you look! Are you sick? Why, you're as pale as a sheet! Why don't you try——' and they suggest everything from "sarsaparilly' to whiskey straight!"

If a friend notices any evidences of bad health he thinks twice before mentioning it. On the contrary he compliments you on your looks—and there is a hint worth remembering: If you want to make people like you, get the habit of telling them how fine they are looking. If you meet a woman friend who is growing too stout, remark how well she is preserving her slender figure; or if she is too skinny, ask her if she isn't piling on flesh these days. You will raise your stock several points every time you perpetrate a good little lie like that. I shall have more to say on this subject later.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Ice-Cream Is Fattening

Is ice-cream fattening? I am a girl eighteen years old and weigh 135 pounds. I am only five feet three inches tall and I eat a lot of ice-cream, three dishes a day, and I have gained over ten pounds in two months.

Answer—It is more fattening than some fresh cream is. It all depends upon the purity of the cream. Good ice-cream, next to pure candy, is about the best luxury a skinny woman can afford—or her husband or affianced or friend.

Vest Pocket Essays

BY GEORGE FITCH

OLIVES

THE olive is a fruit with the manners of a pickle. It belongs to one of the oldest families and was mentioned in literature two thousand years before the alligator pear was invented.

The olive grows on a dusty colored tree and prefers countries which are dryer than Kansas after a local option election. It has two specialties—producing puckers and oil. When the olive is eaten in its green state it acts upon the human frame like an unripe persimmon and ties the face of the eater into an exceedingly hard knot. Eating a fresh young olive newly plucked from the tree is more unpleasant than eating a few fresh words addressed to the boss in a moment of anger.

When the olive is plucked at the proper time and squeezed in a sort of prehistoric cider mill it produces olive oil. This is very nutritious and fattening. Most of the characters mentioned in the Bible had olive oil for a steady diet. There are many tribes to-day in old and dusty portions of the earth which would dry up and blow away if they were not moistened regularly with olive oil.

The olive tree originally grew only around the Mediterranean Sea, but like every other good thing has emigrated to America and can now be found in vast numbers in California. It is not a large tree, rarely attaining a height over twenty-five feet. However it consumes several hundred years in getting its growth. Nothing is more permanent in the fruit line than an olive orchard. The armies of the B. C.'s wiped out the population of a country without any hesitation, but were careful not to destroy the olive orchards. However in the present state of international law it would be a very reckless orchard which did not move out at the approach of a modern army.

Eaten in its green state it acts upon the human frame like an unripe persimmon

When the olive is not ground into oil it is pickled and eaten whole. Shiploads of olives are eaten in this country each year, but very few people who eat an olive for the first time forget their manners in grabbing for a second helping. Learning to like an olive is as much of a task as learning to appreciate impressionist art. Many a young man has sat at a fine party, slipping olives into his pocket and eagerly shouting for more, because his early education was neglected.

Views Of The Press

Cultivate Cheerfulness

IN SAN FRANCISCO a woman died recently and when her will was opened it was found she had given $10,000 to a girl who had nursed her once for five weeks, says the Kansas City Star.

"I make this bequest because she was always so cheerful in spite of everything; I never saw her display impatience nor bad temper," read the will.

Two thousand dollars a week just for being cheerful!

Readers of the Star recall the story of patient, cheerful Mrs. Dill of the Kansas side who toiled all day and often far into the night, cleaning cars in the railway yards, the mother of twenty-one children, rearing seventeen children of her own and five or six other children, taking two foundling babies into her crowded home last week and exclaiming with a laugh: "The more the merrier."

Not a wayward, petulant child in the whole lot! She never whipped one of them and yet each was obedient, dutiful and cheerful. They had imbibed cheerfulness from her, and a cheerful person cannot be very bad, for with cheerfulness must go goodness of heart.

"A merry heart doeth good like a medicine," said Solomon thousands of years ago.

And just the other day Mr. Dixon, health commissioner of Pennsylvania, said the same thing in a more modern way:

"Cheerfulness and good health go together, and there is a distinct connection between mental depression and physical illness," he said.

Doctors may disagree about some things, but about the influence of cheerfulness and its opposite, gloominess, upon the general health they all agree. In the old days, a gloomy, cheerless, peevish person was said to be "splenetic." The belief was that something was wrong with his spleen; and so there was, but it was not the spleen that made him peevish—it was his peevishness that affected his spleen. Doctors have found out since then that a fit of what we call grouchiness actually causes an excessive flow of bile and affects the liver and spleen and the general health.

A habit of cheefulness pays big dividends in health and in good fortune, too.

"I simply did my duty in being kind and cheerful," said the girl in San Francisco whose merry heart had made her rich.

"I kept a cheerful mind myself through everything and taught my children to be cheerful, too, and everything turned out well," said the mother of many children in this city.

Things generally turn out well for the cheerful soul.—Chico, Cal., Record.

Pepper Talks

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

Partners

Marriage should be first, last and all the time a Co-partnership. It is fifty-fifty clear through, or else one is taking more than the other gets, in which case neither secures the highest percentage of returns in Happiness.

A Partnership is no Partnership unless there is equal contribution according to ability.

A business Partnership is of the greatest value where there is Individuality—where there are distinctly separate Abilities. The Partnership between a man and woman in Marriage should be exactly the same. There is a division of Responsibility. For Marriage in its highest form of Success is where each Partner makes good in Responsibility.

Each Partner should be glad and willing to share equally in Responsibility.

A business Partnership would not last long with each Partner assuming the duties of the other. Nor would it last long if one Partner should begin to limit or curtail the free Individuality of the other. A Human Being moulded and fashioned after the Ideas of another into a mere Duplicate is of little value to anyone.

The Happiest Marriages are those where each admits the freest expression of the other's Personality.

The man who carries to his home the unimportant or trivial cares that infest his day, or the woman who greets her husband with the little annoyances and worries of her day, does not fulfill the highest agreements of a Partnership.

Grasp with Smiles and Cheer and Enthusiasm the duties that belong to your side of the Partnership. Make good and you will be inspired at the effect of this upon your Partner in making good.

Current Poetry

Antiquity

A Chair encumbers our dim hall.
Moth-eaten is its faded seat;
Its legs are short, its back is tall;
'T is but a trap for passing feet.
You cannot sit upon the Chair,
Its framework is so very weak;
But Wife insists its place is there
Because it's real antique.

A Table came from our home town.
'T was shaky, scratched, and full of nicks;
One leaf folds up and one folds down;
It holds a brace of candlesticks.
It wobbles if you go too near;
The knobs are chipped, the drawers all leak;
Yet it has come to stay, I fear,
Because it's real antique.

A Bed has shown up to replace
The staunch couch where I sought repose;
Bold Cupids stare me in the face;
The hanging draperies brush my nose;
And each one of the post quartette
Has a distinctly different squeak;
Yet Wife is singing paeans yet
Because it's real antique.

All through our house it's just the same;
I'll grin and bear it, I suppose.
Perhaps, when I get worn and lame,
And dull and careless of my clothes:
Perhaps, I say, they'll prize me then,
And in endearing terms they'll speak,
And praise me to my fellow-men,
Because I'm real antique!

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How Carlo Pulled Bibbley Wah Out of the Brook.

"ONE of the pets on the uncle's wonderful farm was a big shepherd dog by the name of Carlo. He was intelligent enough to bring the cows home from pasture every night, and when the boys were busy he took care of Bibbley Wah," began daddy.

"Not very far from the home there was a beautiful little brook which ran through a pleasant meadow. Willow trees threw their feathery leaves across it, and fresh water cresses lined its bed. Smooth stones made the bottom so clean that you could see the minnows dart, and mosses and wild flowers lined its bank. It was probably the nicest brook that a little girl ever grew up beside, and Bibbley Wah and Carlo spent hours wading in it.

"How far from the house was it?" asked Jack.

"Not very far. Near enough so the cook could bring over cookies and milk every afternoon about 3 o'clock. Now, a beautiful country road overhung with maples and bordered with grass ran past the brook, which had an old, bent bridge across it. When teams came rumbling down the road and people passed over the bridge the children used to run underneath it to hear the echo. It sounded just like an army crossing. And, besides, when Bibbley Wah waded she used to wind her dress up into her belt so not to get it wet, and, being rather shy, she did not like to have strangers see her. Under the bridge was a good place to hide, too, when any one came to tell the children it was time to come home.

"Well, one fall day, when the beautiful brook had been filled very high with the autumn rains, the kiddies all went out to play in it. It was great fun to float shingle boats down its stream, to wade in up to one's waist, scream with joy and dash back up the slippery bank. The boys started in to dam up the pool for a skating pond at Thanksgiving and left Bibbley Wah and Carlo to take care of themselves."

"Bibbley Wah is going to fall in!" cried Jack.

Daddy smiled. "The water was so high that the room under the old bridge was all gone. Soon a pair of black horses came trotting down the road, and, being all wet and mussy, Bibbley Wah started to duck out of sight under the bridge. Her little foot tripped on a slippery stone, into the brook she splashed, and the wagon made so much noise that the boys did not hear her scream. Only the faithful Carlo heard. Into the brook he dashed, grabbed Bibbley Wah by her dress and, swimming across to the other side, laid her on the grass."

"Carlo saved her life, didn't he?" cried the kiddies.

"Probably, for the water was very high and the boys busy," said daddy.

Household Hints..

SCISSORS AND THIMBLE.

A handy way to carry scissors and thimble in a workbag is to take a cork that fits into the thimble. With lustre silk crochet a cap, single crochet and take up two threads of previous row and widen as necessary until large enough to pull well over the cork at the large end, leaving a small space there for the ends of the scissors to be stuck in. Thus the scissors are well protected and the thimble over the small end is easily found.

WEDDING PRESENT.

If funds are low and a wedding present is a necessity make the bride a "memory" book—or books—covering stiff backed blank books with pretty silk. Inside have the titles indexed—books, business addresses, Christmas lists, garden lists, invitations, new dishes, etc.

A companion book can be made and filled with "own" tried recipes from friends.

UNIVERSAL PICKLE.

Six quarts vinegar, one pound salt, one-fourth pound ginger, one ounce mace, mustard and celery seed. Tablespoon whole allspice, cloves and stick cinnamon. Several pieces horse radish, some nasturtium seeds and a bunch dill. Couple green or red peppers sliced and some small onions. Now add from time to time such vegetables as you like. Pickles, boiled carrots, beans, celery, onions or use just pickles alone. Mix them each time you add new ones. This keeps indefinitely.

SOME PIES

Lemon Custard Pie—One quart milk, four eggs (separate whites and yolks), two lemons (juice and grated rind), one small lump butter, one large cup sugar, two heaping tablespoons cornstarch. Boil all until thick and well cooked. Save whites of three eggs for meringue. Line two pie pans with pastry, prick with fork and bake in oven until done. Then add filling, cover with meringue and return to the oven to brown.

Mock Lemon Pie—One cup sugar, one heaping tablespoon flour, yolks of two eggs (save white for top of the pie), one teaspoon extract of lemon, two-thirds cup boiling water, two-thirds cup of stewed pieplant. Mix sugar, flour, eggs and extract together; then pour on the water, then the pieplant. Bake with one crust. When done, beat the whites to a stiff froth and spread over the pie, setting it back in the oven for four minutes.

Cocoanut Custard Pie—Beat four eggs until light, add gradually one cup sugar, two tablespoons flour moistened with mlik, one pint milk, one pint cocoanut; mix thoroughly, add one teaspoon vanilla; bake in pie pans lined with paste.

Apple Meringue Pie—Stew and sweeten juicy apples when you have pared and sliced them; mash smooth and season with nutmeg or stew some lemon peel with them and remove when cold. Fill your pans and bake till done. Spread over the apples a thick meringue made by whipping to a stiff froth the whites of three eggs for each pie, sweetening with a tablespoon of powdered sugar for each egg; flavor this with rose of vanilla; beat until it will stand alone and cover the pie three-fourths of an inch thick. Set back in oven until meringue is well set. Should it color too darkly, sift powdered sugar over it when cool; eat cold. Peaches are even more delicious when used in the same manner.

Butterscotch Pie—One cup butter, two cups dark brown sugar, four eggs, four tablespoons flour, seven-eighths cup granulated sugar, one cup milk, few grains salt, one-half teaspoon lemon extract, flaky pastry. Melt sugar, add butter and flour blended together, then the milk. Cook three minutes, remove from heat, add egg yolks slightly beaten and the salt; strain if necessary and cool. Fill individual shells of flaky pastry, baked over inverted tins. Cover with meringue made from the egg whites and granulated sugar. Beat whites until stiff, gradually add two-thirds of the sugar, and continue beating till the mixture will hold its shape. Fold in the balance of sugar and flavor with lemon extract. Brown in slow oven. A teaspoon of acid jelly may be spread over the pie before the meringue is added.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Turning of the Tide.

IT was a sad and chastened little company that met in the office next morning. Peale was cast down for once in his life. Mary was pensive, and only Rodney knew that inner glow that gives the silver lining to the cloud of ill luck and poverty. Mary had kissed him. He must put that in his book of days.

Mary looked at him anxiously and seemed relieved to find him not entirely cast down. She had been wretched herself, she said, worrying over the betrayal of her lover to the old soap king and began again to bemoan her bad break.

"Oh, Rodney, Rodney," she said to him, "it was all my fault! Your father had no idea of the truth. I didn't understand. I told him about our company—I did it all—betrayed you."

"But you didn't mean to. It's all right, Mary," said Rodney, reassuring her.

"You forgive me?" asked Mary, looking him in the eyes.

"Why, of course—I love you," he said simply.

"Oh, Rodney, I'm so sorry!" Mary began again.

"But if father thinks just because he laced into me I'm licked he's all wrong," he declared stoutly. "Maybe I have been a fake, but, by George, I won't be any longer!"

"You're really going on?" Mary asked.

"When I've got you you bet I am," declared Rodney. "Do you really think a long speech from father and no money to work with are enough to stop me? No, sir. What father said got me for a minute, but I'm not a quitter, and I'll prove it. I'll get out of this mess the best way I can, and then I'll shine shoes or sell peanuts. I'll start at the bottom instead of finishing there. I'll make money—I'll"—

"Oh, Rodney, Rodney, now I am proud of you!" Mary interrupted.

Good old Ambrose Peale had been most sympathetic that morning too.

"Peale, I'm sorry," said Rodney, "but you're fired."

"Oh, no, little boss," said Peale, "you can't fire me! I'm just going to stick around, whatever happens."

Ambrose stuck. In fact, they all stuck. They decided to pay the balance of the month's rent out of their assets and gave a note to Jones to stave him off, as Peale said. Mary protested that a note was money; that it had to be paid some time, but Peale declared that time was money too, and something was sure to happen in the next thirty or sixty days. He felt it in his bones. He pegged away at his advertising meanwhile. It was his dissipation, the liquor in which he drowned his woes, and it is even of record that one specially clever stunt was instrumental in getting the redoubtable Jones to accept the 13 Soap Company's note.

"You're really going on?"

He had books on the science of advertising, too, spread on his desk and may or may not have read them all. Mary's private opinion was that he had not, but that he only drew moral comfort from the outsides of them. At any rate it was astonishing to see how many there were. It was positively pathetic, Mary thought, sometimes to see him poring over this "literature" or sitting there scribbling his ads. when the business of shining shoes, which Rodney had threatened to adopt, would have produced more real money for him.

It was the irony of fate that Old Cyrus Martin's $5,000, meant to keep carking care from Mary's shoulders, should have been spent in two days in advertising by Ambrose Peale. The explanation of this $5,000 must be made to Rodney some day too. Every once in awhile he grew curious about it. But Ambrose didn't measure it in dollars and cents, only in terms of space, and still less did he care where it came from. Truly he was a fiend on copy. He would study and expound the signs which they could see from the office windows, while Mary, Rodney and Miss Burke would all listen spellbound when there were no callers, as often happened. Not enough white space, he would cry of one emblazonment. Not big enough, he would say. Doesn't bring out the right point, was another criticism. Ain't clear—not true—no punch, et cetera, et cetera.

If only they had just made soap, Mary couldn't help thinking sometimes, as all this talk rang in her ears. If only they had just made soap and made it good. Good wine needs no bush, was an ancient proverb she came to believe in. By the same token, good soap would need no ads.

Now, the funniest part of the whole thing, speaking of advertising, was that the 13 Soap, the old family cookbook soap, was really good. Mary had always been loyal to it from the first time she had used it. She had given it to some friends for Christmas, and they had liked it, too, and said they would "talk it up." She had gone to a store and bought a holly covered box and laid three cakes in it neatly done up in tissue paper and red ribbon, with a stamp showing Santa Claus and a legend, "Not to be opened till Christmas," on the outside.

"We must spell Christmas with an X this year," said Rodney chaffingly. "Let X equal the unknown quantity."

"We'll see," said Mary, smiling.

She simply must go on hoping and smiling or she should die. It was counting your chickens before they were hatched no doubt, but, then, you might never get a chance to count them later, she told herself pathetically. She had superintended the first experiments at soapmaking and figured out the manufacturing costs They must be ready, she had always maintained. She even bought a book on elementary chemistry and had dreams of a large soap works, like old Mr. Martin's, where an army of self supporting girls should be put to work under the best hygienic and sanitary conditions, and the minimum wage should be a generous one. She did succeed in getting a few gross of 13 Soap made after the old book formula. In the loft there were a few piles of it, the genuine 13, ranged alongside the pink castile in old rose wrappers. As a matter of fact she had had to give up manufacturing on any large scale, because their advertising took all their money, but Mary cherished the idea of taking up the work in earnest some day again. She didn't really believe much in the idea of making old Mr. Martin buy them out. Already she had more ambitious designs than that for her man Rodney.

The darkest hour comes just before the dawn, and dawn came with a sudden burst of glory one morning when Ambrose Peale flew into the office in great excitement, interrupting Mary and Rodney in a long embrace. Always discreet and tactful, he coughed and scraped his feet as a signal to them to break away.

"Say, I didn't mean to interrupt," he apologized.

Rodney kept his arms around Mary.

"Nothing in the world can interrupt us," he said. "What is it?"

"A telegram," said Peale. "It's the first we've ever had. I was afraid to open it."

Mary came over to him and looked at it nervously.

"What awful thing can it be?" she queried.

"Gee, I wonder what it says!" came from Rodney.

"Read it, read it!" said Peale, afraid to do so himself.

So then Mary opened it and read:

Rodney Martin, President 13 Soap Company, 339 Broadway—

"Go on, we know the address," Peale broke in impatiently.

Mary went on:

Ship at once, collect, 50,000 cakes 13 Soap.
Signed, BROWN & JAMES,
Chicago.

A profound silence fell upon the trio. The colossal number of 50,000 and the magic name of Brown & James had overpowered them. It was far too good to be true.

"Somebody really wants to buy some of our soap," echoed Rodney stupidly.

"I don't believe it," said Peale.

"But here it is," said Mary, handing the telegram to Rodney, so that he might view it with his own eyes at close range.

"Fifty thousand cakes," said Rodney; "it's true."

Then Peale burst out joyfully; the tide had turned.

"We've started—we've begun!" he yelled; "we're actually going to sell some soap."

"The tide's turned," said Rodney; "didn't I tell you advertising pays? We'll sweep the country—Europe—Asia—Africa. Go in with father? Not for a million dollars!"

"I'll wire Brown & James right away," said Beale briskly.

"Go ahead, do," said Rodney.

But an exclamation from Mary made them both turn.

"What is it?" asked Peale nervously.

"What's happened?" asked Rodney.

"That order is no good. We can't fill it—we've never made any soap," said Mary with a sinking heart.

"What shall we do?" quavered Rodney.

"Let's think," said Peale hopefully.

They sat staring straight ahead dolefully, till finally Rodney remarked slowly:

"We must get some soap."

"Yes, I thought of that," said Peale.

"Where can we get it?" Mary asked them deliberately.

"From a soap factory!" Peale suggested.

"But they all belong to your father," Mary reminded him.

Meanwhile Rodney had a ray of dawning hope.

"But he can't know about this Brown & James order—maybe we could buy some soap before he'd have a chance to stop them selling to us"—

"Great idea—let's get busy," said Peale, taking him up promptly.

"How?" asked Mary.

"Where's the phone book? Rodney asked, and grabbed the red classified directory from his desk.

"We'll call up two or three of his branch offices."

Warning Against Patent Medicines.

Has it ever occurred to you that you would save money, not to mention much suffering and evil consequences, by spending a dollar or two in getting good medical advice instead of buying patent medicines, which are advertised to "cure" every kind of disease and pain?

A cure cannot be effected without removing the cause of the disturbance, and drugs cannot do this. The best they can do is to tide the system over until Nature can get in her good work, and the doctor, being skilled in their application, knows how to use them to good advantage. On the other hand, the ignorant use of drugs may do permanent injury, and cannot possibly cure; they may lessen pain and make you feel better for the time being, but that is easily explained by the fact that most of them contain "dope" that dulls your sense of feeling, or alcohol that acts as a "bracer."

The importance of regulating the manufacture and sale of these secretly prepared money-getters is being realized by those who are honestly interested in the public health. The following extract from the Weekly Bulletin of the Department of Health of the city of New York will prove interesting:

"Following the discussion provoked by Dr. Leiser's popular talk on the patent medicine evil, delivered last week in Rochester before the New York State Sanitary Officers' Association and the American Public Health Association, a series of resolutions endorsing the attitude of the Department of Health of the city of New York with respect to patent medicines was unanimously adopted by the American Public Health Association.

"Whereas, the widespread use of and traffic in patent medicines and secret nostrums constitute a grave menace to the public health, and

"Whereas, such patent medicines and nostrums, because of the deceptive advertising regularly employed in promoting their sale, consistently oppose the influences seeking to educate the public to a better understanding of the nature, causes and proper treatment of diseases, and

"Whereas, the bulwark of this traffic is secrecy and mystery,

"Be it resolved, that the American Public Health Association oppose the sale of patent medicines and nostrums whose constituents are unknown to the health authorities; and

"Be it further resolved, that this association heartily endorse the ordinance of the New York City Department of Health, requiring the manufacturers of proprietary remedies, sold without a physician's prescription, to file with the department a statement of its active constituents and therapeutic claims, and

"Be it further resolved, that this association recommend to other municipalities the adoption of this or similar measures for the proper safeguarding of the public health."

This warning should be sufficient. "Do not use patent medicines or drugs of any kind except on the advice of a reputable physician!"

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

"The Circular Staircase," a Selig production in five parts, will be exhibited for the first time in Union county this afternoon and tonight at the U. S. Astor Theatre, toplining a strong program of feature films. "The Circular Staircase" has a much involved plot and is replete with dramatic situations. The acting of Guy Oliver in the leading role and a strong supporting cast is excellent. This splendid photo-drama has been shown in several other theatres on the U. S. circuit and has been acclaimed one of the best of the season. In addition there will be shown this afternoon and tonight several selected dramas and comedies supplied by the leading film firms of the country, special music and a travelogue and topical review.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Sheriff Kinkead, of Hudson county, needs to exercise a little more self-restraint, unless he would forfeit the good opinion that he won by settling the Bayonne strike. The praise he then received seems to have gone to his head, as evidenced by intemperate speech and action. Wagers on the primary result in public places, slapping the face of a political opponent and similar unseemly conduct is far from befitting the highest peace officer of the county. Justice Swayze's charge to the Hudson County Grand Jury described the broad powers and extensive authority enjoyed by the sheriff of a county. If Mr. Kinkead isn't a little more judicious in his conduct he need not be surprised if the opinion becomes general that neither by temperament nor self-control is he fitted for the position which he now occupies.—Newark Evening News.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. WM. LEONARD

"It's glad I am that I do cleaning and washing for a living." Mrs. O'Neal looked up with a smile broad as her honest face as Nell entered the kitchen with an armful of soiled linen.

"That is a queer thing to be glad about." Nell put a stained table cloth over a basin and began pouring boiling water through it.

"When I was a lass and first married I was that unhappy if Mike got cranky and ill-tempered and banged things around a bit, I'd go round the house 'dripping gloom,' as he said. That only angered him the more. Finally the load got so heavy I decided to have a real mind cleaning and forget it."

"Have what?" asked Nell.

"A mind cleaning. You know when house cleaning comes you sort over your trash and keep only the bits that are good. Well, I concluded my thoughts were trash and needed sorting. Thinks I, a room smells fresher and sweeter if it's aired and sunned; I'll let a little of the sunshine of cheerfulness in this old heart of mine, and let a stiff gale blow through. By the time I'd sorted out my thoughts I found they were all fit for the scrap heap. To forget them I began practicing a dance in the cabin. I was young then, you mind." Mrs. O'Neal was rubbing vigorously while she talked.

"Do you know my light heels taught my head some sense, and I was that cheerful that Mike stopped still in his tracks to stare at me when he came in.

"'What's come to you, Molly?' he asked.

"'A bit of sense I'm hoping,' I answered back. 'I've been practicing a dance step and it's good for the spirits, I'm thinking; anyway, I'm light hearted.'

"'Be jabbers! it's good news you're telling me. I was getting that down in the mouth myself, I could scarce chew my food. It takes a stronger place than this for two sour folks to live in comfort,' answered Mike." Nell laughed.

"So I give my mind a good cleaning every week, sorting out all discouraging thoughts and dumping them in with the other trash. Maybap I wouldn't have thought of it if I hadn't been cleaning houses and the like."

"You're a wise woman, Molly. If people could hire you to clear the trash out of their minds you would not have an idle day."

Mrs. O'Neal laughed as she wrung the suds from her hands and turned the clothes in the boiler.

"Did it cure Mike of his ill temper?" asked Nell after a pause.

"Not as you could say cured," she laughed comfortably. "You see, he has red hair, but one sour-visaged being is enough at a time in a small place, and laughing is a better remedy for it than gloom, I'm finding."

"I wish I could learn your philosophy, Molly. The theory is fine, but when it comes to practice I'm afraid it would not work for me. Thoughts that I throw out of my mind come back. I can't burn them up like trash and be rid of them."

"If they come back, I hunt 'em out the next cleaning day. Sometimes I have to clean oftener than once a week if I get too cluttered up. Then too, it wouldn't be so easy for everybody as it is for me," she added.

"Why?" asked Nell in surprise.

"I've no time to mope, to sit and nurse thoughts that make trouble. I've five days' work a week outside and my own work at home to do, so I'm lucky that way."

"You certainly are an optimist," laughed Nell.

"I don't know what one of them is, so I can't tell." She fell vigorously to work over the washboard.

ELKS' SENIOR BOWLING LEAGUE SEASON TO START OCTOBE R 25 WITH SAME TEAMS

Monday, October 25, was the date set for the opening of the Elks' Bowling League season of 1915-16 at a meeting held in the home of the Jersey City Lodge yesterday afternoon. The same ten teams that formed the circuit last season will again be in the fold, and will strive for championship honors. Practically everything went along in "apple pie" order, with no new business coming up.

Archibald Miller, of the Jersey City house, was elected president to succeed George L. Hentzel, Jr., of Elizabeth. Patrick J. McCartney, of Rahway, succeeds Alex Hinton, of the Newark Lodge, as vice-president. Hugh McGuire, of New York, was re-elected to the office of treasurer, while John J. Campbell, of Plainfield, retains his position as secretary. The executive and entertainment committees will be appointed by the president at a later date. Hugh McGuire was nominated for president, but declined, while Harry W. Lawrence, of Paterson, was also put up for the position, but withdrew. The treasurer reported a balance on hand of $127 27. There was some talk at the meeting of Brooklyn and Hackensack entering the league, but there was no representative present at the meeting from either lodge, and they were dropped from further consideration.

The opening date was pushed ahead two weeks this season to give the bowlers more time to get into condition. There were some of those present who wanted the opening put off until November 1, but October 25 was finally decided upon. There were no changes made in the rules, and the entry fee at $30 remained the same.

The prize list will be just as it was last year, which is as follows: First team prize, $70; second team prize, $50; third team prize, $40; fourth team prize, $30; fifth team prize, $25. The first individual average prize will be $20; second, $15; third, $10; fourth, $8; fifth, $5; sixth, $2.50. The team finishing first will be awarded the Perlmutter trophy for one year. This becomes the permanent property of a team winning it twice in succession. It is now being held by the New Brunswick Lodge. The team with the highest average will receive the Radel trophy, donated by E. H. Radel, of New Brunswick. The individual rolling the highest score will receive a gold watch fob, donated by Hugh McGuire, of New York Lodge. The individual average winner gets an Elks' plaque from a Manhattan jewelry firm.

There was some gossip before yesterday's meeting that there would be some move made to have Rahway and New Brunswick either install alleys in their lodge rooms or withdraw from the league. This point was not brought up at all during the meeting. It is understood that there are a number of teams which do not like the idea of bowling on open alleys, as is done at Rahway and New Brunswick. Newark, Paterson and Elizabeth are particularly opposed to it.

The following were present at yesterday's meeting:

Alex P. Hinton, Frank Moore and William J. Knowles, Newark; Hugh McGuire and Harry Seligman, New York; Harry W. Lawrence, Paterson; George Hamilton, Leo Duffy and John Schneider, Hoboken; Henry Wasserman, Edgar Ehrenfields, Archibald Miller, Jersey City; Dr. Harry Epstein and Albert Halsey, Elizabeth; Walter L. Burton and J. M. McCloskey, New Brunswick; Arthur Walters and August Leming, Rutherford; John J. Campbell, Plainfield; Patrick J. McCartney and C. Koops.

RUMOR CURRENT THAT HOLY CROSS WILL HAVE NO TEAM THIS YEAR

Because of the late start and various other internal troubles, those connected with the Holy Cross football team have expressed some doubt during the past few days as to whether or not the red and white organization will be represented on the gridiron this year. It is known that a meeting of the club was called for last Friday night in Scotch Plains, but it also is known that this gathering developed into nothing more or less than a social session, and nothing of material value in sending the season on its way was accomplished.

Those who ought to know say that Manager "Doc" Doyle has his first game dated for a week from next Saturday, but if any kind of an eleven is going to be turned out there will have to be some strenuous practicing between now and that date. A large number of veterans are willing to don football togs once again, but even with their willingness and past experience, it is doubtful if a combine of sufficient strength to cope with any formidable rival could be pulled together by October 9. It is a known fact that the local footballers are none too keen on the rehearsing stunt, and Coach Hamilton will have the time of his life if he attempts to put out a team at such short notice.

There has been some talk current among members of the club of organizing for other sports, letting football drop for one season. It is contended that the gridiron game has overrun its stage of monopoly with Holy Cross magnates, and that season's respite may bring the followers of the sport back to the fold once again.

Last season was not an altogether prosperous one financially, and the management will have to resort to some new methods to keep the combine out of an even deeper hole if the venture is launched again this fall.

LAST CALL FOR CITY BASKETBALL LEAGUE.

Representatives of at least ten different basketball organizations in Plainfield and borough have signified their intention of having delegates at the meeting in the Daily Press editorial rooms tomorrow night for the purpose of organizing a City Basketball League, and indications point to a session filled with enthusiasm over the prospects for a season of organized competition. Included in the strong list of contenders who will seek franchises on the circuit will be the Columbus Club, T. A. B., Plainfield A. C., Hope Chapel, St. Joseph's, Netherwood A. C. and numerous other aggregations of like strength.

There is some talk current among Holy Cross Club followers of dropping football and turning their attention to basketball, and if this is done the red and blue club will surely be represented in the league. A combine of prominent Plainfield athletes has organized under the direction of the Recreation Committee, and will also enter the league.

Tomorrow night will positively be the last opportunity managers will have to enter their teams, and it will be necessary for each club to have a delegate at the meeting to look after its own interests. Officers will be elected and a schedule drawn.

Rent one of your rooms and reduce your own rent materially. It's a simple and sensible way. It works.

EAGLE PIN KNIGHTS ELECTED MAHONEY

Plainfield Bowler Will Head Bowling Circuit This Season.

Representatives of the Newark, No. 44; Rahway, Elizabeth and Somerville aeries, Fraternal Order of Eagles, met at Newark yesterday afternoon for the purpose of making plans for the coming bowling season. The Plainfield aerie and the Progress aerie, of Newark, were not represented. Though it is practically certain that the locals will again be a member of the Eagles' bowling circuit, there is some doubt as to whether or not the Progress team will again come in.

The selection of officers resulted as follows: President, James Mahoney, of Plainfield; vice president, Frank Marlowe, of Newark, No. 44; treasurer, Edward Whitnebert, of Somerville, and secretary, C. H. Reed, Jr., of Rahway.

No definite date was set for the opening of the bowling season. It was announced, however, that the first scheduled games will be rolled either late in October or early in November. The next meeting will be held at Somerville Sunday, October 10.

The following committees were appointed: Executive, Ernest Bleeker, chairman; Edward Whitenebert and B. Gasner. Rules, Joseph Kelly, chairman; Louis Roller and Tony Wiley. Schedule, C. H. Reed, Jr., chairman; B. Gasner, E. Bleeker, E. Whitnebert and Frank Marlowe.

The Newark Aerie, No. 44, was represented by Frank Marlowe, Tony Wiley and Charles Smith. Rahway sent William Swear, Joseph Kelly, C. H. Reed and Joseph P. Keefe. Ernest Bleeker, Harry Metzger and B. Gasner represented the Elizabeth branch. L. Roller, Edward Whitnebert and Emery Blackford looked after the interests of the Somerville aerie. Joseph P. Keefe, of Rahway, acted in the capacity of temporary chairman.

The man or woman who have not the habit of "trying again" very often fail as want advertisers, wholly for that reason.

WOMEN PLAYING FOR HONORS AT TENNIS

First Matches for Championship of Plainfield Club.

The final matches of the interscholastic tennis tournament conducted by the Princeton Club will be completed next Saturday. The following will meet in the finals: Eggie vs. Case, in the under division, while Parvin will meet Mills in the final bracket of the older division. The winner of the two divisions will meet in the finals for the championship, both the winner and the runner-up receiving handsome silver loving cups.

The matches played Saturday afternoon brought some good tennis. In defeating Sidney Dunning, N. P. H. S., Everett Case, P. H. S., surprised all those interested in the tourney. Case outplayed his more experienced opponent, who is considered one of the best schoolboy performers in this vicinity, winning several important matches for N. P. H. S. last spring. By tactical methods and fine volleying at net, the red and blue player accomplished this feat in straight sets, 8-6, 8-6. Both sets went into extra periods, and were keenly contested until the final point. Dunning made many fine efforts to conquer his opponent even when he seemed hopelessly in the rear. The borough player, after bringing the games to deuce on several occasions, lacked the final punch which would give him the set, while his opponent, by accepting every advantage, won out on the fourteenth game in each set.

If Rodney Parvin continues his present form in the coming matches, it looks as though he has clear sailing for the annexation of the title. Parvin played at the heighth of his tennis ability when he defeated Sherman Chandler, N. P. H. S., 6-2, 6-3. The boroughite never had a chance to battle against the fine playing displayed by his opponent, who literally smothered his court with unreturnable shots.

CHALLENGERS WIN OFFICERS' MEDAL

R. C. Blancke, Jr., and H. E. Blazier Defeat F. C Collins and W H. Nischwitz.

R. C. Blancke, Jr., and Harold E. Blazier, challengers, won the officers' challenge medal at the Park Golf Club Saturday afternoon, defeating F. C. Collins and W. H. Nischwitz, holders, 3 up and 2 to play. There was a large field out to play for the president's cup, and among the leading scores were the following:

A. A. Cannon, 89, 18—71; Walter Whitehead, 89, 16—73; H. L. Moodey, 95, 20—75; J. A. Wilson, 92, 16—76; Harold E. Blazier, 83, 7—76; H. H. Woodland, 91, 14—77; W. H. Nischwitz, 94, 17—77; Royle T. Phillips, 96, 15—81; J. V. Beekman, 107, 25—82; Dr. Guy H. Hillman, 123, 38—85; Charles B. Morse, 99, 14—85.

NEAF APGAR STARS IN HIS OWN SHOOT

Plainfield Crack Tendered a Testimonial Event in Newark Yesterday.

Between forty and fifty shooters from all parts of New Jersey, and smoe from New York and Pennsylvania took part in a testimonial shoot tendered to Neaf Apgar, the Plainfield professional, over the Smith Gun Club traps Saturday.

Shooting was continued all day. Both sets of traps were working continuously from start to finish. From three to five hundred spectators were on hand at different times during the shoot.

Mr. Apgar showed his appreciation of the compliment tendered him by being on hand with his gun and breaking 166 out of a possible 175 in the total sweepstake events.

The morning program consisted of five fifteen-bird sweepstake events. In the afternoon five twenty-bird sweepstakes and a twenty-five bird merchandise prize event were held.

A five-man team shoot between the North and South Jersey Trapshooting Associations was called off. In addition to the regular merchandise prize event, prizes were also awarded to the seven high average men of the combined morning and afternoon sweepstakes.

That funny fellow Scoop is on the classified page.

SLOCUM'S PITCHING BEATS CHALLENGERS

Plainfield A. C. Held Without a Single Hit or Run by a "Come-back."

Exhibiting some of the class as a twirling artist that brought forth words of praise from Connie Mack several years ago, Louis Slocum, a native "sand-lot" product, hung up a no-run, no-hit laurel Saturday afternoon when he piloted the Netherwood A. C., City Baseball League champions, to a 3 to 0 victory over the Plainfield A. C., the challengers to a post-season series. Slocum's work on the mound was seconded in brilliancy by the support accorded him by the title-holders in the field, and in garnering the verdict the East Enders exhibited some of the best baseball they have served up this season. To say that Slocum was invincible is describing the feat in a mild manner. Besides letting the opposition down without a single bingle, he crawled out of many tight situations at critical moments by fanning dangerous batsmen, his total strikeouts for the afternoon aggregating one less than a dozen.

Opposing Slocum on the mound was Johnny Dixon, the youthful factory League product. Dixon's work was just a wee bit less brilliant than his adversaries, for he allowed but six safeties, three of these being garnered by Eddie Coughlin, and a fourth being of a questionable character. His support was marred by a pair of costly miscues.

That the challengers and champions both played good baseball is the testimony of the throng of enthusiasts who watched the encounter, and the two combines appear to be about the "class" of Plainfield baseball clubs this season. Two more contests remain in the series, and indications point to another corking session of the diamond pastime when they face each other again next Saturday.

Slocum has been doing more or less "filling in" on the mound this year, but this is his first real appearance as a scheduled mound artist. He exhibited all of his old wares and knowledge of curvology, and appeared to have regained some of the form which friends say he lost after his discardment by the McGuillicudy clan.

RED SOX WELL SUPPLIED WITH CATCHERS

Carrigan (left) Cady (top right) and Thomas.

The Boston Red Sox are well stocked with backstops for the coming world's series. Carrigan, the catcher and manager of the team, has not been doing very much behind the bat, but can be counted on in a pinch. Cady has been catching about seventy games and has been hitting a little below .300. Thomas has been doing most of the catching and probably will be the mainstay behind the bat for Boston in the big series.

POLITICAL NOTES.

September 28—Primary day and second registration day.

October 2—County committees meet for reorganization.

October 4—City committees meet for reorganization.

October 5—Republican and Democratic State conventions held in Trenton.

October 19—State referendum election, and third registration day in municipalities of more than 5,000 people.

October 26—Third and final registration day in municipalities of less than 5,000 inhabitants.

November 2—General Election Day.

In a statement made public last week, Senator Austen Colgate unqualifiedly indorsed the regular Republican candidates for the nomination for Assembly in Essex county, two of whom were members of the last Legislature. He states that, in his opinion, the two men who served Essex last year gave better representation for the county than ever was given before. The fight for the control of the county committee, Senator Colgate declared, was purely a party matter and should not be allowed in any way to interfere with the returning of men who had rendered such admirable service.

The National Defense League has received replies from many of the candidates for the Assembly at the coming primaries concerning the stand taken by each one on the question of defense. Twenty-nine favorable replies received from the seventy-one candidates is considered by the league to be encouraging. One of the questions put to the candidates by the league was whether they would support measures to advance the standing of the National Guard of the State. Most of the answers to the queries stated that the league could count on support in any measures that were brought up concerning the defense situation.

THINGS THAT MONEY CANNOT REPLACE.

Those wedding gifts, so rich in association; the family heirlooms, priceless to the possessor although of small intrinsic value; rare laces and souvenirs picked up abroad; and the many other things which if stolen or destroyed could never be duplicated, should be placed in our vault for safekeeping.

Our safe deposit boxes are of various sizes and rent for $5.00 a year and upwards and we also have a storage vault for the protection of valuables in bulk.

TUITION PRICES ADVANCE IN BORO

Out of Town Pupils to Be Charged $60 for Their Education.

COST HAS INCREASED

Principal Earley Says that at the Old Figure of $50 the Borough Would be Losing Money—New English Textbook Adopted.

The price of tuition to out-of-town High School pupils has gone up in the borough, and beginning with February 1, the opening of the second term, the charge will be $60 a pupil instead of $50. This will be the second raise in the last year or two, the present price of $50 a pupil having been boosted up from $40 only a short time ago.

This decision to charge $60 a pupil hereafter was made last night at the meeting of the North Plainfield Board of Education, and came about as the result of a report made by High School Principal Albert Earley, at the request of the Board, as to the actual cost to the borough of educating a High School pupil a year. Mr. Earley figured the cost at $56.59. A few additional items added in at the meeting raised the figures a couple of dollars, so it was decided that unless the price of tuition was boosted the borough would be educating out-of-town students at a loss.

Chairman Joseph A. Van Mater, of the building and grounds committee, reported that the work on the Harrison School was progressing satisfactorily, and that the work would be well along towards completion by Saturday. Asked if he thought the school could be used next week, Mr. Van Mater said it might be possible to occupy it by Monday, but he could not hold out any definite promise. The furniture which was ordered is practically all there, and the bills, aggregating a little over $1,000, were ordered paid after the items have been checked.

Mr. Van Mater also reported that the clock and bell wiring in the Somerset School was sadly disrupted when the alterations were begun, and it will be necessary to go over the whole building and straighten them out. An offer from the Electric Standard Time Clock Company to do the work for 25 cents an hour was accepted.

Instead of a contract with the telephone company for 1,200 calls a year, Supervising Principal D. Fred Aungst last night proposed a 2,400 call contract. The private phone and wire connecting the Somerset and the Watchung Schools was voted to be a useless future, and the clerk was instructed to ask the company for an offer for the franchise and equipment. It was voted to purchase a guard for the twelve-inch saw used in the manual training class.

School Custodian J. V. E. Vanderhoef reported receipts of $32,793.15, disbursements of $14,577.58, and a balance on hand of $18,215.58.

One of the new teachers this year, having objected strenuously to the English textbook in use in the Eighth grade classes, Mr. Aungst recommended to the Board that the book be discontinued and another textbook purchased. A discussion on the merits of this particular work ensued, and it was decided to lay the matter over.

Bills amounting to $7,986.89 for the general fund, repair account and the manual training department were ordered paid.

Miss Ruth Safford was engaged as High School teacher for algebra, English, spelling and penmanship at a salary of $800 a year. Miss Safford is from Montrose, Pa., and has had six years' experience. She is a graduate of Bucknell University and comes highly recommended. Miss Ruth Stauffer, the kindergarten teacher in the Somerset School, was engaged as pianist at a salary of $50 a year. This work will be in addition to her kindergarten teaching. It was also voted last night to have a kindergarten at the Harrison School.

BROKAW NOT GUILTY OF ASSAULT CHARGE

Plainfielder is Acquitted by Judge Connolly in Elizabeth.

Maintaining that the defendant was not criminally negligent, Judge James J. Connolly in Elizabeth this morning acquitted Clarence D. Brokaw, formerly of this city, of a charge preferred against him by Mrs. Blanche Beatty, of 875 Colonia road, Westfield. Brokaw was tried on an assault and battery indictment, the complainant alleging that she was seriously injured by Brokaw's automobile.

The accident occurred on February 19, 1912, but the defendant was not brought to trial because of the technical question as to whether or not assault and battery could be committed with an automobile. Prosecutor Stein held to that belief and had an indictment drawn. In the meantime a similar case was started in Jersey City and the convicted defendant appealed the case to the Supreme Court. On March 5 that tribunal handed down a decision affirming the conviction in the lower court.

During the trial of Brokaw, Prosecutor Stein told how Mrs. Beatty was struck by the defendant's car on Westfield avenue, Westfield, and charged that the machine was traveling at a high rate of speed. Mrs. Beatty was knocked under the motor car, contended Mr. Stein, and her body prevented it from proceeding further.

Brokaw has been at liberty under $500 bail since his indictment. Mrs. Beatty and her husband brought a civil suit for damages against the defendant in the Circuit Court and were awarded a verdict of $3,000 by a jury. It is said that they have been unable to collect it because Brokaw hasn't any visible property or estate. Brokaw conducted an automobile business in this city at the time of the accident.

Y. M. H. A. PLANNING FOR NEW YEAR BALL

Annual Entertainment to Be Held in Columbus Club—Many Attractions.

Plans have been completed for the annual ball of the Y. M. H. A., which will be held in the Columbus Club Auditorium New Year's afternoon and night. One of the big features of the event this year will be a double-header program of basketball, the local team playing the New Brunswick Y. M. H. A. in the afternoon and a rival team from Perth Amboy in the evening on the Columbus Club court.

Dancing will, as usual, be one of the attractions and the Y. M. H. A. has arranged for an excellent program of dance music to be rendered during the evening. A number of other attractions are also proposed and every effort is being made to have this event eclipse the successful entertainments of previous years. Another meeting of the association will be held in the near future and at that time the committees will be appointed to take charge of the various events New Year's night.

ABLE SPEAKERS TO DEBATE LIQUOR QUESTION

"Should there be religion in politics?" "Does prohibition phoribit?" "What compensation should the saloon-keeper receive from the loss of his stock and business because of local option or prohibition?"

These and similar questions dealing with the saloon and the liquor business will be discussed and thoroughly threshed out in the "Close Poulson debate" to be held in the First Baptist church Suday-school auditorium this evening.

In view of the fact that New Jersey is soon to vote on equal suffrage, this meeting will be of interest to women as well as men. The Federation of Men's Bible Classes and the local Christian Endeavor Union extend a cordial invitation to all to be present.

ANOTHER STEP IN BANKING PROGRESS

Plainfield Trust Co. Checks Now Payable Through New York Clearing House.

The Plainfield Trust Company is responsible for another innovation in trust company services which will be of interest to the banking community and especially to those who have in times past had to pay exchange on local checks. The company has just succeeded in making an arrangement whereby its checks will be payable through the New York Clearing House, thus doing away with the exchange charge which has deterred many people from carrying their accounts in a Plainfield institution.

To obviate the charge The Plainfield Trust Company has heretofore by a special arrangement allowed its customers to make their checks payable at one of the large New York financial institutions, but this plan will now be done away with except in cases where it is especially desired, as the connection with the Clearing House will make an account with the Trust Company equivalent to a New York account. This is another step in local banking progress which will doubtless result in bringing funds to this city which were formerly kept in New York.

SCHOOL ENROLLMENT SHOWS BIG INCREASE

North Planifield Registration Figures Show 1,202 as Against 1,045 Last Year.

The monthly report of Supervising Principal D. Fred Aungst, submitted at the meeting of the North Plainfield Board of Education last night, gives some comparative figures which are interesting.

The enrollment in all the schools on opening day this year was 1,202 as against 1,045 last year. The enrollment in the High School this year was 218 as against 173 last year, and 163 the year before that.

The attendance for September, this year, in all the schools, was 1,236 as against 1,212 last September, and 1,145, September, 1913. The attendance at the North Plainfield High School for September, 1915, was 22[illegible] as against 200, September, 1914, Watchung School, 242 as against 300; Harrison School, 175, and Somerset School 819 for September, this year.

Mr. Aungst's report stated:

"The High School department is obliged to use grammar school rooms for recitation purposes. Two classes are sent there daily when the grammar school classes are absent for manual training. The completion of the alterations now going on in the Somerset School will not relieve the situation. There is no room for the art classes except in the manual training building, which should have all available space for sewing and mechanical drawing.

"Provision was made in the budget for a class of retarded and deficient children. You are aware that we have no such class organized because there is no room to house it. There are twenty-four children in our schools who should by all means receive the attention, instruction and opportunity that such a class affords.

"In other respects the schools are running along smoothly and satisfactorily."

AUTO BUSINESS GOES IN RECEIVER'S HANDS

Trenton, Sept. 28.—The business of Leon Jaffess, an automobile dealer of Plainfield, was placed in the hands of a receiver in the United States District Court here today, Jacob L. Newman, of Newark, being named as receiver. Jaffess also has stores in Harrison, New York city, Detroit and Cleveland. His assets are alleged to be at least $40,000, with liabilities not stated. The petitioning creditors charge that he is insolvent.

"ECHOES FROM SILVER BAY."

The Plainfield Graded Union of Sunday-school Teachers held an interesting session in the parlors of the Y. W. C. A. yesterday afternoon. After routine business was transacted three members of the union gave reports of the various conferences they had attended. Those taking part were: Miss Katherine Aller, "Silver Bay;" Mrs. A. H. Manning, "Northfield," and Mrs. Edward Baker, "The Asbury Park Summer School." The next meeting of the union will be held in the association Monday afternoon, October 4.

PLAN A NATION WIDE MISSION

Special Preaching Services to Be Held in Every Episcopal Diocese

TO AROUSE CHURCHES

Bishop Matthews Will Meet With Plainfield Clericus on October 18 to Discuss Details for Work in New Jersey.

Following the suggestions as embodied in resolutions adopted at the meeting of the General Episcopal Convention when it was held in New York city, plans are now being formulated for the nation-wide preaching mission to be conducted in every Episcopal diocese of the country between December 1 next and Easter. The work will be carried out on a very extensive plan under the direction of Rev. James C. Freeman, of Minneapolis, Minn., who has been named general secretary. It will be part of his duty to get in touch with every diocese and inform the churches of the plans of the movement.

Plainfield and vicinity is to have a part in this mission, and Bishop Paul Matthews, of the New Jersey diocese, has arranged to meet with the Plainfield Clericus in Christ church, Elizabeth, on October 18, at which time he will inform the rectors of the general plan, which will be outlined in detail.

The purpose of this nation-wide mission is to awaken a deeper interest among the members of the churches and to seek the conversion of souls. The plan will include a house-to-house canvass, cottage player meetings, and in this connection there will be given the widest publicity to the work. The Churchman and other denominational papers have already undertaken this work, and the scope of the work will be the most extensive yet taken up by the Episcopal church in this country.

Each church will have special meetings lasting from one to two weeks, whichever is considered advisable. In the larger parishes there will be special preachers, who will take charge of the meetings, while in the smaller ones the rectors will adopt a plan of exchange of pulpits, and whenever possible special workers will be secured to aid in the work.

The Plainfield Clericus has already taken up its work for the fall and winter. Rev. Henry J. Mesier, rector of St. Stephen's church, is the new secretary, and all of the rectors in the Clericus are planning to take an active part in the nation-wide movement. Further announcements concerning the plans for Plainfield and vicinity will be announced following the meeting to be held in Christ church, Elizabeth, October 18.

SENATOR MARTINE WILL NOT BE ABLE TO VOTE

Much to his regret, United States Senator James E. Martine will not be able to cast his vote at the primary election. An appointment with the Secretary of War today will keep him in Washington. This will be the first time in his life, since he attained his majority, that the Senator has failed to vote at a primary election in his home city.

MEAN TACTICS OF ANOTHER GOT M'GRATH IN TROUBLE

Angered by the taunts of a man in Smelson's restaurant on Somerset street, last night, George McGrath, of nowhere in particular and everywhere in general, became excited and hurled a sign through a plate glass window, doing damage estimated at $15. McGrath was a little the worse for liquor and when a fellow diner started to josh him about his ragged clothes he lost his head.

Smelson summoned Patrolman Roy Martin, who believed that McGrath was a desperate character and "tapped" him on the head with his nightstick. In court this morning Smelson appeared as complainant, but City Judge DeMeza instructed the restaurant proprietor that the man who started the argument was the one to have been arrested and inasmuch as McGrath did not have the wherewithal to pay for the damage done the court suspended sentence.

G. E. STILLMAN INJURED.

George E. Stillman, foreman of the pattern shop at the Potter Printing Press Works, slipped while busy about a piece of machinery at the works yesterday and fell, breaking his right arm at the wrist. Mr. Stillman was taken to his home, 827 West Sixth street, where he will be confined for several days.

NEAL EXECUTORS ARE FINED $25 BY COURT

Adjudged Guilty of Contempt Charge by Judge Connolly in Elizabeth.

Found guilty in Elizabeth this morning by Judge James C. Connolly of contempt of court, Mrs. Harriet Neal and Frank Neal, of this city, and William E. Neal, of St. Paul, Minn., executors of the will of the late Frank S. Neal, were sentenced to pay a collective fine of $25. Sentence was passed following a sharp tilt between William A. Coddington, counsel for Mrs. Florence Neal Williams, a daughter of the testator, and Isaac P. Runyon, representing William E. Neal and Mrs. Neal.

The contempt proceedings grew out of the neglect on the part of the executors to file an accounting and inventory of the estate as directed by Judge Connolly.

The inventory has since been offered, fulfilling the request of Mr. Coddington, who, on behalf of his client, demanded that the executors give an accounting up to the present time. Mrs. Williams, who is a beneficiary of the estate, recently became of age and began proceedings to secure her share as cited under the terms of the will.

NEW JERSEY BRANCH ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

Mrs. Rufus Delafield Chosen Head of Prince of Wales Relief Society.

The first fall meeting of the New Jersey Branch of the Prince of Wales Society for Soldiers and Sailors was held in the parish house of Grace Episcopal church yesterday morning. Following an outline of the plan for the winter work of the society an election of officers took place, and the following appointments were made for the coming year.

Chairman, Mrs. Rufus Delafield; first vice-chairman, Mrs. O. C. Titus; secretary, Miss Florence Huntington, and treasurer, Mrs. Edward Hyatt. The hospital committee made an excellent report, showing that 74,743 articles had been shipped to the hospitals abroad during the summer. A change in the date of the meeting of the hospital committee was made, and that body will hereafter meet in the parish house on Thorsday mornings instead of Friday.

The wedding ceremony will be performed by Bishop Frederick Courtney, assisted by the Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace Episcopal church, this city. Afterward there will be a reception at the home of the bride's parents, 8 East Seventy-fifth street.

RUNYON AND REED AGAINST SUFFRAGE

Plainfield Assemblyman and Corporation Counsel Among the "Antis."

Setting forth a number of reasons why the vote would not benefit womankind, Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed has openly declared himself as being opposed to the suffrage issue. Among other things, he states that the personal property rights of a woman have been and are now better protected than those of men in non-suffrage States, particularly in the older States. His announcement followed a letter received by him from the suffrage workers asking for an expression of opinion and the right to use his name in the campaign. Concluding his letter, Mr. Reed said:

"Of course, I understand that no experience or belief of another can have any weight with those who want to try an experiment, and therefore I have not the slightest idea but what you will consider my views other than foolish. I might add that, aside from any views of my own, I feel that the fact that a very large percentage—if not a clear majority—of the women of New Jersey do not favor the proposed amendment, is in itself sufficient reason why suffrage should not be forced upon them at this time."

Assemblyman William N. Runyon also received a letter from the suffrage workers similar to that sent to Mr. Reed, asking him to allow his name to be used on certain literature distributed to aid the suffrage cause. Mr. Runyon's reply also cited reasons for his objection to the enfranchisement of women, and carried with it a denial of the right to use his name in connection with suffrage advertising.

BOROUGH STREET PLANS CONSIDERED

No Permanent Work Can Be Done Until Completion of Sewers.

The streets in the borough cannot be put in very good condition until the sewer work is out of the way, which will be a matter of many months to come, for after the mains are laid the house connections will come, and these will tear up the streets just as much as the main work is doing.

Plans for borough street improvements are being considered, however, and the officials are casting about for a material with which to pave Somerset street, and perhaps a few of the other much-traveled thoroughfares, in case the Borough Council should decide to pave some of the streets in the near future in place of macadamizing them.

In the meantime Street Commissioner William Uhrhahn is doing what he can to put the streets in passable condition. Where the sewer pipes have been laid and the trenches filled the heaped up dirt is being smoothed down and leveled off, and the holes and hollows filled with crushed stone. But the lack of a binder makes this work of little value, for the wheels of the automobiles throw the stones out, and soon the holes are as deep as ever.

The upper end of Watchung avenue has been graded and graveled under the direction of Borough Engineer Harry C. Van Emburgh and Street Commissioner Uhrhahn, and these officials are proud of this particular piece of road. The work cost the borough very little, as the material used was the surplus dirt from the sewer trenches. It is feared that this piece of gravel road will not last in good condition long unless it is scraped after every rain, as is done at the seashore and in South Jersey, where gravel roads predominate, and they are kept in good condition week after week by constant scraping.

Just at present the borough street commissioner has his men at work on Belvidere avenue, cutting down the high grass and weeds at the side of the road and leveling and filling in the street.

WOMEN CAUSE ROW IN DUNELLEN BOARD

Members Hold Warm Session When Suffrage is Brought Up.

The Board of Trade of Dunellen held a decidedly warm session last night in the Borough Hall, and the subject that came near causing hard feelings between some of its members was that which has brought distention upon man since the fall of Adam—women.

The trouble arose when A. F. Conant, of Washington avenue, objected to the wording of an article in the Weekly Call. Mr. Conant declared that the Call erred in saying that members of the Board of Trade objected to tactics employed by local suffrage workers in carrying on their campaign, especially in their enterprise in standing at the door of the hall Monday evening and attempting to pin badges on antis who had attended a meeting held under the auspices of the Board.

Secretary William Deering, who wrote the story, explained that his article had meant to say that the Board as a whole objected to the aggressiveness of the suffragists, and not that each individual member objected. During the argument that followed President pro tem Cockburn said that in his opinion the article was just a trifle too strong, but J. Alfred Wilson insisted that it was very, very mild and ought to have been stronger. Peace was restored when a member suggested that the Board was a business organization and not a political one and that it had made a mistake in taking action on the suffrage question in the first place—that it had no business in mixing up in the campaign of the women. This view was accepted by a majority of those present and the matter was dropped.

The Board decided to hold its annual banquet Thursday evening, December 2. A committee to arrange for this will be named by the president.

PAUL KRATZEL HONORED BY SOMERVILLE LODGE

Paul Kratzel, of Front street, one of the large property holders of the borough, was honored at his home, Sunday, by a visit from fourteen members of Schiller's Lodge, of Somerville, to which he belongs. The party dropped in upon Mr. Kratzel and spent the afternoon.

Mr. Kratzel has been a member of this lodge for over forty years, joining it shortly after coming to Dunellen in 1873. Mr. Kratzel is a native of Prussia and had been in this country a year before he located in Dunellen. When he came here this place was a typical country village. Against the total of over 500 dwellings of which this borough at present can boast there were only about 80 then. In 1873 the present church of St. John's parish, which is shortly to be abandoned for a more commodious edifice, was yet to be built and the construction of the Whittier School had just commenced. The buildings on the main street at the time were the Park Hotel, run by Joseph M. Maier, Sr., the O. M. Hetfield, Michael Finger and Pope buildings and J. Y. Wilson's Hall.

Lisbon Pierson, Jr., of New Market road, who is in the employ of George A. Schenck, the iceman, was unable to attend to his duties yesterday, owing to illness.

GUESTS RETURN HOME.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred De Hart and daughter, Janet, of Newark, who have been stopping for the past month with Mrs. Ella Kennedy, of Washington avenue, returned home Thursday. Mrs. De Hart is a daughter of Dr. Jamison, a former pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church. She formerly sang in the choir of the local church and during her visit here she has assisted the choir by rendering a solo at each of the services during the month. This act is highly appreciated by the congregation, which wishes to thank her through this column.

Paul Reusch, a director in the local bank, experienced a dizzy spell in a theatre at Plainfield, Saturday, and was obliged to leave the theatre with the assistance of his son, Edward, and return home. This spell proved to be the forerunner of a bad cold with which Mr. Reusch is at present confined to his bed.

MICHAEL GALLAGHER ILL.

Michael Gallagher, owner of the Gallagher building at the corner of Washington and North avenues, was taken ill while performing his duties at the plant of the Levgar Structural Company shortly before 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Mr. Gallagher was removed to the office of Dr. T. H Platt for treatment. Later he was removed to the home of Robert Roskell on North avenue, where he boards.

ENJOYED LONG CRUISE.

Charles Starker, Clarence Oakley, Wilson S. Frederick, Fred Haynes and Fred Oakley spent Sunday on a long motorboat cruise. They started from New Brunswick and went via the Raritan River to Morgan's Point, located on Newark Bay. From there they tried to make the trip to Sandy Hook, but the water was very rough and they had to turn back.

CAMPFIRE SUPPER.

A party of young people of the borough composed of Mildred Mattis, Ruth Apgar, Natalie Terry, Deveraux Apgar, Dorothy Brouwer, Earl Latham, Richard Townley, Morton Althoen, Montgomery Carpenter and Theodore Oakley enjoyed a campfire supper at Washington Rock, Saturday evening. The party was chaperoned by Mrs. J. Newton Apgar and Mrs. C. B. Mattis. The social program which followed the supper was brought to an abrupt conclusion, it is said, by one of the young men who got too free with the use of red pepper. According to the story this young man blew the pepper in the faces of several of the young women and the chaperons rendered indignant by the act immediately started the party for home.

Carl Rifinio, the popular local barber, spent Sunday and yesterday in New York, visiting his uncle, Beagle Rifinio.

Miss Ethel Strong, of Martine avenue, entertained Miss Augusta Allen, of Plainfield, yesterday.

Something will be done shortly about the light problem at the corner of Martine and North avenues. The question of placing an arc light at that corner in exchange for two lights of lesser power was discussed in the Council at the last meeting, but action was deferred until Councilman A. I. Nichol returned home from spending the summer in New England. He has had estimates on the additional cost, which would be about $40 a year, and if the additional light would be the means of preventing an accident, the borough fathers would feel justified in adding the expense.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Todd and daughter have returned to their home at Bellevale, N. Y., after spending the past three months in the borough.

The closing of the primaries in the township and borough tonight will probably not attract the usual crowds that await the counting of the ballots, as there is not a great deal of interest. Only one office, that of member of the County Committee from the township, is contested for by more than one man, and the other candidates can start making plans for entering upon the duties of their respective offices already.

James A. Gaston, of Rose street, will lave today for the San Francisco Exposition.

Miss Grace Kenyon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kenyon, of West End avenue, will leave tomorrow for Philadelphia, where she will attend school.

Mrs. Fred Young is spending this week in Allentown, Pa.

Mrs. Finley P. Wyckoff is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McCullough, of Belle Mead.

Rally Day exercises were observed Sunday afternoon in all the churches. Promotions for departments were a feature of the program in all the schools. Sunday evening a union service of the Reformed, Methodist and Baptist churches was held in the Baptist church. Rev. Roy Ewingvale, pastor of the Second Reformed church, preached.

R. Shapario, aged 56, was struck by a New Jersey Central train at 4:40 yesterday afternoon, and instantly killed near the Bridge street crossing. Shapario was picking coal and heard the approach of the train. As he turned around he was struck. The deceased was a Jewish teacher and had resided for many years on Franklin street. His widow survives him.

Edward Kenner, local officer for the S. P. C. A., accompanied by Marshal Robert Holmes, visited Flagtown, Sunday afternoon, for the purpose of arresting a foreigner who, it was charged, had permitted a sick horse to lay in a field for four days without attention. When Kenner and Holmes arrived they were surprised to learn that the horse had been shot and then removed, but its owner had escaped. Edward and Joseph Stroke were the complainants.

W. H. Cawley, Chris Ehni and Charles Madison are attending the G. A. R. encampment at Washington.

Rev. Dr. E. G. Reed, of Plainfield, was a visitor here yesterday.

H. H. Freck and F. A. Pope left yesterday for Baltimore, Md., where they will represent Camp 43, of the P. O. S. of A., at the National Convention, which opened this morning.

Walter Inman, son of Mrs. James B. Duke, returned yesterday from North Carolina, where he spent a month.

There was some excitement on West Main street, yesterday morning, when a Public Service repair wagon backed into one of the company's trolley cars. The team of horses took fright at a passing auto, which caused the trouble. Other than a few scratches to the side of the car no damage was done.

WOMAN SEVENTY-TWO WALKED LONG DISTANCE

Marshal Logan, of Scotch plains, accosted a strange trio on the street Saturday night—a woman, 72 years old, and two men, her sons, 50 and 45 years of age, who had walked all the way from Kansas City. Their destination was New York, where they hoped to earn money to carry them back to Poland, their former home.

The trio told a hard-luck story, but did not ask for assistance. They said they had earned enough on their trip to keep them, and were in good health. The men's beards had been allowed to grow, but their clothing was clean, although much worn.

EXPECT HUNDRED MEN AND BOYS TO ATTEND

The interest in the mid-week meeting tomorrow evening at the First Baptist church has steadily developed from the first announcement and it is expected a hundred men and boys will be present. The boys especially are taking hold of the matter with great enthusiasm and there is no question but that twenty-five or more of their number will be present. Boys of the city generally who are free to attend are most cordially invited to come.

There will be some stirring things for the boys both from the pastor and from other speakers. The men are also urged to do their part, and it is expected that there will be at least seventy-five of their number present. If the full quota of a hundred men and boys is reached there will be but little question that two hundred and fifty persons altogether will be in attendance.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

At a meeting of the senior class yesterday Miss Helen Coddington was elected secretary, defeating the Misses Marion Lynn and Florence Nielson on the first ballot and overcoming Miss Ruth Voorhees on the second. Now the list of senior class officers is complete and consists of the following: President, Herbert Peacock; vice-president, Miss Irma Good; treasurer, Richmond Ritterbusch, and secretary, Miss Helen Coddington.

When the Red and Blue gridiron warriors trot out to Parker Field next Saturday they will meet the most formidable foe they have booked for this year. The Easton H. S. lads come here with a "rep," and do not expect to encounter trouble. Up until this year Rahway was considered the P. H. S. "stumbling block," but now that the Armstrong brothers have entered Blair Academy, half the strength of that eleven has gone. According to reports the Red and Blue men have been working diligently, and Coach Patch is well pleased with their efforts.

Candidates for the swimming team are practicing every Monday and Wednesday, between the hours of 4 and 5. It is likely that a team will be picked in a few days.

Taking inventory of the girls' basketbal stock, we find that we still have with us the Misses Elsa Palmer, Irma Good, Jennie Bremble, Florence Ryder and Clementine Bremble, at least three of whom had plenty of experience on last year's five.

Among the boys, Carlton Dunham, Bill Daniels, Lorenzo Brower, Bill Wheelan and Sheldon Coudray look to be the class in the basketball line, although a wealth of good "sub" material is on hand.

Classes in public speaking and elocution will be resumed in the near future.

Reading of standard periodicals in connection with the historical and English courses has been advised by the leading educational authorities the country over, and it is likely that the idea will be tried out here.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

"The Circular Staircase," a Selig photodrama, in five parts, with Guy Aliver and Stella Rozetta, was the feature production on the screen of the Astor Theatre yesterday afternoon and evening, playing to good-sized audiences both times. This afternoon and tonight Mignon Anderson will appear in "Milestones of Life," a Mutual Master picture in five parts. Miss Anderson has phenomenal beauty, and her expressive features have won her fame in the motion picture realm. Ina Claire, star of the "Follies of 1915," and many other musical comedies which have been presented on Broadway, will appear on the Astor screen tomorrow in "The Wild Goose Chase," with Carlyle Blackwell playing opposite. The film tells a story of an imaginary kingdom in Europe, and gives Miss Claire ample opportunity to put into effect all her dainty charm. Thursday Francis X. Bushman and Marguerite Snow will appear in "The Silent Voice," a recent Metro production, in which Mr. Bushman achieves one of the hits of his brilliant career before the picture camera.

Fourteen different meetings will be held in less than twelve hours, and the same speakers will be used during the entire day.

Mrs. George M. La Monte is in charge of arrangements for the invasion of the borough by the flying squadron. Mrs. E. F. Feickert is at the head of the committee on speakers, but she has not yet made up her list of spell-binders.

TREMBATH SAYS "IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE"

Borough Candidate for Office of Collector Believes in Publicity.

If William J. Trembath does not win the nomination in the borough for collector and treasurer today at the primaries it will not be for lack of publicity. With cards, calling attention to his candidacy, circular letters sent out to all the North Plainfield Republican young men whose sole object is to bring about his nomination, he and his friends have kept things moving and his name constantly before the public. Mr Trembath is a firm believer in advertising.

The campaign which he and his friends are waging reached its climax last night when a torch light parade and big demonstration was given in his behalf. The members of the North Plainfield Young Men's Republican Club turned out in force for the parade, and headed by the Dutch Arms Band, of which Mr. Trembath is a member and which is said to be supporting him to a man, paraded through the principal streets of the borough for an hour and a half The band donated its services for the occasion, as was announced prominently on a placard carried at their head. Automobiles carrying members of the club and other interested persons came next, and with a crowd of small boys bringing up the rear the procession was "some parade" and reminded the on-lookers of the days of Presidential elections in Plainfield when torchlight processions were an important part of a political campaign.

Mr. Trembath knew all about the arrangements for the parade, but there was a feature of the evening's program which was a surprise to him. This came after the paraders had disbanded, and took place at the Ritz, where Mr. Trembath was invited to participate in a complimentary dinner as the guest of two or three members of the band, but who they were he has not yet been able to find out.

The dinner was a testimonal of the high regard felt for him by his fellow members, and speeches were made by A S. Herr, William H. Olmsted, J. R. Adams and others. Arthur B. Cole, president of the band, was toastmaster. Mr. Trembath had to respond to the many complimentary things said about him

The dinner was served at one big table around which were grouped a number of small ones There were over fifty at the banquet.

On Thursday night, October 7, the annual rally will be held at the association. Miss Lena M. Farrar, of the national Y. W. C. A., will be present at that time to address the gathering.

Members of the association and their friends will enoy a walk to Washington Rock on Saturday beginning at 2:30 o'clock promptly. All girls wishing to make the trip are requested to leave their names at the office.

BAPTIST SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS HOLD MEETING

The first meeting of the fall and winter of the Sunday-school teachers of the First Baptist church was held last night at the home of the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong. There was an attendance of about thirty-five, and very satisfactory reports of the Sunday-school work were received. The social hour which ended the evening was a particularly pleasant feature.

Superintendent Arthur M. Harris, of the Sunday School, presided. The business of the month was taken up in order and disposed of, and two new teachers—Miss Mae Heidelof and Benjamin N. Harris—were elected. The financial statement showed that the teachers have a large surplus of money on hand, and it was stated that the rally day exercises last Sunday were the best in every sense of the word ever held.

A matter of much gratification was the good report heard about the success of the Boy Scout movement in the First Baptist Sunday-school. Troop 14 was said to be practically the largest in the city. There are thirty-one boys enrolled.

Particular attention was called last night to the record of Scout Donald Warren, who recently attained special distinction, working up to a first class Scout in ten months' time. The Boy Scouts will attend the midweek prayer meeting at the church tomorrow night, as individuals, Dr. Strong said, not in uniform or in a body.

Mrs. John Carty, of Washington avenue, was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday, for an operation for appendicitis. She is reported as doing very well.

The man or woman who have not the habit of "trying again" very often fail as want advertisers, wholly for that reason.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The new show at Proctor's Theatre is just one surprise after another. Consider the feelings of a "press agent" who walks into the house during the first act and finds it receiving the applause generally withheld until such time as the headliner appears. And when the headliner does appear—well, the applause has been gathering all along the line. Deduction: It was an all-star bill. Soretti and Antoinetti, in an eccentric and novel specialty, was, indeed, an exceptional act, and was well received by the audiences. The Harvey-DeVora Trio, in a comedy dancing review, presenting the smallest blackface comedian now appearing on the vaudeville stage, took the gatherings by storm. The making of laughs was their specialty, and they were instrumental in bringing in more laughs to the minute than any other act that has appeared at the local house in a long time. The real colored comedians, Baldwin, Braxton and Carter, in singing, dancing and tumbling, were far beyond the expectations of the patrons of the house. Thomas Potter Dunn also made a good impression yesterday. In passing, attention is again called to the photoplay features being shown at the Proctor house. "The Irish in America" is appearing today, featuring Valentine Grant, while tomorrow, "The Offending Miss," with a Vitagraph all-star cast, is billed to appear. "My Last One," with Dorothy Kelly and Will Munn, will be thrown upon the screen.

National Gas Lighting Week

Offers Chance to Save Money

National Gas Lighting Week will be observed by all the leading Gas Companies of the country from September 27th to October 2d. The idea is to direct public attention to the remarkable advances made in the art of gaslighting.

Clover Design Semi-Indirect Fixtures and the wonderful C. E-Z lights are the very latest and very highest development of the gas lighting art. We are going to feature these fixtures and these lights during National Gas Lighting Week. To draw attention to these fixtures in a practical way we will cut the price of them 20% during National Gas Lighting Week. This is a bona-fide reduction and will hold good for the week only.

For the benefit of other consumers we will also allow a reduction of 20% on Domes, on Reading Lamps and on our staple line of fixtures sold during the same week.

On Humphrey Inverted Arc Lamps and on large Reflex Lamps used in stores, halls, offices and factories, we will reduce the price 10% on all orders filled during National Gas Lighting Week.

For those who want mantles, we will sell four Reflex Mantles for 50c. These mantles retail for 15c apiece.

We urge you to see the C. E-Z Light. It is something new. It is different from all other gas lights. We think it is the best yet produced.

We are making special prices on the C. E-Z Lights. We will put one in your home complete, ready to light, for $1.40; two at $1.35 each; three or more at $1.30 each.

Nearly every home needs something in the way of lighting facilities at this season of the year.

Supply YOUR wants during National Gas Lighting Week and get the advantage of reduced prices. Also the advantage of partial payment if you so desire.

And his neighbor who thinks railroad trains and newspapers should stop on Sunday.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS

LIGHT VOTE REGISTERED IN BOROUGH TODAY

A very light vote was polled in the borough up to 1:30 this afternoon, less than a quarter of the total number of voters entitled to vote at the primary election having cast their ballots. More interest will be shown in the election, it is expected, late this afternoon and this evening.

The number of ballots cast up to 1:30 in the various polling places were as follows: First Dirstrict, 44; Second District, 36; Third District, 24; Fourth District, 68; Fifth District, 30. The vote in the city was equally light.

INCREASED INTEREST IN NOON-DAY MEETINGS

Reports of the men's noonday gospel meeting at the Rescue Mission last Wednesday indicate that interest of an unusual degree was manifested. There was a good attendance and the service under the leadership of the Rev E B. Maynard was marked with spirited devotion. Hearty response to the remarks of the speaker was made by nearly all present.

The meeting tomorrow will be addressed by W. J. Conroy and all men are cordially invited. The services will begin at 12:30 o'clock The Recue Mission is located at 10 Madison avenue

DREW COLOR LINE.

A storm of indignation was aroused yesterday in Brooklyn when it became known that St Paul's School had drawn the color line in Saturday's football game against Boys' High of Brooklyn and had caused the removal of Claude Hall, a negro, who plays end, from the line-up. Just as play was about to begin Coach Blake of St. Paul's School, informed Coach Wilson, of Boys' High, that the St. Paul's authorities objected to the presence of Hall on the field. The absence of Hall weakened the visiting team, which lost, 7 to 0.

$30,000 HORSE PREMIUMS.

Premiums amounting to $30,000 were announced yesterday by the National Horse Show Association for its thirtieth annual exhibition at Madison Square Garden on Nov. 6 to 12, and 5,000 owners of show horses throughout the United States and Canada will this week receive the prize lists which have just been issued to give them all particulars of the 146 competitions in which they can enter their thoroughbreds, hackneys, hunters, troters, saddle horses, and ponies.

RECORDER CAMPBELL LIVELY CAMPAIGNER

Well Known Dunellenite Seeks Nomination for Tax Assessor.

Recorder David S. Campbell, of Dunellen, who seeks the Democratic nomination for the assessorship at the primaries today in opposition to J. H. L. Peters, the present assessor, has waged a strenuous campaign despite his age of seventy-two years. He is one of the best-known residents of the borough, having lived in this section of the State practically all his life.

He always has been a Democrat, and cast his first vote for George B. McClellan, who ran for President during the Civil War in opposition to Abram Lincoln. He received his appointment as recorder of Dunellen in 1903, and has been reappointed by Republican and Democratic administrations ever since.

In speaking to a reporter for the Daily Press last evening the recorder said: "Some people argue that I am too old for the office, but I feel as spry and hearty as I did twenty years ago, and I would not be afraid to make a wager that I could defeat the average man of fifty today in a hundred-yard dash. The assurances of support I have received during my campaign lead me to believe that I stand an excellent chance of being the victor. If I am defeated, however, I will work as hard for the election of Mr. Peters as I have for my nomination."

Recorder Campbell was born at Jacksonville, Ill., in 1843. Before he was a year old his parents moved to Bound Brook, and his father, Furman Campbell, secured a position as section boss on the Central Railroad. His father was the foreman of the force that extended the tracks of the Central from Bound Brook to Somerville.

Mr. Campbell received his education in the old Reform school, which stood at the corner of Arlington avenue and Fourth street, this city. Choosing teaching as his vocation, he received the appointment in 1871 as teacher in South Stirling. His pupils included former Assemblyman E. E. Cooper. In 1882 Recorder Campbell was engaged by the Board of Education of this city as teacher of the Reform school in which he had received his education. Mr. Campbell taught for thirty-five years at Bedminster, North Plainfield, Bernardsville, New Market, Bound Brook, Fairmount and Basking Ridge. At Basking Ridge Mrs. William A. Coddington, wife of former Judge Coddington, of this city, taught as assistant teacher under Mr. Campbell.

The recorder has been a resident of Dunellen for the past fifteen years. He has three daughters, Mrs. J. Newton Apgar, Mrs. Letitia Clawson, Mrs. Oscar Runyon, all of Dunellen, and one son, John M. Campbell, who is employed in the Plainfield Trust Company.

2,000 STRIKERS GO BACK.

Lowell, Mass., Sept. 28.—Approximately 2,000 employes of the U. S. Cartridge Co.'s plant have returned to work today after being out two weeks on strike.

You Touch a Magic Button When You Become a "Want Advertiser."

Our day is the day of "touching buttons."

A President presses a button in Washington, and a titanic explosion, thousands of miles away, weds the two great seas.

We are fond, nowadays, of accomplishing big effects with simple processes.

And so the "button-pressing" magic applies to the "little things" of life, as well as to the big episodes.

When you become a "want advertiser" you press a MAGIC BUTTON —and the influence is felt in the homes and business places of the city.

Your quest becomes of interest to the people who are able to help you accomplish it.

If you seek work, and "press the button" of Plainfield Daily Press want advertising publicity, your quest becomes one of personal interest to the people who need you. The same law operates in the working out of every "want ad task."

For classified advertising makes the whole city your market; makes the right people your audience; delivers your message to all people to whom it could have any interest or importance.

You can't, even through a "For Sale" ad, sell that used article for its original cost, nor near it; but you can get its cash value at the present time for it.

Going to build? See Saturday's Press.

The "thrift-instinct" in people makes the "For Sale" ads interesting to them.

CITY BASKETBALL LEAGUE TO ORGANIZE 1915-16 CIRCUIT AT MEETING TONIGHT

Some real basketball weather has been served up for those managers who are planning to attend the meeting in the Daily Press editorial rooms tonight, when the City Basketball League will be organized for the 1915-16 campaign. Indications point to a large gathering of interested advocates of the sport, and representatives of all of the city's foremost clubs will be on hand.

President Walter C. Dobbins, of the City Baseball League, will be on hand to preside at the session, and the matter of electing permanent officers will probably come up tonight. Just how many teams will be granted league franchises depends on the number of applications received tonight, and it will be necessary for each manager to present along with his application a tentative roster of players he has available for competition.

Various courts in different parts of the city will also come in for their share of the discussion, and it is probable that definite playing floors will be decided upon tonight.

LOCAL INTERSCHOLASTIC BASKETBALL LEAGUE MAY TAKE IN WESTFIELD HIGH

Talent taken away from the basketball forces of North Plainfield and Plainfield High School and Leal School by graduation last June has put the three Interscholastic League competitors on a more even basis than the circuit has enjoyed in years past, and at this time it would seem that a three-cornered race will be fought for the title. For several seasons past North Plainfield and Plainfield have monopolized the limelight and Leals has been a mere figurehead.

The players taken from the city and borough Highs, however, was of the highest calibre, and two teams, composed of almost entirely new players, will have to be formed for the 1915-16 campaign. Plainfield was probably the hardest hit, and for that reason the boroughites are looked upon as slight favorites to retrieve the honors they lost on the courts last spring.

There is some talk going the rounds of taking Westfield High School into the organization, thereby making a four-team loop. A number of years ago the Mt. Ararat School was a lively contender for interscholastic basketball honors, and the return of this school to the circuit would no doubt add considerable interest to the race.

Westfield's advent would probably take away any of the monopoly that Plainfield and North Plainfield might enjoy, and from the calibre of competition the Westfielders have given the locals and boroughites in the last few years, it wold seem as though they would be likely aspirants to the crown.

DUBIOUS PROSPECTS FOR AN ELKS' TEAM

Plainfield League Contenders a Little Worried Over Material This Fall.

Prospects for a bowling team of sufficient strength to cope with other combines on the Senior Elks' League circuit appear to be exceedingly dubious in Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, this year, and unless some unforeseen happening presents itself between now and October 25, it will be safe to conclude that the Queen City tribe will not occupy even as conspicuous a position in the league standing as it has in previous years. The alleys opened for practice work last night, and plans have been completed for the individual house tourney, competition in which will probably serve to weed out the material for a "big five" this fall. While it is a known fact that some excellent untried material lurks inconspicuously in the club, this talent will have to undergo considerable seasoning before it will be strong or experienced enough to contend with such old reliables as the Newark, New Brunswick and Elizabeth combines.

While they have made no formal announcement to date, rumor has it that Captain V. W. Nash, Jr., Chief KiKely and Johnny Campbell, for reasons known only to themselves, will be relegated to the retired list this year, and some new material will have to be unearthed to fill in the gaps. Nash, Kiely and Campbell have formed a formidable combine in past years, and that this trio would be sadly missed is only to be expected. Taking these three from the list of regulars leaves only Blatz and Laing eligible for duty, and while there are a number of men who substituted on various occasions last year, none of the "subs" ever exhibited any world-beating qualities as a pin-knight.

However, the season is yet young, and what the future may bring forth is unknown at this time. Should the Plainfielders set out to develop an entirely new quintet they would probably need at least two seasons to get the aggregation into running order, and this might prove disastrous to their chances of holding fast to their franchise on the circuit, inasmuch as a number of other lodges each year are clamoring for admission, and it is only fair to believe that the antlered organization is to be maintained for the strongest possible competition on the alleys.

ENTRIES COMING IN FOR ONE-MAN EVENT

Plenty of Enthusiasm in Evidence Over Elks' Tournament This Fall.

Fifteen entries have been received to date for the one-man tournament to be held in the Elks' Club during October, and indications point to the receipt of many more between now and the closing date, Thursday night. V. W. Nash, Jr., is handling the entry list, and the entrants to date include some of the club's best pinners.

The primary obect of conducting this tournament is to single out talent for the senior and junior league teams, it being necessary to secure some new names for the two quintets this fall.

Last night the alleys were opened for the fall season and a large number of enthusiasts took part in the limbering-up practice.

FOOTBALL CAPTAIN IS ALMOST A HERO

Leads Erring Player to Battle Ground, But is Himself Whipped.

Somerville, Sept. 28.—Frank Jewett, captain of the Somerville High School football team for the season of 1915, is almost hero enough to get into a new short story or a motion picture scenario. Almost, but not quite.

But for a whipping he is reported to have received at the hands of Ward Van Arsdale, a member of the team, Jewett would be worthy of a place in fiction. Jewett followed all the established rules laid down for heroes, but he had some hard luck when the final test came.

Thursday afternoon, while at practice, Captain Jewett ordered Van Arsdale to play a certain position and the player refused. A dispute took place, which was damaging to discipline and Jewett and Van Arsdale decided to settle their argument in manly fashion. Hardgrove's Woods was selected as a battle-ground and the captain led his erring player forth to chastise him, while about sixty students of the school looked on to see the reprimand administered in true hero fashion.

Then came the surprise. Van Arsdale was either ignorant of the part he should have played or he refused to sacrifice his face that his football captain might be a hero. From accounts secured from the students who watched the fight he whipped his captain.

Jewett is still captain, but he is a badly battered leader and his crown is in jeopardy.

LAND SHARK MEASURING SEVEN FEET, THREE INCHES

Joseph J. Yates and his son, Edwin, of the borough, have just returned from a three-day trip after big fish at Seaside Park, Barnegat Bay. They report a big run of blues close up in the surf and caught a large number of these fish.

Mr. Yates hooked and landed, after a hard fight, a shark measuring seven feet, three inches, at the same time his son was playing a big channel bass, which finally broke away. There were other anglers from Plainfield, Elizabeth and Newark at the beach and good catches were general.

BOYS' ATHLETIC BOARD NOMINATED AT P. H. S.

At a meeting of the Plainfield High School B. A. A. this morning nominations for directors for the coming year were considered. Herbert Peacock, the only "veteran" of last year's board, presided and in the absence of Ralph Runyon, last year's treasurer, who has entered Penn State, Coach Ralph Patch read the minutes of the last meeting and also a review of last year's work.

Those nominated were Herbert Peacock, Roy Apgar, Jim Noonan, Bill Wheelan, Carlton Dunham, Sheldon Condray, Paul Geary, Warren Mumford, Joe Mutnick, Chester Alpaugh, Gerald Linke and Eustace Eggie. The election will take place Thursday morning.

In the Princeton Cup tennis competition, continued yesterday on a private court, Eustace Eggie, defeated Everett Case, 8-6 and 7-5.

The tournament will be continued next Saturday.

N. P. H. S. NOTES.

The junior class is in a quandary over the ring question. Several members want one design, while the other part is in favor of another. The division still prevails and its members have not come to any agreement.

Mr. Earley is holding conferences with members of the senior class in reference to the required number of credits for graduation.

The tennis players of the High School are practicing regularly for the singles championship of the school, which will take place in the course of two weeks.

Sherman Chandler, chairman of the play committee, has received catalogues from many concerns, and the play will be chosen as quickly as possible.

Word has been received from Lester Chandler, '15, that he has successfully passed the six entrance examinations to Massachusetts Institute of Technology. This is a fine record, as this school is considered the best "Tech" school in the country, and the examinations are exceedingly stiff. The borough boy is pursuing a biological and public health course.

Russell Lee and Frank Fetherston, who are attending Carnegie Institute, have passed first year German, and are studying the scientific branch of this subject.

The Girls' Athletic Association held its first meeting yesterday to organize and elect officers. Marjorie Burtis was elected president; Marion Blair, vice president; Theresa McCullough, treasurer, and Dorothy Martin, secretary. Marion Blair was appointed head of a finance committee with the power of selecting her own members. Theresa McCullough, manager of the basketball team, was also appropriated money to commence the season.

The High School has graduates now attending the following institutions: Dartmouth, Harvard, Mt. Holyoke, Cornell, Syracuse, Rutgers, University of Pennsylvania, Lehigh, Swarthmore, Dickinson, Carnegie Institute of Technology, Oberlin, Clarkson Inetitute of Technology, Colorado School of Mines, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Geneseo Normal School, Newark Normal, Savage School of Physical Training, Y. M. C. A. College and Pratt Institute.

The science department now occupies about four times the former space. The laboratory has been equipped with thirty-seven gas jets, and forty-five individual lockers and three additional closets for apparatus.

WIVES OF KNIGHTS TO GIVE SOCIAL FUNCTION

Mrs. D. J. Galbraith was appointed chairman of the committee, and she has the following women working in conjunction with her: Miss M. M. Burke, secretary, and Mrs. J. J. Varley, treasurer; music committee, Mrs. Robert McCormack and Mrs. N. K. Traynor; ticket committee, J. J. Varley and Robert McCormack.

The next meeting of the committee is scheduled for Monday, October 4, and an invitation is extended to all the feminine friends of Knights. Subcommittees will be appointed at that time and further arrangements completed. Handsome prizes are being donated for the various winners in the play, and a stringed orchestra will be secured to dispense music for those who would rather dance.

MRS HENRY CABOT LODGE.

Boston, Sept. 28.—Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, wife of Senator Lodge, died suddenly from heart disease at her home in Nahant this morning.

SUFFRAGISTS HOLD ENTHUSIASTIC RALLY

Rev. William Lloyd Imes Addressed Large Gathering Last Night.

"The vote is not a right so much as the clear responsibility of every citizen. We need all the men and women standing side by side to meet the social problems of the future," declared Rev. William Lloyd Imes, pastor of Bethel chapel, at a mass meeting held for the colored people in Nonpareil Hall last night, under the auspices of the Plainfield branch of the New Jersey Equal Suffrage League. The rally was one of the most enthusiastic conducted in this city, and the audience was unusually attentive and responsive, many of the more eloquent taking occasion to express their views.

Mrs. Arthur B. Jones, president of the Plainfield Equal Suffrage League, presided at the meeting and introduced the speaker, which included two negro ministers and the president of the Colored Women's Suffrage League in Newark. Mrs. Agnes T. Bohan came out from New York to beg New Jersey men to register today and vote for the suffrage amendment on October 19. Her Irish wit delighted the gathering, and she declared New Jersey must win and give a boost to New York. Mrs. Chaplain L. Riley briefly outlined the objects of the local league. Mrs. Blanche Harris, of Newark, with simple eloquence and kindly humor pointed out the need of colored women and white women, alike, to have representation in the government. Rev. Mr. Collier, pastor of the Mt. Zion church, declared himself with the suffragist, and illustrated his point by the following story: "A young colored boy on his way South encountered a friend, who asked him if he thought to better his condition. 'I don't know, suh,' the youth replied, 'but I can't worse it.'" J. M. Johnson, of Elizabeth, and W. C. Harrison, of this city, also spoke in favor of the amendment.

VOTE IN THE PRIMARY.

Many men will stay away from the primaries in the various wards of the city and nearby boroughs today because of a belief that it is a useless waste of energy and time to participate in the balloting. Nothing could be further from the truth While there are not many contests for nominations for various offices the men who are to be elected in October and who will fill the city and county offices for the next term are to be named today and they are named by the people, at least by those who are sufficiently interested to exercise their right in these selections. There cannot be good men in office if good men are not named in the primary.

Primary day has come to be known as the time for politicians and party leaders to settle their fights. It is the fault of the average voter that this is so. He has but to take an active part in the nominating of men for all offices and there will be a visible falling off in the power of party bosses. If there is a fight in your ward or your borough and you do not cast your vote for the man you think best qualified to represent the people you are as guilty of putting the one nominated in office as if it had been done with your vote.

Another important feature of the primary of today is the registration. There are many who have not yet qualified to vote in the election of next month. By casting a vote for the best men in your party who are asking for office today, you can put them a little nearer election in October, and at the same time can qualify as a voter in that election. Do not ignore the importance of the primary.

FUTURE SCHOOL SITES.

Mayor Donnelly, of Trenton, in an address delivered at the cornerstone laying of a new school in that city, made a suggestion which the Plainfield Board of Education would do well to seriously consider. He proposed that the Trenton Board immediately secure sites for at least three schools to be erected in the future, purchasing the land in sections of the city where it is evident such schools are soon to be needed. The sites could be used as playgrounds until the needed buildings are erected.

That there is much merit in such a suggestion no one can dispute. While the old contention that such proceedings might boost the tax rate would surely be presented if this method of land purchase were tried here, there is nothing to such an argument. The money could be raised by bond issues, which would make the future generations, who will secure the advantages of such a plan, pay the bill. Even with this method it would be more economical, for the natural increase in the value of real estate would make the property cost more a few years hence, than the interest would mount up to.

The Trenton Times, prompted by Mayor Donnelly's suggestion, aptly says that the time to buy sites for parks, schools and other enterprises for the public convenience, welfare and health, is before the land has been improved and when the prices are low. Even should the future disclose that a location is unsuitable, it will be easy enough for the city to dispose of the lands and reap the benefit of the increase in value that the growth in population has given to them.

OUR PART IN PREPAREDNESS.

The part this State can take in the national program of preparedness is in adopting plans and making appropriations for a thoroughly efficient National Guard. This must be done without delay, says the Newark Eagle. It is important, therefore, to know what kind of men are candidates for the Legislature and what views they have on preparedness. The National Defense League has queried a number of Assembly candidates in this county and had satisfactory replies. The league, and, in fact, voters generally throughout the State, should put to all of the legislative candidates in all counties the same queries to place them on public record.

Many of the legislative candidates are members of the Legislature of 1915, and these men share the responsibility for the stupid refusal of the Legislature to vote a small appropriation for maneuvers for the National Guard. These men especially should be made to give a specific and unqualified pledge, for it was evident last winter that they are lacking in some of the attributes of American citizenship.

One of the amusing things about the campaign for suffrage is the fact that although many of the men disagree on the subject, they get along in peace and harmony, and will undoubtedly forget all about the matter as soon as the issue is decided. On the other hand the women never seem to forget the smallest thing that has been done by the "other side," and the campaign is liable to bring about animosities which will not soon be forgotten.

Whatever they may say about Senator Martine, he must be admired as a man with plenty of nerve. In spite of the criticism which the Suffragists have seen fit to heap upon his head, the Senator has not hesitated to again send out a lot of anti-suffrage literature under his governmental frank.

Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed has come out against suffrage. When we consider the fact that when he was more active in the game, he was about as adroit a politician as the state has ever known, we recall the suffragists claim that the politicians are all against them.

Trying to think 'mid their shriek and shout—
From all of such pain relieve me!

There seems to be a disposition of some people in this world to have their hammer ready at all times and to knock everything that comes along. Now, Mr. Knocker, this may seem a pleasure to yourself, but if you could see yourself as others see you, it would wake you up; it is a sad plight to get into, for you not only make things disagreeable for yourself but for your friends as well. Now try to turn over a new leaf and be an optimist; throw away your pessimistic ideas just for a day and see how much better the world will seem to you. Depressed

We feel very much out of it, in this column. While the press in general has done all in its power to scare the gizzards out of the newspaper readers, in the last few months, we have gone on comfortably remarking about things, just as if human nature were remaining the same. If some one will kindly tell us how to throw an awful, sleep-disturbing, hair-raising scare into our readers, we will gladly consider it.

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Tuberculosis—Early Symptoms

A FREQUENT query is: What are the early symptoms of pulmonary tuberculosis?

Different modes of onset were described in the Health Talk published January 30, 1915. These were, briefly, as follows: (1) With symptoms of dyspepsia and anemia; (2) With pleurisy; (3) Symptoms like malaria; (4) With laryngitis (prolonged hoarseness or huskiness of voice); (5) With bronchitis ("acute bronchitis" is always suspicious in young people); (6) Onset with hemorrhage.

Symptoms alone are only suggestive; the diagnosis of incipient tuberculosis of the lungs must be made by a careful consideration of symptoms in conjunction with the signs found on examination of the naked chest. If there is any material expectorated it should be examined for the germs of tuberculosis, though a diagnosis may be made without finding the germs; indeed, most case of incipient tuberculosis expectorate no sputum, or if they do expectorate any the microscope shows no bacill present for many weeks or months.

Any person, especially between fifteen and forty years of age, who notes a loss of weight, a falling off in endurance, an unusual breathlessness on moderate exertion, a little feverishness now and then, a slight cough or a frequent desire to clear the throat, should think of the possibility of tuberculosis as a cause of the ill health.

Practically all of us harbor living tubercle bacilli somewhere in the body, perhaps in the deep lymph nodes — latent tuberculosis — as proved by the tuberculin tests. Unhygienic living conditions favor the lighting up of this latent infection into active disease which produces symptoms. Then, too, prolonged intimate contact with a person who has tuberculosis and doesn't know it or wilfully neglects to take sanitary precautions against spreading the infection, may add enough infection to light up the smouldering spark.

Men who have studied the disease most thoroughly teach that childhood is the time of infection, youth the time of super-infection and lighting up of the disease.

Don't worry. Have your chest examined—not your breast, or your collar bones alone, but the entire naked chest, fore and aft, right down to the diaphragm. And have it examined at least once a month if you have been living or working in contact with any one who had the disease.

Above all, never waste precious time taking "cough medicine" not prescribed by your own doctor. Nearly all ready-to-swallow cough medicines contain some kind of dope which lulls the nerves and suppresses the cough, no matter what the cause may be—and that is a dangerous business for the individual who happens to have tuberculosis.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Deafness Following Shampoo

I have had a numbness and deafness in left ear for several days following a hair shampoo. Is it a cold? Will you advise?

Answer—No. It sounds like a plug of hardened wax in the ear, which swells when moistened and gives trouble. Better have it syringed out by your doctor.

We Advise The Yankee Treatment

Would it be safe to have an ulcerated tooth drawn while the face is swollen?

Answer—As safe, or rather more so, as it is to pull out a sliver from a festering wound.

WEST POINT

WEST POINT is a military school where young Americans are educated at great public expense to look down upon the common soldier and refuse to associate with him.

It is the only real snob factory in the country. By the time a free-born young citizen has spent four years in this school measuring the distance between a private and a commissioned officer with astronomical instruments he is quite ready to take a commission in the regular army and to disinfect himself whenever a private soldier comes near enough to him to clean his shoes.

And yet the only difference between the two may be the fact that the father of the private didn't have a pull with his Congressman.

There is great distress in military quarters because young Americans rush out of the regular army faster than they rush into it. Yet we should take pride in the fact that very few American young men can be persuaded for $13 a month to accept a job as an inferior animal.

Besides being taught aristocracy in its most deadly form, the cadets at West Point are given a thorough instruction in mathematics, the sciences, military tactics, horsemanship, bed-making, housewifery, dancing, uniform-wearing, glove-cleaning and obedience in its various branches. When he graduates he knows more about calculus than a college professor, is a daring and decorative young soldier and can talk to a girl in a way which makes her wonder why they allow common taxpaying young chaps to linger in the vicinity of brass buttons.

West Point is located on the mountain side above the Hudson River and has recently been rebuilt into a very beautiful place with a tall Gothic chapel and vast barracks and school buildings. It has the hardest course of study of any school in the country and the government is never so pleased as when it is booting out some young soldier on which it has spent two years and several thousands of dollars for failing to acquire enough French to fight well. Almost all of this country's famous soldiers have been graduates of West Point. Each congressional district in the country is entitled to a cadet in the school, but it sometimes takes a district a long time to find a boy who can pass the mental and physical examination. West Point boys are natural athletes and get a fine training in every branch of athletics but running.

Ready to disinfect himself whenever a private soldier comes near enough to him to clean his shoes

Views Of The Press

Napoleonic

THAT is an appealing story—it is at least as well authenticated as most of the war anecdotes which History will sift and edit at leisure—about the young officer of an Austrian regiment who, having complained of discrimination in the distribution of military honors, was decorated by the German Kaiser, in person, for extraordinary valor.

It may be believed that there is a good deal of complaint of this nature. Some deeds of valor are likely to be exaggerated, and some that are worthy of recognition may be overlooked. With Iron Crosses being distributed with a lavish hand, an honest soldier who fails to get one is apt to feel slighted. From all accounts of the great number that have been so honored, the effect may be that the soldier who cannot display a decoration may find himself, ultimately, as distinguished as the occasional Civil War veteran who, fifty years after, recalls with pride that, among so many Colonels, he was a private.

It seems that this young Austrian officer, being attached to the Kaiser's retinue when he made his headquarters one night in the house of a landed proprietor, "somewhere in Poland," had the temerity, surreptitiously, to pen his complaint in the Kaiser's private field book; on behalf of his comrades alleging that, because of the favoritism of higher officers, not a single reward had been conferred on his regiment, though it had served faithfully and valiantly from the beginning of the war. The Kaiser, upon discovering the unfamiliar handwriting, summoned all the regimental officers into his presence and demanded to know the writer. Bronzed faces blanched, for all felt that the impertinence might be punished by death. But the culprit promptly stepped forward, and boldly repeated his grievance, with additional particulars and argument.

"In how many battles have you fought?" demanded the Kaiser. A long list was enumerated. "How did you dare to write in the Emperor's note-book, and where did you get it?" The response was full and frank. "I congratulate you on the highest courage, as a Knight of the Iron Cross," said Wilhelm, instantly—according to the narrative, "as he embraced the Lieutenant."

Now wasn't that handsome of the Kaiser? It was truly Napoleonic. It may bring to mind the threadbare anecdote of the soldier of the Old Guard who had suffered the loss of an arm in his Emperor's service. Napoleon, happening along, noted the emblem of the Legion of Honor on his breast, with the distinctive decoration of the lowest grade, Chevalier. "Lose your other arm and I will make you an Officer of the Legion," said Napoleon. Whereupon, according to the veracious chronicle, the devoted soldier seized his sword and cut off his other arm. This story could not be improved, of course, if we could have it explained how he did it. And we would not, for anything, press the point of whether the Iron Cross was bestowed on the Austrian Lieutenant for extraordinary valor on the field of carnage, or as displayed in daring to write in the Kaiser's note-book.—Providence Daily Journal.

A Real Estate Contract

Q. Where one makes a contract to sell real estate, is it necessary for the contract to fix the price?

A. Before the bargain can be complete, the price must be definite and certain. However, if the contract does not specifically name the price to be paid for the property, it will be sufficient if it provides a means by which the amount to be paid may be definitely determined.

You Should Have Thought Of That Before

Q. I am occupying a house as a tenant. I signed a written lease which says that I am to "keep and maintain the premises and all fixtures in good and substantial repair and condition." My landlord is much better able to afford such repairs than I am and the house needs some repairs at the present time. What could I do about it?

A. You are bound by the terms of your lease.

Contract Must Be In Writing

Q. If a contract is not to be performed until eighteen months after the time the agreement is made, must it be in writing? A. Yes.

His "Fountain," As Usual, Wouldn't Work

Q. Where one, in making out and signing a check, uses a pencil, instead of pen and ink, will the check be good?

A. Yes. The practice is not commendable, however, as it invites fraud.

Fire Insurance In A Mortgage

Q. May a provision be inserted in a chattel mortgage requiring the mortgagor to insure the goods against loss by fire? A. Yes.

A Legal Provision

Q. Where a landlord rents out a farmhouse, is it legal to put a clause in the lease providing that the tenant must reside in the farmhouse unless authorized by the landlord not to do so? A. Yes.

Then He Repented

Q. I gave a man permission to clear my land of timber. Isn't it possible and legal to cancel this permission? A. Yes.

Federal Judges

Q. How are federal judges appointed?

A. They are appointed by the President of the United States, with the advice and consent of the Senate.

A Personal Check

Q. If a man should sign a check as "John Jones, Agent," would this be considered his personal check?

A. As a general rule, where one signs a check in this manner, without revealing the name of the person for whom he is acting, the check will be considered as his personal check.

Office Not A Domicile

Q. If a professional man maintains an office in a certain town, is this conclusive evidence, in law, that he resides in such town?

A. No. It may afford some evidence, but is not conclusive.

The Man Who "Didn't Know It Was In" Us

"What! Not little Meade Brown!" he exclaims when, in another state, he comes across an old schoolmate's name heading a list of gubernatorial candidates. "But it can't be the same!" he tells himself, "that boy was a dunce." Yet it is the same, he discovers. And the discovery gives him rather a guilty feeling: for years, little Meade Brown has figured as his strongest illustration in arguing that the public school should vary its curriculum to suit the individual. "When I was a boy, I used to do one of my schoolmate's lessons for him—a stupid little chap named Meade Brown," he has told many people! "Now, is it fair that such a child should have to wrestle with an amount of work that brighter children can master in a minute?" And here was Meade Brown a candidate—how did he do it? The biggest dunce in the world is he who doesn't appreciate the capacity for rehabilitation in human nature.

His mouth hangs open.

A Divorce Plea

A man who told the girl he wooed
His age was forty-three;
For alimony now is sued
And finds that Fate is rather rude;
Thrift takes the mask from pulchritude;
And mulcted he may be;
Because when "forty-three" he told her
He knew that he was ten years older.

A man's no older than he feels,
So runs the ancient saw;
For pity such a case appeals;
I've heard of few more luckless deals,
Yet Justice though with leaden heels
Pursues him with the law;
She quite ignores compassion human,
And, being a Goddess, backs the woman.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — How Bibbley Wah Fell Off the Yellow Buckboard.

Everybody but Bibbley Wah Held on Tight.

"ANOTHER pet on the farm was an old horse by the name of Ned," began daddy. "His real name was Nebuchadnezzar, and he was as fat as butter, with a back so broad that Bibbley Wah rode on him as safely as in a rocking chair."

"Was he tame?" asked Evelyn, who had never played with a horse.

"He was very gentle," answered daddy, smiling. "As the farm was large and lay over hills and meadows and ponds and valleys, the uncle used to ride about from part to part in a comfortable yellow buckboard which had only one seat. It was a very good looking buckboard, freshly painted, and, with fat old Ned to draw it, was a very jolly wagon to go lightly over the farm.

"There was a pond that later I shall tell you a great deal about," daddy went on, "and as there was some trouble about a fence around it the uncle had to drive there a good deal. Sometimes he let the kiddies go in swimming if there was time, and always they waded out for water lilies. While the uncle was busy with plans and the kiddies played, old Ned would stand in the tall grass and stamp at horse flies, which grew near the pond as big as dragon flies, and bit him worse than mosquitoes do us.

"Oh, Bibbley Wah is going to get hurt again!" cried Jack.

"Bibbley Wah never gets hurt," said daddy. "She leads a charmed life, and she only comes very near getting hurt. Well, she liked best of all to ride on the back of the buckboard with the boys, and this time, coming home, her uncle was so busy that he did not notice she had cuddled down in the lily pads beside Jim. So off they started."

"Untied from a post, bitten, annoyed by horse flies, hungry for his dinner and glad to get home, off old Ned dashed through the cart path that led to the road. The uncle held him tight, but he, too, was glad to get home. So with a whisk of his long black tail, with his fine head flung high, old Ned took the buckboard bumping over the cart path till—thump! the buckboard hit an old log, the wheels went up on one side, and everybody but little Bibbley Wah held on tight. Bibbley Wah held on to the lilies."

"Lilies aren't very strong, so out she rolled into the soft grass, and one wheel went square over her little arm."

"It broke!" cried Jack.

"Strange to say, it didn't. It got bruised; hurt so much she cried. But the bone gave to the soft earth she fell on, and when her uncle had bandaged it up with his kerchief she came home, smiling and happy as ever."

Household Hints..

TAPIOCA DISHES

Tapioca Sherbet—Boil one-half cup of tapioca, one cup of sugar and a pint of water in the double boiler, stirring often. When the mixture is clear, add the juice of two lemons and remove from the stove. When cool, stir into it briskly the well-beaten whites of two eggs. Serve with a soft custard.

Danish Pudding—Three cups of hot water, one-half cup tapioca, one spoon salt, one-half cup sugar and one small glass of currant jelly. Cook tapioca in the water for fifteen minutes. Add sugar, salt, and jelly. Serve with whipped cream, sweetened.

Maple Walnut Tapioca—Heat one pint milk. Stir in two tablespoons tapioca. Cook fifteen minutes, add the yelks of two eggs, well beaten, and a pinch of salt. Stir for three minutes and let cool. Beat two-thirds cup thick maple syrup and add to the tapioca. Add one cup walnut meats, broken fine. Serve with whipped cream and place whole meats over the top.

Rothe Grutze—Put one-half cup of tapioca into a double boiler with one cup sugar, one-fourth teaspoon salt, and one and one-half cups of hot water. Wash two cups of rhubarb, and add to the tapioca mixture. Cook until the rhubarb is tender. Mash with a silver fork and pour while hot into a large mold, or individual molds. Chill, turn out and serve with whipped cream.

THE TABLE

Salmon Croquettes—Four good-sized potatoes boiled in salt water until thoroughly done. Mash thoroughly, add one can red salmon, one egg, pinch of salt and pepper. After being well mixed form in croquettes and fry in hot fat until a delicate brown. Serve hot with spoonful mayonnaise dressing on each croquette.

Cherry Dainty—Mix one-fourth pound sweet butter, the yolks of sugar, one-fourth pound almonds, and one piece of citron cut fine. To this add one-fourth pound black bread moistened in one-half cup fruit juice. After this is well mixed add two pounds black cherries left whole and the beaten whites of the six eggs. Put in one large pudding dish or cake pan well buttered and bake.

Neapolitan Blanc Mange—Dissolve a box of gelatin in enough cold water to cover. Take one quart rich milk, put on the stove and let come to a boil, then add gelatin, letting it cook until entirely dissolved; then add three-fourths cup granulated sugar; strain through thin muslin or cheesecloth into four molds. Take one tablespoon chocolate, melt over steam and stir into one portion, flavor with vanilla. Color another portion with any rich juice to make it a pink, using about one tablespoon juice. For a third add the grated rind of one or two oranges (according to size) and some of the juice. Fourth portion leave plain. Return each portion (except the white) to the stove and stir until very hot. When all are cold, dip a mold in cold water, pour in half of the white; next, half of the pink, then half of brown, and lastly half of yellow. Repeat layers in the same order, but be sure that one layer is firm before adding the next. Place the mold in icebox for several hours, then turn out and serve with whipped cream.

Near Angel Food—One cup granulated sugar, one cup flour, three teaspoons baking powder; sift together four times. Add one cup scalding milk; stir together well. Take whites of two eggs well beaten and stir quickly in the mixture. Bake in loaf forty-five minutes in moderate oven.

HOMEMADE MARSHMALLOWS

Soak one envelope of granulated gelatin in ten tablespoons cold water.

Boil two cups granulated sugar in ten tablespoons water until it spins a thread; add the gelatin to syrup and let stand until partially cooled. Add a few grains of salt and one teaspoon vanilla; beat until it becomes white and thick.

Pour to a depth of about one inch in granite pans that have been dusted thickly with powdered sugar, and set in a cool place, cut into cubes and roll in powdered sugar.

These may be varied by adding chocolate or by substituting fruit juices for part of the water.

CHAPTER XIV.

Soap Bubbles.

"SKINS, skates, shirts. Where's soap?" Rodney recited to Mary and Peale.

"Skylights, slates, slides," echoed Mary over his shoulder.

"Smelters, smokestacks, snuff," went on Peale.

"Ah, here it is—soap manufacturers," said Rodney at last, skimming down the page. "Two-seven-six Broad. Here is one of father's factories."

"I've got one too—374 Schuyler," said Peale.

"So have I—480 Audubon," Mary chimed in.

With one accord they dropped the book and darted to the telephones, shouting all together:

"Two-seven-six Broad."

"Four-eight-o Audubon."

"Three-seven-four Schuyler, and hurry, sweetie."

"It'll have to be old rose," said Rodney in an aside as he held the wire.

"Castile is the cheapest," Peale suggested.

"Order small cakes," said the prudent Mary. And then they all began again together:

"Hello. Is this the Martin Soap company? We want to get some soap—pink castile—small cakes—40,000 or 50,000 cakes—immediate delivery. What's the price?"

"Hello, four-eight-o Audubon. I want to find out if I can buy a lot of soap right away—old rose—castile—50,000 cakes. We want it this afternoon."

"Hello, son. I want to buy a lot of soap, 50,000 cakes. Got to have some of it today—smallest size castile cakes you keep. If you haven't old rose, pink 'll do. Who am I? None of your business."

This last message, with its bit of airy persiflage, came from Peale, who looked at the others and gave a large and happy wink as he surveyed them waiting at their receivers.

The tide had turned.

They could hardly wait till the soap came in and was shipped out again to Chicago. All three of them were as excited as children waiting before the doors that open on a Christmas tree. Fifty thousand cakes! It was an inestimable, an infinite, an incredible number. Rodney had not an idea whether a row of 50,000 cakes of 13 Soap would reach from our earth to the moon or only from the Union hotel to the railroad terminal. They came and came, an endless chain. But when

"So have I," Mary chimed in.

the influx stopped and had been carefully counted by Mary, Miss Burke and the office boy, pro tem. it totaled, not 50,000, though it seemed a million, but only 5,000 altogether.

"Are you sure?" asked Peale and Rodney in one breath. "Aren't there any more?"

"Quite sure," said Mary.

"Positive," said Miss Burke.

"Are you certain sure there aren't any more of them anywhere?" repeated Ambrose.

"Search me," said the office boy.

It was true; only 5,000 of the lot had been delivered.

The company's three officers made a dash for their telephones. Peale got 374 Schuyler, Mary 480 Audubon and Rodney 276 Broad in a jiffy, only to be told that there was no more soap in stock. In each instance the news was conveyed in a cool and uncordial tone that gave them to understand there was nothing more doing in that quarter. What was the matter?

Peale turned round and stared at his companions and partners aghast.

"Well, wouldn't that get you?" he ejaculated.

Rodney was the most crestfallen of them all, for an idea had come to him of the true reason of things.

"It's the pater," he said in a quiet tone that carried conviction. "He shut down on us."

Mary set her lips and nodded her head in her turn, for the same idea had occurred to her. She was afraid it was all too true. As one sometimes, even in a nightmare, tells oneself this horrible sensation is a dream, so she told herself now this cruel, horrible refusal to give them more soap was only a part of old Mr. Martin's bluff to make Rodney work, one more of his "scenes" in his grand scheme to transform Rodney from an idle rich man's son into a real money getter; that tomorrow, in real life, the other cakes would come.

Peale Had Swung Around the Circle.

In one mental flash she would see the thing this way and now that.

Then she began to look on the more practical side of things, to turn round and see where they stood. An order for 5,000 cakes in itself was not so bad. It was the very largest they had ever received, at any rate. They would ship the 5,000 promptly and Brown & James would pay cash for them in ten days. She made a rapid calculation. They were giving old Mr. Martin 3 cents a cake for them and would get $3,000 back. That would mean $2,850. She smoothed out the frown in her pretty forehead and announced aloud:

"Well, it means about $3,000 to us, and cash too. After all, that's not so bad."

Peale cheered up immediately.

"Cash," he repeated, rolling the word round in his mouth and tasting it. "The most beautiful word in the English language."

"Except one," said Rodney, looking at Mary.

"Which is?" Peale queried.

"Love," said Rodney.

"No, cash," said Peale. "Why, look here. Think what this means—$3,000."

"We'll discount Jones' note," said Mary resolutely.

"And it's only a beginning," went on Peale. "Give me back that telegram. It'll be my letter of credit, my passport and all the rest of it. I'll show it to the advertising agents. They'll trust me on the strength of that."

It proved a help indeed, this cash, when it came on in due course, but not a cure. It vanished like smoke in thin air, like cream before a set of kittens, like snow upon the desert's dusty face. Their joy in it was short lived, because it was so soon gone. Again there came a day when the end of the month, with its next rent payment, seemed much nearer than the first, a day when time, which Peale said was the same thing as money, seemed very much like time, and short time at that, and very little like real money. To make matters worse Peale meanwhile had swung round the circle again, waving his "letter of credit" and running up a lot more in the way of bills on new advertising. He had scooted off for a week and never let the office know by so much as a telegram where he was. Then, as cheerfully as he had gone, he blew home again one day, announcing that he had contracted for about $30,000 worth of advertising in Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Washington and a few other eastern metropolises. He declared it was the greatest advertising campaign ever undertaken since George W. Advertising was a young man.

For a self respecting bookkeeper it was all dreadfully disheartening; Mary sighed and found it very difficult. Making five go into two was nothing compared with the effort to make $22,818.09 go into $133.13.

For a little while the days passed uneventfully, drawing nearer the inevitable end. Then came the last day of the month, and Mary's blue devils were very large and blue. The day passed quietly enough in the 13 Soap company's offices, so far as outward signs revealed it; there were few callers, Jones being out of the way, though Mary knew he would be heard from tomorrow if his note was not properly met at the bank. How was she ever going to get a check certified to meet it!

Rodney at his desk sat quietly absorbed. He rustled a few papers now and then, and used his rubber stamp, but its impact on the pad and paper lacked the usual vigor. Even Peale's head, Mary noted, drooped a little as he wrote his ads.—ads. that would be born to blush unseen if money could not be raised somehow, somewhere, to pay for them.

As the hour of 5 drew near Mary began to make some long drawn out preparations for going home. This last quarter of an hour of time must be killed and done to death by fair means or by foul. A resolution had been slowly forming in her head and now took definite shape. She shut down her desk with a delightfully loud noise and stood up.

"I may be a little late tomorrow," she said to Rodney as she began putting on her hat.

"All right," said the president mildly.

Rodney too looked as if something were working in his mind, and no wonder, Mary thought, with their situation what it was. Mary knew him like a book, but this time she would ask no questions and keep her own counsel. She was going straight up to Mr. Martin's on Fifth avenue and have a long talk and argument with him. He simply must let them have those extra 45,000 cakes of soap for Brown & James.

She scurried over to the Third Avenue elevated and climbed the stairs of the station at Worth street, her brain working all the time. In a curious, detached spirit, she saw her nickel slide into the groove made by so many previous nickels on the hard wood sill under the office window and dropped her ticket delicately in the ticket chopper's glass box.

Several local trains passed, all crowded, and, being tired and enjoying the fresh air, Mary was disposed to take her time and wait till she got the seat she wanted. It gave her a luxurious feeling to let the trains go by and not run after them, as people usually did in New York.

A woman came presently and sat down beside her, with an evident inclination to talk. She was young, though her peroxide hair made her look older. There were two types of women with dyed hair like this, Mary had noted—the fast and the sentimental. Her neighbor was obviously the latter, and Mary's looks had probably appealed to her. Without insolence she looked Mary over thoroughly a moment as if appraising her.

"Are you a business woman?" she asked after a little pause.

Mary was good natured and a good mixer, and, seeing that the woman suffered only from human curiosity, she answered, "Yes," adding just for fun:

"I'm a vice president and a secretary. Our company has offices on Broadway."

The woman looked quite impressed.

"What line are you folks in?" she pursued.

"Soap," said Mary.

"Married?" asked the woman.

"Not yet," said Mary.

"Well, you'll get a husband if you want one," said the woman, with a crisp laugh. "A pretty girl like you usually gets what's coming to her."

"I'm engaged," said Mary, amused.

"You see?" said the woman "Now, I'm a bachelor maid, as they call them nowadays, myself. Most of my girl friends have too much trouble with their husbands. None of your married life for mine. No, sir. No matter how swell a little home I might have, it wouldn't appeal to me! When are you going to be married?" the woman inquired.

"Oh, I don't know," said Mary. "I suppose we'll go down to the city hall some day and have it over with."

"You'd like a nice wedding, though, wouldn't you," the woman continued sympathetically, "with white satin and a wedding veil and all? I know one girl who's never got over it because she was married in a brown dress."

The woman with the dyed hair rushed off presently, shrieking, "Oh, there's Mayme," and Mary was left alone again. The local that she waited for came along, and she got aboard at her leisure.

Mary alighted at Seventy-second street, keeping her courage at the striking point, and pressed the bell button on Mr. Cyrus Martin's front door. Johnson, looking surprised, but pleased to see her, let her in and showed her into the little reception room downstairs to wait while he took her name up to Mr. Martin.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. IVA LEONARD

"Do you know, Hal is getting to be a regular whiner?" Hal's grandmother looked at him over the top of her glasses. "I think you can't begin too soon to teach children how to face life."

"You are a good deal of a Spartan, mother," laughed Nell. "Was it your training that made you able to march through anything with head up and colors flying?"

"My mother was a very wise woman. I remember when I was a little tot I used to have to bring a pan of chips from the woodshed every day. I grew very tired of it and whined around when asked to do it. One day mother said, 'Take the pan and while you are gathering the chips, notice where it hurts you and come and tell me. I was so interested trying to locate the discomfort that the pan was full in no time and when I reported rather shamefacedly that I couldn't tell where it hurt, mother said, 'Don't ever let me hear you whine about anything so small that you can't find it.' It made a great impression on me."

"That was a very clever idea, wasn't it?" Nell looked up brightly into Mrs. Morton's face.

"When I was older mother often said to me: 'Make yourself do something every day that you dislike.' It's a great training,'" continued the old lady.

"Nowadays people do only the things they like. The aim seems to be to make children like what you want them to do."

"I know," replied the old lady, "and in my opinion it does not fit people to face hard conditions. They choose the course of least resistance every time, and I believe it undermines character to choose only pleasant things."

"How would you stop Hal from whining?" asked Nell.

"I have at home a little room off the kitchen that I used to call the 'howlery growlery.' I sent Dick into that room when he whined or cried or made himself a disagreeable neighbor, as I called it. He could come out whenever he could smile and be cheerful. The room was light, he had playthings there. The idea was that he must not disturb anybody else with his bad feelings, and that's a lesson one can't learn too soon."

"No indeed," assented Nell.

"My brothers helped my education along in that particular. I was the only girl, and of course I always wanted to go with them when they went fishing or tramping through the woods. They said: 'Girls can't stand what boys can; they always cry.' 'I don't cry; let me go.' I pleaded. 'You can go just as long as you never fuss or complain about things,' they agreed. I learned to stand all sorts of inconvenience and even pain in silence. I even laughed about it." Mrs. Morton had a pleased reminiscent smile on her face.

"I wish I had been fortunate enough to have such brothers to train me. That is a lesson I have never learned; to make light of annoyances," said Nell.

"Begin right away," said the old lady encouragingly. "You are young yet, and this is one of your few faults."

"Oh, thank you for the compliment implied. I shall want to qualify for an angel at no late date." Nell made an exaggerated bow.

"Seeing a fault is half the battle. We are so ready to excuse ourselves that all our faults are explained away usually." The old lady peered over her glasses at Nell.

"It's hard to keep self-respect facing faults, you know," laughed Nell, "and it's hard to live in comfort with your self-respect in a poor state of repair."

"It's a good thing to prick your bubble of self-esteem once in a while; it is unsightly when too large," replied Mrs. Morton with a chuckle.

Temperance

NEWS AND VIEWS

Conducted by THE W. C. T. U.

The good effects of prohibition are already being felt in Montgomery, Alabama, through the better collection of rents and grocery accounts, says the Montgomery Journal. A leading real estate dealer declared recently that the collection of rents has improved at least 50 per cent. since the prohibition law went into effect, and he learned from the small grocer, who rents from him, the pleasant news that this class of merchant also has been benefited by the new law.

"I have made a close and careful study of the liquor question," said the real estate dealer, "and I have demonstrated that the money that has gone over the saloon counter indirectly comes to the merchant or the real estate man in nineteen out of twenty cases.

"When we had the open saloon I found that in nine out of ten cases where the tenants failed to pay their rent, it was due to the money being diverted for liquor. I also have several grocers as tenants. Frequently they complained to me of having bad accounts, stating that they could not get their money out of a great many of their customers. I asked these grocers if they had ever investigated the habits of their customers. They had not, but they did so, and found that the overwhelming per cent of their customers who were behind in their accounts were victims of liquor. I say, therefore, that liquor has been indirectly responsible for all of these distressing conditions. The grocers tell me now that their collections are much better. I know that my rents are being paid more promptly than ever before.

"I had not been such a rank prohibitionist myself until I made these investigations personally. I am opposed chiefly to the open saloon, as it cultivates the liquor habit in our rising generation. It is a kindergarten for our boys to acquire a taste for liquor.

"The money that goes over a saloon counter does no one any good except the man who runs the bar and the man who owns the building."

Mrs. Mary Harris Armor writes: "Since the first of May I have spoken in Connecticut, Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio and at the World's Christian Endeavor Convention, in Chicago, closing my itinerary at the great summer assembly at Ocean Grove, New Jersey. Everywhere there is a spirit of splendid optimism in the great fight—nay more—a purpose ribbed and edged with steel to annihilate the liquor traffic and that speedily. The heart of the world is awake, and the voice of the reformer is as insistent and as universal as the cry of the distressed.

"The liquor traffic, antagonized once only by the church, and feebly by that, finds itself beset today by foes on every side—foes implacable, relentless, determined and armed to the teeth. Not only the religious world, but the business world, the sporting world, the scientific world and the military world are set in battle array against it, and the only world to which it can look for support is its long-time ally, the underworld of vice, which has ever been its dearest friend and its closest ally.

"In every battle for the uplift of humanity and the glory of God the white ribbon is in evidence, and I believe not until 'The Books are opened' will the world have any idea of the marvelous things that have been wrought by this heaven-born organization."

The faith and activities of Georgia white ribboners may be summed up in the words of one verse of our convention song, written by Mrs. Annie Jons-Pyron, president of the Bartow county W. C. T. U., and daughter of the great evangelist, Rev. Sam P. Jones.

"Our strength is in Jehovah and our cause is in His care,
And with Him to lead us onward we will work and fight and dare.
For National Prohibition shall be our daily prayer,
Our righteous cause shall win."

FACILITIES OFFERED BY CITY NATIONAL BANK

The City National Bank, by arrangements made several weeks ago, offers to its depositors check collection without exchange cost through the New York Clearing House. It also, by its membership in the Federal Reserve System, gives the same advantage through the Federal Reserve Bank, of New York.

The result of this is that this bank's customers need not request that their checks be stamped "Payable in New York Funds," in order to avoid exchange and collection charges.

NO TEA-SIPPING AT 'SUFF' MEETING

Women Discuss Campaign Just Like Regular Politicians.

WORKERS ARE WILLING

School in Practical Politics to Be Started at Headquarters Friday, October 1—Whirlwind Tour of Somerset County a Feature.

Very different from the old style suffrage meetings was the business session of the Plainfield Equal Suffrage League held yesterday at campaign headquarters, on Depot avenue. It was the last meeting of the league before the primary of October 19, and the women were called to outline plans for pre-election efforts.

"People who don't want to work won't come," said the president, and she added that it would probably be a small crowd that attended, but she was wrong. The suffrage enthusiasts manifested their interest in the cause by attending and volunteering for any work that might be suggested. They are confident that the amendment will be passed and they will be the political equal of man when next they meet.

That the women are going to become adept at the intricate and diplomatic game of politics was apparent

UNION MUSICIANS MAKE A PROTEST

Object to Dutch Arms Band Playing at Laying of Postoffice Cornerstone.

Plans are being perfected for the corner-stone laying at the new Plainfield postoffice Saturday, October 9, the ceremonies connected with which will be in charge of the Grand Lodge of Masons of New Jersey. The copper box which is to be placed in the corner-stone is displayed in the show window of Arthur H. Osmun's store on Park avenue. All documents and papers to go in the box will be placed therein on the Friday night preceding the exercises, when the box will be sealed.

It is said that some feeling has been engendered among the union musicians of the city through the action of the Dutch Arms Band, of Trinity Reformed church, volunteering their services free for the occasion. The union musicians feel that if the offer of the Dutch Arms Band is accepted it will mean the loss of a lucrative engagement for the regular professional musicians of the city.

While it has been learned that the Dutch Arms Band has offered its services free, it was stated today that no definite arrangements have been made with the organization for furnishing music on the above occasion. It is largely because of the fact that the members of the Dutch Arms Band are not union men that the Musicians' Union is opposed to their playing on this and other occasions. The matter has been referred to William H. Lunger, business agent for the Building Trades Council, who has the matter under advisement at the present time.

SPLENDID WORK OF LOCAL BRANCH

Prince of Wales Relief Society Gives Valuable Aid to Soldiers and Sailors.

MAKE 74,743 ARTICLES

Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers, Chairman of Committee, Gives Interesting Detailed Account of Last Season's Activities.

Since its organization about seven months ago as a separate body, but still working in conjunction with the New Jersey Branch of the Prince of Wales Relief for Soldiers and Sailors, the local hospital committee of the same branch has been doing a splendid work in sending supplies to the convalescent men in the army and navy hospitals of Europe. In its new departure the branch is holding out a helping hand to the men who have fallen while fighting, and are now in no condition to care for themselves. Although the government provides shelter for the wounded, comforts that mean so much to the men have largely come through private sources, and from organizations such as the one mentioned. As it does not seem to be generally understood how and why there is a Prince of Wales Relief and Hospital Committee of the same organization, Mrs.

HAMILTON WINS OUT FOR TAX COLLECTOR

Defeats William B. LaRue for G. O. P. Nomination in Piscataway.

In a heated primary contest William Hamilton, of South Plainfield, defeated William B. La Rue, of New Market, for the Republican nomination of tax collector of Piscataway township by three votes. It is said that there will be no contest as it is believed the rejected votes, if accepted, would increase Mr. Hamilton's majority to ten.

In the Democratic ranks, W. H. Thornton, of South Plainfield, decisively defeated John M. Evans, of New Market, for the nomination of collector, pulling 72 votes against Mr. Evans' 46.

Clarence M. Haight, of New Market, who sought the Republican nomination for freeholder, made a good run in South Plainfield and New Market, which gave him 75 votes in each place. East Bound Brook, however, only gave him 15.

BELLIS STIRRED BY SOMERVILLE VOTE

Defeated Candidate for Council May Run on Another Ticket at Election.

Stirred up to a high pitch of excitement, Lewis A. Bellis, the defeated candidate on the Democratic ticket for the office of councilman in the borough of Somerville, called at the office of the Somerset county clerk this morning and demanded to know whether or not he had a legal right to run independently or on the Progressive ticket for the same office at the General Election. Mr. Bellis appeared to be very much perturbed by his defeat and friends sought in vain to quiet him. Despite his announcement this morning that he would seek election on another ticket his friends say that he will abide by the primaries after giving the matter a second thought.

The following returns were received from Somerville: Assembly, Swackhamer, Democrat, 257; Anderson, Republican, 113, and Hammond, Republican, 241; councilman, Hardgraves, 510; Wright, 508, and Bellis, 169; freeholders, Brown, Republican, 220; Bolton, Republican, 164; Shaw, Democrat, 136; mayor, Steele (unopposed); assessor, Republican, Conklin, 482; collector, Brokaw, Republican, 245; Vosseller, Democrat, 212; constable, George Totten, Democrat, 490.

EMBLEM CONTEST WON BY WM. N. RUNYON

Assemblyman's Sketch Selected as Best by Business Men's Association.

Assemblyman William N. Runyon is the winner of the five-dollar prize offered by the Business Men's Association, of Plainfield, for the best design to be used as an emblem by the organization. The prize was offered for the best suggestion for a design, submitted in response to an advertisement inserted by the association in the local papers, and Mr. Runyon's work was the unanimous choice of the committee appointed to take charge of the contest, and this was later unanimously approved by the executive committee. With one exception, no one on either committee knew the names of any of the contestants.

In all about thirty sketches were submitted, and the excellence of many of the designs caused considerable trouble for the committee, consisting of Samuel Rothberg, Dan Hulick and Leslie R. Fort, to make a selection. Mr. Rynyon's design was finally selected, and it was decided to give honorable mention to Miss Marie Peterson, of Fanwood, and J. Gerald Varley, of this cvity.

Mr. Runyon's design, which is reproduced herewith, is in the form of a circle, and in the centre of that are four panels and a small circle. In the latter is traced a copy of the city seal. The emblem will be colored in gold, blue and yellow, and furnished to members of the organization to place on their windows and to use in their advertisements. At the same time a determined campaign will be started to urge upon the Plainfield shopping public the necessity of patronizing such stores as display this emblem, if they want to be sure of dependable merchandise.

A determined campaign to get every leading merchant in the city into the Business Men's Association has been started, under the direction of Harry B. Salter, secretary of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce, who has done remarkable work in building up a strong merchants' organization in that city.

HIGH LOCAL VOTE GOES TO RUNYON

Leads All Other Candidates in Total With Townsend a Close Second.

INTEREST IS LACKING

Newcorn Defeated Morrison for City and County Committee Nominations—Complete List of Committeemen and Vote Polled.

Light balloting in the eighteen local districts featured yesterday's primaries, there being practically no competition between candidates for the various offices. William N. Runyon, Republican candidate for reelection to the Assembly, had the distinction of polling the highest local vote, which totaled 867, and William R. Townsend, to succeed himself as tax collector, finished second with a grand total for the four wards of 853.

What competition that presented itself yesterday centered around the activity of William N. Newcorn and James M. Morrison for nomination on the Republican ticket to the city and county committees, Newcorn winning the county ballot by a margin of 42 to 19, and the city fight by 38 to 21. John H. Cose, with a total of 18 votes, was nominated by the Demo-

WANT THE EXECUTORS TO FILE ACCOUNTING

Court Issues Second Order in Will Case of Thomas Heman Clark.

Brooklyn, Sept. 29.—In an effort to force the executors of the estate left by Heman Thomas Clark, brother of Walter and Charles Clark, of Plainfield, to file an accounting of their trust with the surrogate's court, Rose Noethiger, who was left $43,544.25 under the will and which she alleges is being wrongfully withheld from her, today through her attorney secured a second citation from the surrogate commanding the executors, Nettie A. Kert and Margaret C. Lavin, of Portchester, N. Y., and Walter Clark, to appear October 14 to show cause why they should not file an accounting.

The first citation issued by the surrogate was made returnable September 21. On that date the petitioner's attorney informed the court that he had been unable to serve the three executors with the court's order and asked for another citation.

AUTO STRUCK STAGE; CHILDREN ARE HURT

Two Little Ones Removed to Muhlenberg Hospital Following Accident.

An accident, in which two childhen and one man were injured and the lives of thirty other persons endangered, happened near South Plainfield this morning, when an automobile being towed by Nicholas Thul, of 42 Howard street, North Plainfield, and steered by Constable Mike Service, of South Plainfield, ran headlong into a stage load of school children driven by William Hamilton, of New Durham. Thul had purchased the car from Justice of the Peace Patrick Kaine, of South Plainfield, and was proceeding on his way back to a garage in New Brunswick, pulling the machine he had purchased behind his own.

Thul saw the stage coming down the road and successfully piloted the car in which he was riding past it, but Service became confused and steeered the second machine to the left side of the thoroughfare and directly in the path of the horse-drawn vehicle. The horses were struck head-on by the big automobile and knocked to the road, Hamilton and thirty-five children in the stage toppling out on top of them. Charles Carrino, ten years old, and Josephine Burtino, aged 6, were the most seriously inured, and were removed to Muhlenberg Hospital. The boy has only slight contusions about the ankle, while the girl is suffering from an injury to her back, and will be kept under observation at the hospital for several days.

Hamilton had been accustomed to taking the children from Piscataway township to South Plainfield schools every morning, and it was while on his way to that place this morning that the accident happened.

SQUARE DEAL FOR WOMEN IS URGED

Mrs. E. F. Feickert Takes Exceptions to Statements by Charles A. Reed.

Says That All the Prominent Lawyers and Jurists do Not Agree With Corporation Counsel—Questions His Qualifications as Expert.

Commenting upon the letter of Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed, in which he states his reasons for not approving of votes for women, Mrs. E. F. Feickert, president of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association, says:

"My female intellect may be too dense to grasp the connection, but really I cannot see how Mr. Reed's 'forty years as a practicing lawyer' and 'many years of active political work' especially qualify him as an expert on woman suffrage. His law practice has been in New Jersey, where women do not vote, and the women of this State have surely never had any connection with his political activities.

FIRST ACCOUNTING OF EVANS' ESTATE

Anna Howard Tyler and Caroline Tyler Lincoln, of This City, Among Beneficiaries.

New York, Sept. 29.—The first accounting of the estate left in this country by Ellen Frances Evans, cousin of Anna Howard Tyler and Caroline Tyler Lincoln, of West Eighth street, Plainfield, made by the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, as executors, was filed today. The deceased was a resident of Neuilly France, where she died March 17, 1914, leaving $50,000 in cash and one-third of the residue to Miss Tyler; $5,000 in cash and one-third of the residue to Mrs. Lincoln, and the balance to relatives, friends and charitable institutions.

The accounting shows that $517,073.78 has come into the hands of the executors; $300,000 has been paid out to beneficiaries under the will; $22,592.56 has been paid for funeral, administration, etc., and that they now have on hand $194,481.22 for distribution, subject to deductions of commissions, etc.

According to the accounting Miss Tyler has received on account $46,070 in securities on her $50,000 cash bequest, and $12,540 in cash and securities, part of her share of the residuary estate. Mrs. Lincoln has received $5,010 securities for her $5,000 cash bequest, and $12,540 in cash and in securities as part of her share of the residuary estate. These securities comprise chiefly railroad, steel and gas company stock. Just how much more is due the Plainfield beneficiaries will not be known until the decree is signed by the surrogate. This will be done after all the beneficiaries are cited.

40,000 GERMANS DROWN IN MARSH

Russians Trap 41st Army Corps, Says Official Petrograd Report.

ALLIES PROGRESSING

Fiercest Fighting of War Being Waged in France and Belgium—Kaiser in Command of Armies—Germans Fall Back.

London, Sept. 29.—More than 40,000 German soldiers have been drowned like rats, according to an official report from Russian army headquarters at Petrograd. The report tells of strategy employed by the Russians in decoying the Forty-first corps of the German army into low ground where waters of the Pinsk Marshes were loosed upon them. They were unable to escape and nearly the whole of the corps perished. The fiercest fighting of the war is now in progress in the region of Loos and in the Champagne district. The English claim to have captured the German second line of trenches near Loos, and to have made progress in their smashing drive on the third line.

French attacks in Champagne have also met with success, according to reports from Paris, and the Germans admit that they have fallen back to prevent large loss of life.

The Kaiser is in personal command on the western front, where his armies are centering their strength in Argonne engagements.

Germans Fall Back.

Berlin, Sept. 29.—It was officially announced today that the Germans had captured 103 British officers and 3,858 men in the fighting in France and West Flanders. In spite of the tremendous efforts of the Allies to pierce the German line, the Teutonic troops are still standing like a stone wall, although it is admitted that there have been retirements at some points on the line in order to avoid unnecessary loss of life from the British and French artillery. Violent fighting is still in progress with the Germans counter attacking wherever the Allies have resumed the offensive. German artillery is replying to the bombardment of the German trenches and a fierce big gun duel is raging.

Fierce Cannonade In France.

Paris, Sept. 29.—French war statement:

"In Champagne the conflict continues without cessation on all the front. In the region to north of Massiges some new German groups surrender. The total has reached 1,000 in that sector alone. In the course of the night there was no important action. On the rest of the front the enemy violently cannonaded our trenches to north and south of the Aisne. In the region of the St. Ward forest of Troyon and of Vailly we replied energetically."

Padgett Wants Warships.

Washington, Sept. 29.—Representative Padgett, of Tennessee, chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, called at the White House today to arrange for a conference with President Wilson. He will also see Secretary of the Navy Daniels with reference to the administration's program on the naval appropriation bill in the coming Congress. Chairman Padgett probably also will take up the question of the proposed reforms to be introduced in the Naval Academy at Annapolis. The battleship still remains the backbone of any navy, in Mr. Padgett's opinion, and he will urge the building of these vessels.

$500,000,000 Loan Arranged.

New York, Sept. 29.—Official announcement was made simultaneously in New York and Chicago last evening of the terms on which the $500,000,000 five-year Anglo-French "first mortgage" loan will be issued, namely:

A nation-wide syndicate now being formed by J. P. Morgan & Co. and other bankers and banks will buy the whole $500,000,000 bearing 5 per cent. interest at 96, the cost to the borrowers being over 5½ per cent.

This syndicate will offer the bonds to the public at 98, the yield being 5 2-5—almost 5½—per cent.

Cash can be obtained, at par (199), at the end of five years, or holders can then exchange the bonds for a 4½ per cent. Anglo-French issue repayable in not less than fifteen and not more than twenty-five years thereafter.

AFGAR CONTROLS DUNELLEN VOTING

Primary Shows His Popularity Over Wilson—Heavy Vote.

In the largest primary vote ever cast in the borough, Willard N. Apgar secured what virtually amounts to the Democratic leadership of the borough over J. Y. Wilson when he defeated former Mayor William Wyckoff, who had Mr. Wilson's backing for the nomination of member of the Democratic county committee from the borough's first voting district by the overwhelming vote of 124 to 43. Recorder Campbell, another J. Y. Wilson man, was defeated by J. H. L. Peters, who had Mr. Apgar's backing for the Democratic assessorship nomination by a vote of 129 to 91. In the first voting district Mr. Peters received 93 votes and Mr. Campbell 68, while in the Second district Mr. Peters received 36 votes against Mr. Campbell's 23.

Willard N. Apgar and William Wyckoff are both candidates for the postmastership which is to be appointed at the end of the year. A result of yesterday's primary is the general view that Mr. Apgar looms way above Mr. Wyckoff as a postmastership possibility.

Ernest B. Latham, Republican, a candidate for renomination as mayor and Richard M. Ryan and William A. Cartner, Democratic candidates for renomination as members of the Borough Council, were endorsed by both parties. Mr. Latham received a total of 90 votes and Messrs. The person who seems to want to see John McMahon made mayor cast his usual nomination ballot.

The Democrats of the borough gave William E. Florance, the candidate for State Senator, 90 votes, and Arthur A. Quinn, his opponent, 84. All of the present members of the Board of Freeholders were given a comfortable majority by the Democrats.

Mrs. Bertha Jennings will preside. Questions bearing on woman suffrage will be freely answered at the meeting.

WOMEN WANT SQUARE DEAL

more or less prominent in different walks of life, and without investigating their position on the suffrage question. This undoubtedly showed a too great confidingness in the chivalry of the men circularized; but otherwise the method does not seem open to criticism.

"Mr. Reed says that because he spent several days in Wyoming, where women have voted for a number of years, and found saloons and disorderly houses in operation, woman suffrage is quite evidently a failure. Will he admit that because in Paterson, for instance, there are five hundred saloons to a population of 100,000, and because New Jersey is known as the fourth 'wettest' State in the country, that male suffrage is a failure in New Jersey, and does he think the present voters should be disfranchised? He neglects to state by the way, that less than one-third of the voters of Wyoming are women; but he can take comfort in the thought that even if New Jersey women get the vote next month, they will be outnumbere by the male voters of the State by at least 40,000. Perhaps he does not know that the only States having an eight-hour law for working women are four equal suffrage States, California, Washington, Colorado and Arizona, and Idaho has a nine-hour law; nor that of the seventeen States which consider mothers and fathers as equal guardians of their children, more than half are woman suffrage States; nor that the age of consent for girls has been raised in all the suffrage States and is eighteen and twenty-one years in several of them. New Jersey defeated a bill to raise the age of consent to eighteen years only two years ago. A few weeks ago the Governors of nine equal suffrage States spoke at a great meeting in Faneuil Hall, Boston, on the working of equal suffrage in their States, and they one and all agreed that it had been an unqualified success.

"Now as to the majority of the women of New Jersey not wanting the vote, and Mr. Reed's hope that the vote will not be forced upon the women opposed, Mrs. Goodwin, speaking in Dunellen on September 20 said: The Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage has sixteen thousand members. The suffrage organizations of New Jersey have an enrollment of almost one hundred thousand women, all over twenty-one years of age. These figures speak for themselves. In most elections one-third of the qualified male voters of New Jersey do not bother to exercise their right, but no serious punishment has ever been inflicted upon them.

"We are glad that all the prominent lawyers and jurists of New Jersey do not agree with Mr. Reed. Among those on our side are Richard V. Lindabury, Attorney-General John W. Wescott, City Counsel E. G. C. Bleakley, of Camden; Leighton Calkins, Mayor of Plainfield; Judges Frederick Adams and Thomas A. Davis, of Orange; Robert Carey, Charles I. Carrick and Thomas G. Haight, of Jersey City; James C. Connolly and Abe J. David, of Elizabeth; Walter C. Cabell and Thomas P. Costello, of Passaic; Clarence Cole and John J. White, of Atlantic City; John Franklin Fort, ex-Governor of the State; Everett Colby, Borden Whiting, Vice-Chancellor Vivian M. Lewis, United States District Attorney J. Warren Davis, City Solicitor Theodore Schimpf, of Atlantic City; Prosecutor of the Pleas Charles S. Moore, of Atlantic City. Many of these men do not agree with Mr. Reed in thinking that women are better protected without the ballot than they would be with it, and have said that their reasons for being such strong advocates of woman suffrage is that women are not getting a square deal in New Jersey."

NO TEA-SIPPING

to a Press reporter, who was assigned to secure a report of the meeting. He learned that instead of sitting around sipping tea while one of their number read a paper on the life of a pioneer suffragist, they went over their card index of voters carefully to see who was registered and who was not, and laid plans to win over voters who were known to be against them. Schools for watchers and workers are to be started at headquarters, October 1, and instructors for these outlined the course of study. And when the reporter sought to get details of their plans for campaigning they told him, "Nothing for publication." Just like Secretary Tumulty or Sheriff Kinead, or any other politician.

"The anti's might beat us to it, if they knew our plans," they explained sweetly, but firmly.

In addition to noonday meetings at factories in Plainfield, and the regular Saturday evening street meeting plans for this week include the whirlwind tour of Somerset county next Saturday. It is promised that a long procession of automobiles will follow the speakers on this trip, and the procession will be an imposing one. The flying squadron will start from the Farmer's garage at the end of Somerset trolley line at 8:30 a. m. A stop for lunch will be made at Somerville. All Plainfield suffragists are asked to join in the procession. Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Riley, Mrs. Cowperthwait, Mrs Wheeler and others will take part.

Ex-Mayor Furber, of Rahway, will be the speaker for the Saturday night street meeting this week. Miss Lou Rogers, the cartoonist, will probably be secured for the following week.

'Plains & Fanwood.

An eleventh hour postponement of the meeting of the Fanwood Rifle club, called for last night, was made by Bradley Barrett, president of the club, and it will be held in the Episcopal church tonight.

Marshal Logan has had considerable trouble in the borough of late with dump carters who have dumped rubbish at the borough dump, on North avenue, near the Westfield line. In many cases they are not careful and dump the refuse in the gutter of road, and it is said that outsiders often use it for a dumping ground. The Council is anxious to keep the place as clean as possible, and Logan is on the watchout for offenders of the ordinance governing the usage of the place.

A regular meeting of the Sunshine Weavers will be held tomorrow night at the home of Mrs. John Z. Hatfield of Stout avenue. Included in the evening's program is the initiation of several candidates as new members.

Benamin Elliot, of Park avenue has a number of his prize fowl entered in competition at the Trenton State Fair. The same ones took prizes at the recent Far Hills Fair and he expects to repeat this time.

John P. Lange, who recently purchased the Stanley farm, on Terrill road, is beginning preparations for a large chicken farm, with all of the latest innovations known to the business, including sanitary coops.

The Sporns will meet tomorrow night at the home of the Misses Herbst, of Terrill road. Several new members have been added recently.

At a meeting of the Scotch Plains Boy Scouts last night arrangements were completed for the holding of corn and marshmallow roast in the field opposite School No. 1 next Tuesday night. The colored Boy Scouts from Plainfield have been invited to be present as guests of the local troop. The Scout Council, formed last winter of local men, are to resume activities in an effort to help the boys.

Mrs. John Hayes, who died at her home in Morristown Sunday, was buried from this place today. Mrs. Hayes and her husband spent the greater portion of the summer with Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Hand, of Park avenue, and returned home but a short time ago. She was advanced in age, and her death was partly due to infirmities. Mr. Hayes is a veteran of the Civil War.

"LADIES' NIGHT" AFFAIR.

"Ladies' Night" proved an enjoyable feature at the meeting of Greenbrook Council, Royal Arcanum, held in the hall last night. Addresses on the work of the order were made by John Beach and William Ward. Twelve tables were set for cards and everybody had a good time. Refreshments were served at a late hour.

Gospel services will be held at the Christian and Missionary Alliance held in the German Reformed church, Duer street and Craig place, Friday afternoon at 3:30 and Friday night at 7:30. Bible class will meet Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

John F. Martin, of Elizabeth, has been appointed grand marshal of the Holy Name parade, which is to take place in that city on Tuesday, October 10, as an added feature of the Dean O'Neil jubilee week. Between 4,000 and 5,000 men are expected in the line of march which will start at Jackson Park at 2 o'clock. The route will take the marchers up Court street to Third street, to First avenue, to Union Square, to Elizabeth avenue, to South Broad street, to Washington avenue, to South street, to South Broad and South streets, where the services and speechmaking will be held on the lawn adjoining the convent of St. Mary's church.

The societies to parade and the order in which they will march is as follows: Holy Trinity, Westfield; Assumption, Roselle; St. Anthony's, Holy Rosary, Sacred Heart and Immaculate Conception, Elizabeth; St Joseph's, Roselle; St. Mary's, Rahway; St. Elizabeth's, Linden; St. Michael's, Cranford; Sts. Peter and Paul and St. Michael's, Elizabeth; St. Mary's, Plainfield; St. Joseph's, North Plainfield; St. Adelbert's, St Patrick's and St. Mary's, Elizabeth.

POLITICAL NOTES.

October 2—County committees meet for reorganization.

October 4—City committees meet for reorganization.

October 5—Republican and Democratic State conventions held in Trenton.

October 19—State referendum election, and third registration day in municipalities of more than 5,000 people.

October 26—Third and final registration day in municipalities of less than 5,000 inhabitants.

November 2—General Election Day.

Former Governor Stokes, at a meeting in Atlantic City, hailed State Senator Walter E. Edge as the next Governor, when he said: "Atlantic county has within its grasp at the present time the opportunity of selecting the next Governor of New Jersey."

The anti-Dal candidates in Newark, in answer to a question put to them by the Men's Religious Federation of the Oranges, have sidetracked the question of local option. The issue of the campaign, they declare, is boss rule, and it is not fair to inject local option into the campaign at this time.

An extraordinary situation exists in Spring Lake this year. Although the town is an exclusive summer resort with a fine system of roads and parkways, good sewers and an excellent ocean front, no one wants to be given the responsibility of running the town's business and although there are to be two vacancies in the Council, no one has bothered to file petitions for election to that body. The only candidate for Mayor is Oliver H. Brown, the present incumbent, who is the only Mayor the town has ever had. He is running because his friends want him to, not because he likes the office. The whole situation is enough to cause the death of a Hudson county politician.

Senator James E. Martine was given a dinner in Boonton on Saturday by the Democratic committees of that place. He was also baited by the woman suffragists. He was approached by Miss Esther DeCamp and another representative of the Boonton Woman Suffrage League and asked to give his reasons for being opposed to suffrage. He replied that he considered it bad for the country as well as for women. Regarding the "franking" of anti-suffrage literature, which he was requested to explain, Senator Martine said that he also sent Anti-Saloon League literature under a "frank."

Thirty thousand sample ballots for the special election on October 19, when the woman suffrage and two other amendments to the constitution will be voted upon, have been received at the office of County Clerk Calvert from Secretary of State Martin. Instead of being packed in packages containing a certain number, as is done customarily in such cases, the samples were sent loose. This imposes the task of counting them upon the clerical force of the county clerk's office before they are distributed in the various election districts, which the law requires to be done ten days prior to the election.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD RETURNS.

The following nominations were made at the primaries in South Plainfield: State Senator, Spencer, Republican, 75; Florance, Democrat, 66; Assembly, Republicans, Applegate 71, Goldberg 68 and Snyder 68; Democrats, Anderson 77, Galon 83 and Lablin 83; freeholders, Leonard 56, Dey 55, Eden 55, Republicans; Casey 96, Cullen 83, Ellge 81, Gebhardt 74, Democrats; coroner, McGee, Democrat 36, Hubard, Republican 24; collector, Hamilton, Republican, 87; Corbin, Democrat, 72.

DIALOGUE DEBATE ON LIQUOR QUESTION

Anti-Saloon League Representatives Present Arguments at First Baptist Church.

An entertainment in the form of a dialogue debate on the liquor question, in which the parts were taken by two members of the Anti-Saloon League, of New Jersey, was given last night in the lecture room of the First Baptist church. The affair was given under the auspices of the Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union and the Federation of Men's Bible Classes, and proved a unique way of presenting present-day liquor arguments to the public.

Supporters of the Anti-Saloon League declare that they have always been ready to meet their foes, the liquor interests, in open debate, but that the liquor people have never accepted their challenge, so the Rev. O. Bell Close and Marna Poulson, of the New Jersey branch of the league, have arranged two dialogue debates covering the points on the question, and present these debates as an entertainment feature upon request.

In the presentation of the wet and dry arguments, Mr. Poulson takes the part of Alexander Pierpont, an indifferent man of means, who has been flooded with wet literature, while the Rev. Mr. Close impersonates John Carlysle, an attorney, who has recently become deeply interested and profoundly convicted of a duty to battle against the influence of liquor in politics, and, having entered the race for State Senator, calls upon his old friend Pierpont in his office to enlist his interest in and support of his candidacy.

In the course of this interview Mr. Poulson assumes the attitude of the wet advocate and presents the main arguments that are presented day after day in the press and in the literture of the liquor men, while his opponent presents the answers of the Anti-Saloon League to these arguments.

The debate is enlivened with wit and humor, together with touches of sentiment, and holds the attention of the audience from beginning to end. The program last night was opened by the singing of "America" and prayer. The pastor of the church, the Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, introduced the speakers.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

An anonymous person, who wishes to be known as a "Friend of the Oracle" has given two prizes of money to the Oracle board to be contested for by the student body, members of the board being ineligible. The contest is in the form of a subscription competition in which the person who secures the largest number of paid Oracle subscriptions will get the prize. The runner-up will also be rewarded.

The election of a school cheer leader will probably take place tomorrow morning in order that the boy chosen may assume his duties Saturday. Both "Herb" Peacock and Carlton Dunham are mentioned as probable winners of the honor.

The senior class emblem committee will be appointed in a few days. The purpose of this is to get together a capable band of seniors which can confer with pupils and salesmen relative to purchasing class pins.

A G. A. A. meeting will most likely be called for Friday morning, when nominations for board members will be considered.

Dr. A. F. Van Horn is examining those girls who intend to either enter athletics or take up swimming.

Gerald Linke, who is business manager of the Oracle, is also business manager of the minstrel show, but has not as yet issued a call for rehearsals. Of the endmen, who made last year's show such a success, two most prominent ones, Linke and Hyland, are still in school.

Holmes Clawson, manager of the 1916 baseball team, is already arranging his schedule, and "Box" Apgar, the captain, is said to be counting his "charges" in an effort to look well into the future.

A glance at the football roster shows the following: Dick Pennock, Herb Peacock, Joe Mutnick, Bernard Miller, Bill Daniels, Morris Kline, Ches Alpaugh, Warren Mumford, Jim Noonan, Roy Apgar, Sid Butler, Sam Davidson, Walter Van Hoesen, David Fitch, Alan Stevenson, George Smith, Swackhamer and Bill Wheelan. Who will play in the first encounter has not been definitely settled.

Miss Clara Barton Smith, of Grandview avenue, the borough, is registered at the Raleigh, Washington. She will return home the latter part of the week.

CENSUS BUREAU'S EXHIBIT AT FAIR

Automatic Tabulating Machinery Prominent Feature of Display.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 29.—One of the interesting exhibits at the Panama-Pacific Exhibition is that of the Federal Census Bureau. Its most prominent feature is the display of automatic tabulating machinery, but statistical publications, some of which are of great historical value, together with maps, charts, diagrams, etc., are also attracting much attention. Commenting on this exhibit, the San Francisco Daily Journal of Commerce, says, in a recent issue:

"Aside from, the general interest which the exhibit of the United States Census Bureau, in the Palace of Liberal Arts, is arousing, is the particular interest it has for business men and manufacturers. Complete statistics on population, agriculture, manufactures, forests, mines and quarries, mortality, and finance are shown in the various publications of the bureau, together with reports by States and counties and an analysis of the figures secured. One feature of the exhibit is attracting the attention of foreign governments. This is the automatic tabulating machine (of which there are three on exhibition) used in the compiling of vital statistics. These machines tabulate and print results at the rate of 150,000 cards per day. They are owned and manufactured by the government. Maps and charts showing the census figures for California are displayed, and also a series of charts illustrating the registration areas for death throughout the country. To become a registration area a State must prove that it reports at least ninety per cent. of its deaths. The present registration area comprises about seventy per cent. of the United States.

"The genealogical value of the census records is not generally appreciated. They contain a return of the whole number of persons within the several districts of the United States in 1790, and the first census, taken in the same year, contains the heads of families of twelve of the eastern and southern States, together with the members of the families, free or slave. Some of these original records for that period are shown in cases. William Lane Austin, of the Washington office, is in charge of the exhibit."

NOVEL EDUCATIONAL METHODS ADOPTED

U. S. Public Health Service Establishes Stereopticon Loan Library.

The United States Public Health Service believes that "Education is the road to sanitary progress." To this end it has established a stereopticon loan library, probably the first of its kind, which is daily sending out slides upon the request of sanitarians, educators and other persons interested in the promulgation of the doctrine of personal hygiene and public sanitation.

The officials of the Nebraska State Fair desired to stage a series of popular lectures on hygiene and sanitation. They applied to the Surgeon-General of the United States Public Health Service for slides. Catalogs containing photographs of the slides, and descriptive matter thereon, were immediately forwarded to the officials of the fair, together with a blank on which to make request for various slides. The fair officials filled out the requisition and returned the catalogs to the Surgeon-General. The slides were packed and shipped, and when the lectures shall have been given they will be repacked and returned to the Surgeon-General. In this way a large number of people will have received this important information in a pleasing manner.

The stereopticon loan library covers a wide range of subjects, from sanitary conditions in Alaska to yellow fever. There are special collections on the diseases of children, bookworm, leprosy, malaria, milk production, mouth hygiene, pellagra plague, rural schools, smallpox, tropical diseases tuberculosis and typhoid fever. Each of the sets is in duplicate, and in the case of the more frequently used slides, there are several sets, so that the applicant will not be disappointed in his selections. Not only are the services of the stereopticon loan library utilized by many private individuals, but the officers of the Public Health Service and State and local health officials throughout the country are making use of this logical system of public health education.

THIRTIETH ANNIVERSARY.

The Trinity Reformed Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor will celebrate their 30th anniversary Tuesday night, October 5. The social committee of the society is in charge of the arrangements. All the local Christian Endeavor societies are invited to attend the anniversary.

"Stirring news" today—war news, local news, store-news.

Which of the stores can serve you most usefully today—that is one thing you may learn from reading today's advertisements.

The spot-light of full publicity, turned on a store, reveals and places in that full light a store's defects—if it have defects. For example: If high-prices prevail, or lines of goods are not kept up to date, the reader of the store advertisements knows it. It follows that advertising "pays" the store that renders real service—and would not pay the other kind of a store.

WORK OF LOCAL BRANCH

N. Pendleton Rogers, chairman of the last named committee, in her annual report, submits a few explanations:

"On March 19, 1915, at the regular semi-monthly meeting of the Prince of Wales Relief, it was suggested that the members meet each Friday for organized hospital work, the completed work to be sent to the Ladies' Committee of the St. George Society. The chairman at that time wished a committee appointed to take charge of this work, and immediately appointed a chairman and asked for nominations for the members of the committee. These nominations were made and the following elected: Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers, chairman; Mrs. John Jewett, Miss Mary Campbell, Mrs. Antoinette Barclay, Mrs. Rufus Delafield, Mrs. Harry Van de Linde and Mrs. William Griscom. Although they had no funds to carry on the work, $25 was voted at once to the chairman, and at a later meeting $10.87, a balance on hand from the Free Wool Fund, was also voted to her, and she was empowered to draw upon the treasurer of the Prince of Wales Relief at any time to the extent of the balance there was in the treasury. This, however, has not been necessary, as she has always had sufficient funds in hand to carry on the work."

The hospital committee held its first meeting on March 26, 1915, in the guild rooms of the Grace church parish house, which they were given the privilege of using through the kindness and interest of the rector, Rev. E. V. Stevenson. Since that time the committee has met regularly every Friday morning, from 10 to 12 o'clock, and have sent the following articles to the ladies' committee of St. George's Society: Slings, 136; slippers, 64; knit articles, 89; nightgales, 72; muslin bandages, 3,725; first aid bandages, 3,142; old linen bandages, 46; triangular bandages, 433; four-tail bandages, 35; kit bags, 95; sewing bags, 3; surgical dressings, 9,297; surgical sponges, 57,555; pillows, 32; glass covers, 16; old linen, 1 package; soldiers' manuals, 2 packages, making a grand total of 74,743. Innumerable books, papers and magazines were also sent.

The ladies' committee of St. George's Society, in turn, have sent the consignments to the various hospitals and clearing houses throughout the stricken countries, and proof of the gratefulness with which the cases have been received can be shown from several excerpts of the letters received by the local branches:

"There was joy in the hospital over those comfort bags—the men were in raptures over them. Men and hospital staff send their warmest thanks to all who helped send the things." The above was received from Mrs. Hayward Rose, who is in charge of a small hospital at Dax, near Bordeaux. Her station was short of everything when the cases arrived.

A communication from Mrs. C. B. Bowring, of the St. George Guild, encloses a letter from Queen Mary's secretary, Lady Lawley, who tells of the safe arrival of the cases and the gratefulness of her Majesty the Queen. The gifts were shipped to the Dardanelles and to the clearing hospitals at the front, where the extreme need was felt in every hospital.

In doing the work the committee has appropriated 2,200 yards of muslin, 10,500 yards of gauze and 55 pounds of cotton. When they started the work the following most generously came to their assistance with the following donations: P. B. Hodge, 10 pounds cotton; Tepper Brothers, gauze; M. Van Arsdale, one dozen slipper soles; H. Gayle, basket; A. M. Griffen, baskets; Shirley & Johnson, tables; Kresge and Woolworth stores, notions; Stanley, flowers; E. Laing, rubber stamps; W. F. Williams, paper, scissors, boxes; Stern Bros., flannel; Mrs. Maurer, gauze; Mrs. Bomann, slipper tops and soles, tape, flannel and thimbles; Mrs. Parker, muslin and tape; Mrs. Fawcett, muslin and tape; Mrs. Percy Stewart, comfort bags; Mr. Hunts, cigarettes; C. H. Frost, muslin.

The work has been conducted and supported entirely by solicitation of contributions, which were unusually generous. The total receipts, including the $25 voted the committee from the treasury of the Prince of Wales Relief and the $10.67 from the Free Wool Fund, amounted to $502.82. The expenses were $418.25, and the total left in the treasury on September 22 was $84.57, since which date $10 has been received for the work. The committee also now has on hand materials for the continuance of their work to the value of $60.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The Kinkaid Kilties from the Highlands of Scotland, with Miss Rose Mauser (six feet of personality) in a Scotch review, will make their first appearance at Proctor's Theatre tomorrow afternoon and evening. Folklore dances and songs brought from the lake country will be featured by this company of eight people. Bertie Ford, in a novelty wire act, and a comedy sketch entitled "Rained In," with LeRoy and Harvey, are also booked for the last half of the present week, and a few laughs are to be expected from these quarters.

"The Girl and the Bank," otherwise known as Harry and Augusta Turpin, are among the numbers, as is the novelty sister feature with Rooney and Bowman. Madie DeLong, the well known "baseball bug," is to be here for a few days, and all cases of the blues should be taken to Proctor's sometime Thursday, Friday or Saturday.

The feature photo-play schedule for the remainder of the week is as follows: Today, "The Offending Kiss;" tomorrow, "My Last One," with Dorothy Kelly and Will Munn; Friday, "'Neath Calvary's Shadows," with Fritzie Brunette and Wheeler Oakman, as well as the second episode of the new serial photo-play, "Neal of the Navy;" Saturday, "Shadows of the Past," featuring Marc McDermott and Mabel Trunelle.

SOCIAL MEETINGS WITH REFRESHMENTS

First Presbyterian Church to Also Provide Parking Privileges for Autos.

Social prayer meetings with refreshments and free parking privileges for automobiles will feature the winter activities of the First Presbyterian church. The Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring will introduce the new form of prayer meeting a week from tonight.

The First Presbyterian church is located on East Front street, the main highway for automobilists passing through the city. In the rear of the church are covered stalls for automobiles to protect them against a sudden shower and there is a large grass and gravel area behind that with a level driveway leading directly from the street. Those having children in the machines will find that they will be taken care of by a committee of young married women consisting of Mrs. Charles E. Herring, wife of the pastor, Mrs. Howard W. Satterfield, Mrs. C. Leslie Bond and Mrs. Allen E. Beals. For those parents who wish to have their children sit with them in church toys will be provided to amuse them during the brief services. The music prepared especially to make these short services attractive and rendered by a choir under the leadership of H. J. Harold, the organist, will continue to form a fifteen minute prelude to the regular service at 4 o'clock every Sunday afternoon.

The refreshment prayer meeting will be tried on the first Wednesday nights of each month for the present. "The idea is not to increase the membership and interest in church life by mere volume," according to a member of the church, "but to give to new comers a feeling that they are mighty welcome, that their fellowship and co-operation is what is most desired."

CAUFIELD HEARING POSTPONED.

The hearing of the charges which were preferred against Acting Chief Martin Caufield at the last meeting of the Town Council by the police committee, which was to have taken place Monday night in the Town Hall, before the Council, was postponed until next Tuesday night. Samuel Schleimer, retained by the acting chief, asked that the hearing be postponed on account of the fact that he had been unable to get his side of the case in shape. The hall was filled to its capacity.

A Thirsty Argument For ROTHBERG'S

Style at Rothberg's is a rule to which there are no exceptions, whether you pay $15.00 for a Rothberg garment or twice that figure.

The difference between a Rothberg garment at $15 and one at $30 is the difference between a glass of Pilsener and a seidel—the QUANTITY changes—the QUALITY remains the same.

And the only fault with that figure is, that BEER is a rather inappropriate beverage to associate with clothes that possess the snap and sparkle of CHAMPAGNE.

MONTCLAIR GREETS W. C. T. U. OF STATE

Annual Convention Opened Yesterday Afternoon, With Many Delegates Present.

Coming when the "drys" of the town are agitating for no license, the annual convention of the State Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which opened in Montclair yesterday afternoon, is considered by the leaders of the W. C. T. U. to be timely and there is a feeling of optimism among them that the convention will be a potent factor in creating sentiment against the continued sale of liquor.

The convention will be in session in the First Methodist Episcopal church of Montclair until Friday noon and the opening session convened at 3:30 o'clock yesterday. At this time committees were appointed by the state president, Miss Esther H. Elfreth.

The actual business of the convention began at 7:45 o'clock last night, when welcomes were offered by the representatives of the local W. C. T. U., the churches of Montclair, the Board of Education and the town. Miss Elizabeth H. Goodwin, of Gluocester county, responded for the State body.

Daniel A. Poling, of Boston, president's associate of the United Christian Endeavor Society, was the speaker of the session and his subject was "Mothers of Men."

SOCIALISTS ARREST COUNTY CHAIRMAN

Lucius T. Russell Charged With "Inciting to Murder" and is Out on Bail.

Elizabeth, Sept. 29.—On a charge of "inciting to murder," a warrant was sworn out yesterday for Democratic County Chairman Lucius T. Russell. Gustav Treimer, a Socialist and a justice of the peace, was the complainant. The basis of the complaint was an editorial which appeared in the Elizabeth Evening Times, of which Mr. Russell is the proprietor and editor, on September 20.

News of the issuance of the warrant became noised about Elizabeth during the afternoon and there was much excitement among Democratic voters and workers at the polls. The fact that primary day was picked by the Socialists to take a step that had been talked of by many of them since the editorial appeared was commented upon.

When Mr. Russell was informed that a warrant had been issued for him he went before Police Justice Owen P. Mahon and surrendered himself. Judge Mahon set bail at $500 and that sum was at once furnished by Mr. Russell's friends.

The editorial which gave umbrage to the Socialists was objected to because of its attack on Socialist strike agitators, a part of which is said to have included the following words:

"The time may come, and if it ever does come, this newspaper will be found backing the Singer employes for better wages and shorter hours. But for the present it is our advice to the Singer employes to take every loafing agitator to Staten Island Sound, tie a rock around his neck and throw him off the dock."

It is on the wording of that paragraph that the Socialists base their charge of "inciting to murder." At meetings held since the editorial appeared the Socialists have freely criticised the editorial and Mr. Russell. Some talk of taking legal action over it was heard, but generally disregarded.

The fact that the warrant was obtained and served on primary day is held by some of the friends of Mr. Russell to be due to the fight the Collins faction is making to get control of the county committee. The Democrats of the Russell faction boasted last night that General Dennis F. Collins has been unable to win eight of the 108 county committeemen.

They also asserted that some members of the Collins faction were interested in having the warrant served on Mr. Russell on primary day.

MISS RICHARDS TO GIVE SERIES OF TEN LECTURES

Miss Janet E. Richards, of Washington, announces the fifth season of the series of talks on "The Public Questions of the Day" to be given in the Hartridge auditorium, Thursday afternoons beginning November 4. The complete schedule for the coming winter is as follows: November 4, November 18, December 2, December 16, January 13, January 27, February 10, February 24, March 9 and March 23. Tickets for the entire series may be secured or single admission tickets, from Miss Katherine A. Sargent at 563 West Eighth street. The former are not transferable.

U. S. TO BUILD SUBMARINES.

New York, Sept. 29.—H. S. Miller, president of the Lake Torpedo Boat Co., and F. B. Whitney, chairman of the board, have gone to Washington to be present at the opening of the bids by the Navy Department for six new submarines. The Lake Company expects to get a large number of the orders for these new boats because of the failure in the official tests of the Holland boats, F-1, F-2, F-3 and F-4 and the accident to the F-4 in Honolulu. The success of the German submarines, which are of the Lake type, has demonstrated the superiority of its fighting quality. The G-1 and G-2 are the only boats in the U. S. Navy built by the Lake Company, and they are the only submarines in the navy that were able to remain with the fleet during its entire manoeuvres.

The interment was made in Hillside cemetery.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF CHARLES HURTT HELD

Funeral services over the remains of Charles Hurtt, the life-guard, whose death occurred after a short illness, last Saturday, were held yesterday afternoon from Vincent chapel, the Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson conducting the obsequies. Many handsome floral pieces were sent from relatives and friends of the young man whose untimely death is mourned by a host of acquaintances throughout the State. Six fellow life savers stationed at different sections of the coast bore the body to its final resting place in Hillside cemetery.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

Lenox, Mass.—Sympathy and kindness came from the wealthy summer colony here to Madame Dumba, the talented wife of the Austrian Ambassador, during the final weeks of her stay at the Dumba summer villa. There was a marked change of attitude, for during the summer there was a determined coolness toward the diplomat and his charming wife. Doors that had been thrown wide open to previous diplomats who summered here were closed to the Dumbas this season. The Lenox cottagers have many close connections with France and England. The artists of Lenox have lived and sketched in the Dutch countries and manifested antipathy toward the Teutonic cause. Dr. and Madame Dumba were therefore not received in Lenox society with anything like the warmth and graciousness that have been given to other prominent visitors. However, the troubles which came to the ambassador excited great interest in his wonderful wife, who has graced the diplomatic circle at Washington. Wonderfully beautiful, a talented musician and linguist, with a knowledge of art and artists surpassed by few women of the present day, the lady is fully appreciated here as in Washington. Before her marriage ten years ago to the ambassador she was Baroness Annie von Lieven, daughter of the director of the Imperial Art Gallery, at Petrograd. The war has brought her much unhappiness, as she bravely stood by her husband and Austria.

New York—The vocations pursued by women today will be discussed by fifty prominent women in a series of lectures which began yesterday in the School of Commerce of New York University. Among the speakers will be Miss Lillian Wald, a settlement worker; Mrs. Charles Perkins Gilman, Miss Katharine B. Davis, commissioner of corrections; Dr. S. Josephine Baker, director of child hygiene, Department of Health; Mrs. Lucinda Prince, of Boston; Mrs. Dorothy Dix, Lady Duff Gordon and Marie Little, manager of saleswomen of a large insurance company. Everything from the saleswoman to the stage, from the farm to the professions, will be taken up, in which women are making headway.

Washington—Mrs. Rebecca Lane Prince, president of the National Association of Army Nurses, who arrived here Monday as a guest of honor at the Grand Army encampment, is regarded as one of the most vigorous women of Grand Army circles, and one of the most beloved. Her home is at Lancaster, Pa. She is a member of the famous Pennypacker family, of Pennsylvania, of which 150 members served in the Civil War, three of them being enlisted women nurses. Mrs. Prince's career as a nurse was a notable one, and for her acts of mercy she today receives a pension by special act of Congress.

Bloomington, N. J.—Believing that woman suffrage will sweep the State next month, and that her husband may thus be put out of his job, Mrs. Raymond F. Davis announces herself as the candidate to oppose him for town clerk. She wants to keep the position in the family, and is taking no chances of some other woman entering the field and walking off with "the bacon." Mrs. Davis has been acting town clerk while her husband was ill.

GERMANS TAKE OFFENSIVE.

Berlin (by wireless), Sept. 29.—Furious counter attacks by the Germans against the British forces in the Arras region are proceeding successfully, according to today's report from the General Staff. It states that part of the territory abandoned by the Germans near Loos has been recaptured. The fighting in this district continues, reinforcements having reached the Germans, who had to retire to their second line. The General Staff says that French attacks in Champagne were unsuccessful.

TOOL WORKERS STRIKE.

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 29.—Twenty-five hundred employes of the Pratt and Whitney Manufacturing Company, makers of tools and machinery, walked out on strike today because the firm refused to consider demands for an eight hour day and an increase in wages.

MRS. H. H. GREELEY TO SPEAK.

Miss Helen Hoy Greeley, of New York city, a prominent suffrage campaigner, who has been heard in this city on several former occasions, will address a gathering at the postoffice corner tonight at 8:15, under the auspices of the Plainfield Equal Suffrage League.

FOOTBALL PROSPECTS ARE BRIGHTER THAN USUAL AT YALE

Yale coaches regard the football outlook as the most encouraging which any captain has faced since Yale defeated both Harvard and Princeton. This was in the season of 1909, under Ted Coy. There is remarkable backfield material in the veterans, Captain Aleck Wilson, Harry Le Gore, Otis Guernsey, Mal Scovil, Billy Easton and "Effie" Waite. "Bunny" Burgess, the hockey team captain, who was half back two years ago, and Malcolm, substitute halfback last fall, with "Bev" Thompson, Bingham nad Hutchinson, halfbacks of the freshman eleven last fall, are other candidates.

FIRE PREVENTION.

Saturday, October 9, is to be fire prevention day in the State of New Jersey. On that day the householders and property owners will endeavor to remove all articles not in use that might lead to a serious conflagration or even to a minor blaze. This will include all inflammable or combustible materials that are not safeguarded from fire.

Fire prevention day is not the result of an advertising campaign carried on by insurance companies. Of course they are interested in lessening the fire loss, but the movement was started by public spirited citizens, and the day is set aside by an official proclamation from the hand of Governor Fielder. In addition to removing all rubbish that may start a blaze the day should call for a few minutes study of fire regulations, and methods of preventing fire, and for a general inspection of homes. But it is not necessary to wait until fire prevention day to do this. The sharp, biting winds of early morning will soon cause fires to be lighted in furnaces, stoves and grates in all parts of the city. Before putting your furnace or grate into use again after months of rust, why not inspect it? There may be a defective flue, a broken chimney, a burned firebox or any one of many things that might lead to a serious fire. It will take but a few minutes and may save you thousands of dollars or even the lives of your loved ones. We are sure that Chief Doane of the Plainfield Fire Department, will bear us out in the statement that many of the disastrous fall fires could be prevented by a short inspection of flues and grates before they are put into winter use.

Do this now or fire prevention day may bring nothing but ashes of regret.

WE ALSO.

There will be a pathetic parade today in Washington of the remnant of the Grand Army.

Perhaps it will be the last of the street demonstrations with which the country has been familiar for more than a generation, says the New York World, for the men are old and most of them can march no more, but for many a year to come there will be reunions of these venerable Americans, and, as was the case with the Revolutionary ancestors of some of them, the survivors will be honored to the end.

If as a result of existing complications at home and abroad any of our people are inclined to question the nationality of the United States or to be unduly disturbed by vexatious foreign influences, let them consider what this Grand Army was and what it did.

Made up of soldiers of every race, nation and creed, but all American in faith and spirit, it defended and preserved the Union. It settled forever the quibbles, the jealousies, the doubts, the conspiracies, the treasons of those who hoped to prevail against a divided people. It reestablished a Nation to the end that "government of the people, by the people and for the people shall not perish from the earth."

We also have a Fatherland.

"No reason on earth," said the late Speaker Reed, "can be given by those who claim suffrage as a right of manhood which does not make it a right of womanhood also." Which sums up the argument for suffrage for women. Man's only reason for refusing woman's appeal is that he does not think it would be becoming to her. None deny her the right to vote.

If there are any women and children who desire to cross the ocean without fear of being murdered while they sleep, they might make arrangements with Dr. Dumba, the Austrian visitor who violated his hospitality by abusing diplomatic privileges and attempting to poison American industries. Uncle Sam has arranged safe passage for him.

A writer in "The Automobile," who has compiled figures from all states in this country, says that there are 2,070,903 machines in the United States. Which isn't hard to believe after attempting to cross Broadway near 4 p. m.

If the suffrage amendment does not carry in the October primary we predict an epidemic of indigestion among the males in New Jersey for the remainder of that month.

The Russian bear that walks like a man is also beginning to learn to kick like a mule.

'Twould be sad indeed if Villa Huerta Diaz Madero did.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

On the editorial page of today's Press I notice an article which refers to the feeling among men—and among women also—which the suffrage question has created, and compares them by saying: "Although many of the men disagree on the subject, they get along in peace and harmony, and will undoubtedly forget all about the matter, as soon as the issue is decided, but not so among women," for (to again quote your article), "the campiagn is liable to bring about animosities which will not soon be forgotten." I quite agree with you, and realize how futile it would be to give the vote to those whose feelings are so easily swayed.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

Piquant Ina Claire and handsome Carlyle Blackwell portray the leading roles in that delightful Lasky comedy, "The Wild Goose Chase," which will be the chief attraction on the screen of the Astor Theatre this afternoon and tonight. The film is in five parts, some of which are very exciting. One of the principal virtues of this thoroughly good picture is the remarkable scenery, most of which was photographed in Los Angeles, Cal. The story is one of supreme interest throughout, and all admirers of dainty Miss Claire, who is now playing one of the leading parts in Zeigfeld "Follies," will see her at the pinnacle of her dramatic form. In addition, today there will be several comedies and dramas and an excellent travelogue. A special music program will be rendered. Tomorrow Francis X. Bushman, one of the leading personages of the screen, will make his first appearance in Plainfield in the splendid Metro production of "The Silent Voice," in which Mr. Bushman is supported by Mrs. Marguerite Snow. In addition the twenty-first episode of "The Diamond from the Sky" will be shown. In this installment the excitement attains its highest dramatic strength. Friday one of the dramatic treats of the season, "The Pretty Sister of Jose," with Marguerite Clark in the leading role. It is a Paramount picture of engrossing interest in five parts.

The supply is always vastly ahead of the demand.

The regular Bonehead doesn't know what you say to him, though you place yourself in a bright light where he can read your lips, and when your voice is as that of a Caruso, and his sight and hearing absolutely perfect.

And when finally you get him to where he can repeat verbatim the words you used, he draws from them a meaning you never intended and that nobody else ever thought of in connection with said language.

If you tell him you want your suitcase, he will bring you your umbrella and explain to you, if you let him, how the mistake arose.

That's one thing the Bonehead is good at—explaining!

He can explain the nebular hypothesis so that even Willie Campbell of the Lick Observatory could get a wrong idea of it.

We know the bonehead is but that's all we do know about him. We have been told that everything was created for a purpose, and if we believe this we have to take the Bonehead on faith as being of some use.

On any ordinary theory, however, we should unhesitatingly say he was the largest piece of excess baggage Madame Grundy carried.

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

A Good Little Lie

IN ORDER to succeed in practice a doctor has to be a fairly proficient liar. Of course everybody has to lie more or less, but in medicine, as she is practiced, a good liar is bound to win the good will of the people.

From time to time we have endeavored, in this interlude of interrogation, to throw the light of truth upon the mere hackneyed, shopworn lies of the profession, because we feel that when a diagnostic lie becomes threadbare enough to be seized upon by the junkmen of the nostrum world and worked over and marketed as genuine goods, it is high time to call a halt. That is why we have no room in this column to discuss "stomach complaint," "biliousness" and "rheumatism" unless in a spirit of levity. These lies, we believe, are now old and decrepit enough to be pensioned off, and it is a shame to think the "eminent specialist" whose name and address is kept sacredly secret should keep such venerable old servants in harness all these years. But the people like to be deceived, no matter who does the lying. Take the "uric acid" joke, for instance. It is still good in most communities. There are lots of poor souls who deny themselves this or that choice morsel of diet merely because they have been led to imagine it will produce acid in the blood and aggravate their "rheumatiz."

Lying does as much good as harm, however. That is, in reference to health it does. One good little lie we can unqualifiedly recommend for universal use is the habit of lying to people about their looks. We cannot repeat this too often. Say How do you do? then follow it right up with a hearty compliment upon your friend's appearance—his heart will warm to you, and it will really stimulate his metabolism and improve his digestion and tone up his diaphragm wonderfully. Doctors dispense this good little lie with the second bottle of tonic as a regular custom. It will work just as well, if not better, in lay hands. Try it over on your mouth organ for a few times and see for yourself its remarkable vitalizing power.

If a group of friends should conspire together to do away with one of their number, no better way could be devised than to continually and untiringly comment upon his failing health, his bad color, the strange look in his eyes, and to inquire solicitously if he isn't sick.

Just as surely can psychological influence improve health.

So don't be a kill-joy. Be a good little liar and make yourself popular.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Young Girl Would Become Nurse

Kindly tell me how a "young" girl eighteen years old may become a trained nurse? asks M. M. E.

Answer—First, why do you young girls waste words? Every young girl who writes us gives her age and in the same sentence mentions that she is a young girl. In order to become a nurse you must decide which hospital you wish to enter, then write the superintendent and state your desire. You must be in good health, have a fair preliminary education, and be prepared to furnish certificates from your family doctor and other persons of standing.

Everybody's Ailment

Please tell a great sufferer what to take for constipation.

Answer—Take your pen and send us the oft-mentioned stamped, addressed envelope for a letter of advice.

Dr. Brady will answer all questions pertaining to Health. If your question is of general interest it will be answered through these columns; if not it will be answered personally if stamped, addressed envelope is enclosed. Dr. Brady will not prescribe for individual cases or make diagnoses. Address all letters to Dr. William Brady, care of this newspaper.

LITTLE GEOGRAPHY LESSONS—ICELAND

ICELAND is situated in the Atlantic Ocean so far north that no ocean liner has ever run into it in a fog. It is one of the coldest and most isolated of civilized lands and one of the happiest, because no government has ever considered it worth attacking with a fleet and army.

Iceland is about 250 miles east of Greenland and 600 miles west of Norway. Hundred of years before North America was discovered the fierce Vikings landed on Iceland occasionally and it has been settled with Europeans for many centuries. It is 300 miles long and 200 miles broad and has 75,999 inhabitants and no moving-picture theatres, billboards, joy-riders, trusts, aldermen or automatic pianos. Because of these facts Icelanders live very contentedly and very rarely emigrate to warmer countries.

Iceland is about as far north as Nome and in the northern part the sun doesn't set for a week at a time in midsummer. But it has the finest warm-water heating system in the world-being in the middle of a branch of the Gulf Stream. This keeps Iceland from freezing solid in the winter, but also keeps it so foggy and damp in the summer that a corn crop wouldn't ripen in three years, and an implement salesman would starve, for there are no farmers on the island. Hay is the only crop made, but sheep, ponies, eider ducks and reindeer are raised and the Icelanders catch enough fish in the summer to keep them supplied with fish-balls all winter.

The Icelanders belong to Denmark, but speak the purest Norwegian left in circulation and govern themselves so successfully by means of an "Althing" that they have never had a scandal. This country should at once dispatch a commission to Iceland to examine the "Althing" and bring a shipload of them here, if possible.

Iceland exports wool, stockings, fish, horses, eider down and moss. It has a telegraph cable to Europe and since the war a ship line to the United States. Those Americans who cannot get along happily on $500,000 a year should make a short excursion to Iceland and examine its inhabitants with great care.

Views Of The Press

Pagan Philosopher

THE Far East is still a land of wisdom and President Yuan Shih-Kai of China, gives proof thereof in his appeal to his nation for full unity among its people and a getting out of the rut of inefficiency.

President Yuan points out that while his people dally and bandy in faction among themselves, the work of the foreign aggressor and transgressor flourishes. Southern Manchuria has been lost, or all but lost, and none can tell where the aggressions will end.

It is, however, when Yuan discourses on the state of the world at large and the temper of the nations toward one another, that he speaks words whose significance should not be lost on our own side of the earth. Mexico, Haiti and the United States will do well to heed his observations, as follows:

"It seems to me that the general policy of the nations of the world is to conquer a weak country, to invade the country which has forfeited the confidence of the other nations, to force order upon the country which is in a state of chaos, and to take by force the country which is on the verge of ruin. In other words, as many foreigners claim, it is the heavenly duty for the strong and civilized nation to annex and control a nation which is barbarous or semi-civilized."

China, with all its hundreds of millions of people, is a weak nation, because it is divided against itself. China invites attack because it has chosen to remain ignorant and has failed to develop the resources which are at hand.

The same causes have prevailed in Mexico and they have produced the same effects. As far as America has anything to learn from the observations of this pagan philosopher, it is with respect to what he says relative to the evils that flow from divisions among a people. In the present trying state of the world America has given but small indication of a disposition to break into factions. Let us continue to steer clear for all time of such disaster and the rest of the world may spend its last dollar on war, it may drink the very dregs in the cup of bitterness which war brings, but America will escape unscathed so long as its people stand shoulder to shoulder to maintain its integrity and share the blessings which a free land has to yield to a free, industrious and intelligent people—Worcester, Mass., Evening Gazette.

Best New Books

BY CATHERINE COOK

SPOON RIVER ANTHOLOGY, by Edgar Lee Masters. The Macmillan Company, New York. $1.25 net.

"Spoon River Anthology" is a startling sort of elegy in a country churchyard. One reads these epitaphs in blank verse with a gasping sense of reality as though present at a private rehearsal on Judgment Day.

These poems are having an immense and growing success although the author had great difficulty at first in finding a publisher. Marion Reedy of St. Louis recognized the new note in poetry and was not afraid to publish the verses serially in his paper, The St. Louis Mirror. Their style reminds one of Walt Whitman, but in subject they are quite different. There is an uncanny realism in the confessions of dead neighbors and friends. Some of the names on the tombstones are known to history and some are fictitious, yet all are true to life. The author is a successful Chicago lawyer. He is described by his friends as a practical dreamer.

ARE WOMEN PEOPLE? by Alice Duer Miller. George H. Doran Company, New York. 60 cents net.

Inconsistency, the jewel of the anti-suffragette, is delightfully illustrated in this book of suffrage rhymes.

Women are beginning to develop a sense of real humor in meeting the arguments of men on the subject of arbitration by ballots and billets. As campaign literature the book is first-class.

THE HAND OF PERIL, by Arthur Stringer. The Macmillan Company, New York. $1.35 net.

A new element in detective stories is introduced into this account of the baffling successes of an international gang of counterfeiters. Human beings are made to respond like push-buttons under the pressure of fate. United States secret service men have their own plans checkmated by the secret service of criminals.

A beautiful woman and her unscrupulous father furnish the chief interest. The plot is a study in hypnotism as well as a good lesson in the science of detection with the usual love interest well-worked out.

THE WHITE CAPTIVE: A Tale of the Pontiac War, by R. Clyde Ford. Rand, McNally & Co., Chicago. $1 net.

The thrill that accompanies a good Indian story makes vivid history for the boy whose father and mother remember pioneer days in the Middle West. When Chicago was Fort Dearborn, and Detroit was a mere trading post, life was a real adventure even for the babes in the cradle.

"The White Captive" is a true story of a boy captured by Indians. His experiences while living among the Indians make good reading. Years afterward he found his mother who had been captured by a rival tribe and the happiness of her later years compensated for the dangers and privations of early life.

THE PIRATES OF THE SKY, by Stephen Gaillard. Rand, McNally & Co., Chicago. $1.25 net.

Jules Verne's trip to the moon has nothing on the new war fiction.

Imagine yourself in London during a Zeppelin raid and you will appreciate the story of "The Pirates of the Sky."

Aerial war facts thinly veiled by changes in location furnish the main plot. Incidents follow each other swiftly and include pirate craft in air and on water with midnight swoops upon rich American cities from New York to Denver. The thick impenetrable smoke overhanging Chicago is its only protection from attack. Millionaires and maidens are abducted in broad daylight and carried aloft as hostages for greater loot. It is a good burlesque on the European terrors by night with the important exception that in the present instance there are no fatalities.

JACOB, A LAD OF NAZARETH, by Mabel Gifford Shine. Rand, McNally & Co., Chicago. $1 net.

The respect and affection shown by Jewish children to their parents is a living testimony of the wisdom in "Spare the rod and spoil the child." No other people use the rod less, yet it is traditional that Jewish home life is happy. This story of the childhood and manhood of Jesus is told by his playmates. More importance is given to the training and character of Jesus as a human among humans, than to the agonies of the Crucifixion and the tragic events that preceded it. The story brings the Bible closer to the small reader and creates a desire to read it for its own sake as a treasure of biography and history.

THE LAST DITCH, by J. Raymond Elderdice. Rand, McNally & Co., Chicago. $1 net.

A boy's story with lots of "punch" in it. The Canal Zone and its big engineering feat furnish the occasions for adventures that call for pluck and patriotism in the hero.

A strong appeal to college boys to be "on the square" with their own consciences is one of the many good points in this picture of American youth put to the test of endurance in "The Last Ditch."

THE STORY OF YOUNG GEORGE WASHINGTON, by Wayne Whipple. Henry Altemus Company, Philadelphia. 75 cents net.

Young George Washington has an attractive sound. It makes the Father of our Country seem more human and therefore closer to the hearts of boys who instinctively are hero worshippers.

Abraham Lincoln used to tell his friends that all the history he knew had been learned from a set of biographies written for young people. Stories of real people who lived in the glorious pioneer days of our country are far more inspiring and instructive than trashy fiction. The former stimulate a desire for vigorous adventure and stir the mind to wholesome imagination. One of the best is "The Story of Young George Washington."

If you fail to take hold upon every possible chance that is offered you, you fail in that measure to gather up and put aside accumulated Experience which goes to make up Momentum.

You can never accumulate Momentum by standing still.

Momentum is power saved up for To-morrow. But if you waste the Opportunities of To-day your Momentum is bound to slip away. For Momentum must be fed with continuous Action and Deeds in order that you may benefit from its force.

You can never accumulate Momentum by standing still.

There is nothing more pitiful than to see men and women of brilliant Mind or Abilities reaching Middle Life inactive and with no Achievement carved about their names. The time to pile up Momentum is during the early years of life and during the early hours of every Day. But no matter in what position you find yourself you can begin at any moment to acquire Momentum and make it one of the most useful factors in your whole career.

Snap Shots

By Jay E. House

You think you are tolerably busy. How would you like to be the woman who cooks batter-cakes for a husband and six children?

You can save a lot of argument by admitting that the whale swallowed Jonah. And the matter is one of the least important of public controversies.

There are all kinds of people, some of whom hold that the question as to whether chipmunks hibernate is important.

After an elderly man has apprised you of the state of his health, he practically has exhausted the subjects for discussion in which he personally is interested.

Formerly when a woman wanted to show her love for a man she knitted a crocheted tie and gave it to him for a Christmas present. Nowadays she buys a revolver and shoots him full of holes.

In a woman good sense and freckles go hand in hand. And a woman who whistles is apt to be pretty capable in other respects.

When a man claim to be as good as anybody the chances are that he isn't.

Most any joke is funny if the man for whom you are working tells it.

Our Sailors Had Jack's Picture Taken.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How Jack Sailed the Seas and Saw Turkey.

"TELL us another Carlo story!" cried Evelyn as daddy sat down.

"I would rather tell you the story of Jack, the little fox terrier who traveled 20,000 miles," said daddy.

"Well, this little fox terrier is probably the smartest dog that ever walked. He is so bright that he's the pet of every officer and sailor on our big battle cruiser, the Tennessee. He is also their pride.

"About a year ago," daddy went on, "Jack sailed out of New York harbor on the Tennessee, and just lately he came back after his wonderful long trip, which took him into more foreign countries than most people ever see."

"What countries did Jack see, daddy?" asked Evelyn. "Did he know geography?"

"No. Like the rest of us he had to learn his geography lesson. But Jack was very fortunate, for, while most boys and girls have to learn geography out of a book, Jack learned his by experience. He lived his geography, which is quite the nicest way to learn any lesson, I think."

"Did he travel to England?" asked Evelyn, who was very fond of the story of the little princes in the tower and hoped she was going to hear it.

"No; he did not go to England, but eight of the months he was away from America he spent in Turkish waters. He saw all the French boats, and the beautiful spires of Constantinople, and the rescue of thousands of people without any homes, and once when the sailors of the Tennessee had a ball game with the Turks, one of the very few games of baseball ever played in Turkey, they took Jack along for good luck."

"Did he catch the ball?" asked Evelyn, who was very fond of throwing a ball for her dog to bring back.

"No. He kept very quiet and watched the game. But when our sailors played good ball he barked so joyfully that they played even better and finally won over the Turks. Then our sailors were so pleased that they had Jack's picture taken."

"How did he look?" the kiddies wanted to know.

"As brave and straight as any soldier. The picture was taken near a big rock in Smyrna, and one of the sailors put his own cap on Jack's black and white head. He sat up on his hind legs, with a big stick across one paw proud as the sultan of Turkey. And well he might feel proud, for probably no other little fox terrier in his family has ever traveled 20,000 miles and come back to New York so wise."

"That's a nice true story. It seems almost like a make believe," said the kiddies, kissing daddy good night.

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

To Sleep on a Hot Night—Fill hot water bag half full of cold water, being careful to get as much air as possible out of the bag. Use as a pillow and place palms of the hands on it. The relief and cooling effect is quite remarkable and in most cases sleep is soon induced.

If your tomato plants still have green tomatoes on when it is time for frost, pull up the plants and hang them in the basement and they will ripen on the vines. We surprised our guests last Thanksgiving by serving sliced ripe tomatoes from our garden. In that way none of our tomatoes were wasted.

SIMPLE CAKE RECIPES.

Layer Cake—One cup sugar, butter size of small egg, one egg, one cup buttermilk (or thick sour milk), one-fourth teaspoon soda, one teaspoon baking powder, one teaspoon vanilla, 1½ cups sifted flour. Cream, butter and sugar, add egg whole and beat a minute. Add soda to milk and stir until it foams. Stir all together and add vanilla. Mix flour and baking powder well and add last. Beat well together until perfectly smooth and free from all lumps. You may think the batter is thin, but that is as it should be. Bake in two layers. By adding a tablespoon of cocoa you will have a fine cocoa cake, or by adding spices and a cupful of currants (dredged with flour), you have a nice fruit cake. Always bake in layers, as the batter is too thin for loaf cake.

Filling for cake: Mix powdered sugar with cream or evaporated milk and add a little vanilla.

Plain Cake—Put in your flour sifter two cups flour and two teaspoons baking powder. Now put in mixing bowl one cup sugar and two tablespoons butter and mix well. Break an egg into the cup and fill up with sweet milk, put in bowl with sugar and stir until smooth. Now put in the flour and stir as quickly as possible until creamy. Next add a teaspoon of lemon juice or vanilla, turn into pans and bake. This makes two layers and is not so large as to dry out before used. Try using the whites of two eggs and you have a nice white cake.

Filling—Put one cup milk in double boiler, mix one-half cup sugar and two tablespoons cornstarch well and add enough sweet milk to make a paste. Now add your two egg yolks and stir well and when milk in boiler is hot stir in paste slowly and stir until thick. Remove from fire and add one teaspoon flavoring and you have the custard filling, or, use yolks of two eggs for cake to make yellow cake. Put in pan one cup sugar and enough hot water to dissolve. Cook until it threads from spoon. Beat two egg whites stiff. Pour boiling sirup slowly over whites and stir until right to spread. Always use same flavoring in icing as in cake. By reversing this process you get a white cake and a gold or yellow icing.

Fruit Cake—Here is the nicest fruit cake you ever used and after baking it is all "frosted." Put in mixing bowl two cups flour, one cup sugar and one-half cup butter. Mix with the hands until it is fine crumbs. Take out one cup crumbs for top. To remainder add one cup sour milk, one teaspoon each allspice, cloves, nutmeg and cinnamon, one egg, two tablespoons flour and one cup raisins, also one teaspoon lemon extract. Put in a cup one-half teaspoon water and one teaspoon soda when dissolved. Now stir this well. Put it in a pan again as high as the mixture when it is evenly spread. Now sprinkle crumbs over top of cake and bake rather slowly. You have a rich, spicy cake with delicious golden brown morsels over the top.

CANNING AND PRESERVING.

Jelly Made of Peach Parings—When canning peaches save parings and seeds. Put into large vessel, cover entirely with water, let boil at least thirty minutes, pour into jelly bag and drain over night. Boil juice about twenty minutes, then add one tin sugar to two of juice, add juice of a lemon and piece of alum about the size of grain of coffee. Boil until it becomes livery when tried on a cold saucer.

CHAPTER XV.

Soapsuds.

"MR. MARTIN will see you, Miss Grayson," said Johnson, coming back, and she followed him upstairs with beating heart.

If there is any time in the day when a retired business man should be allowed to enjoy himself in his own mature and self chosen way, it is the hour between 5 and 6. This hour "between the dark and the daylight" was not the children's hour in Mr. Martin's house, for good and sufficient reasons, his only son having been cast off and there being no "grands" yet any way. Neither was it a 5 o'clock tea hour, for Mr. Martin never had tea any more since Mary Grayson had gone. He had had Johnson bring it in for her once in awhile in the old days, to feed her up, but not now. His new secretary was a goose, and he packed her off, and now he found some letters to open with his own hands today, which seemed to annoy him. Disgruntlement still swayed his paternal heart when he thought of Rodney. He was torn between love and irritation where that boy was concerned.

He turned to the papers for consolation and held one sheet up to scrutinize the headlines. As he did so he displayed to the empty room a full page advertisement of 13 Soap—the hand of Ambrose, in fact—which by some occult influence presently impelled him to turn the paper over and glance at the last page next. The blatant sprawling ad. caused him a pang of regret and disgust, and he flung it down. He took up another paper and had the same experience, then turned angrily to some letters, only to be rewarded by the sight of 13 Soap circulars fluttering to the floor when he opened the envelope—the hand of Ambrose again, in fact. Another "letter" and another—they had got a beastly way now of addressing them in refined female hands, on good stationery, so you'd think they were invitations—followed the first into the waste paper basket.

It was a relief when Johnson presently appeared and announced a caller, though a great surprise to hear the caller's name. Mary Grayson! Now, what was this sly puss after? he speculated as he bade Johnson show her in. Come to get her old job back, he supposed. Well, she could have it at her old salary. He said this last aloud to her as she came into the room looking very sweet, he must admit. The serious expression she wore was not at all unbecoming to her pretty face.

The room looked just as it used to do, and the recollection took Mary back again in spite of her engrossing errand. The diamond pendulum was still swinging on the mantelpiece. Mr. Martin himself wound all the clocks in the house every Sunday morning at exactly half past 9, when the hands did not interfere with the keyholes.

"But I don't want it," said Mary in response to his ungracious proposition.

"Oh, then, Rodney has sent you to plead for him," suggested Mr. Martin.

"No, sir," said Mary. "He doesn't know I'm here."

"Then what are you here for?" he demanded, really curious.

"To make you a business proposition," said Mary stoutly.

"Why doesn't Rodney make it himself?" asked his father.

"He doesn't know what it is," explained Mary.

"That's something in his favor," Martin conceded. "I can't see much use in women tying up in men's business. Somehow I love the scallawag, and, — it, I miss him around here!"

He looked at Mary curiously as he said this, wondering how she and Rodney were getting along these days and what her errand really was, though he didn't propose to give away his interest in it. She had betrayed the true nature of things to him once. What was she going to do now?

His reflections and Mary's business were interrupted, however, by Johnson's entering a second time and announcing the last two people in the world that Mary had counted on, namely, Mr. Rodney Martin and Mr. Ambrose Peale.

"Oh, the whole firm, eh?" said Mr. Martin, eyeing Mary sharply.

Mary started guiltily. For a moment she feared that Rodney might hark back to that $5,000 check his father had given her and grow jealous again. She couldn't pretend to be pleased to see him, despite her sentimental reflections just now downstairs. She had wanted to handle this interview in her own way. She felt as if she could have done it right, convincingly, just as a hunter feels within himself that he can clear the hurdle that looms ahead. Now, here were Rodney and Ambrose to interfere with her, and Ambrose of course would interrupt and switch her off and perhaps irritate the old gentleman with his advertising talk. He couldn't help it. Ambrose would pop out of his jack in the box instanter if you sprang the subject of soap and advertising.

Old Mr. Martin surveyed all three of them grimly, just long enough to let embarrassment set in on all their faces. His eyes rested on Mary last of all, and longest. A fairly perceptible change crept round his firm old mouth as he did so. He was satisfied the little minx had told him the truth about Rodney's not knowing anything as to her mission here, and indeed, when the boy came in and saw her there, he exclaimed in genuine surprise:

"Why, Mary, what are you doing here?"

Mary thought fast a moment, and evidently decided that the best part of diplomacy this time was the truth.

"I came to tell your father about Brown & James," she said frankly.

Rodney looked relieved.

"That's why we're here too," he said.

"Absolutely," added Peale.

"Well, what is it about Brown & James?" blustered Martin. "Let me tell you right now, I won't back any fake company."

"But we're not a fake any longer," protested Rodney.

"We've actually sold some soap," chimed in Peale.

"Fifty thousand cakes," Mary explained impressively.

"To Brown & James," said Rodney.

"Then why did you send 'em only five thousand cakes?" inquired old Martin bluntly.

Rodney looked astonished, but answered promptly:

"Because after we'd got that much from one of your branch factories you shut off our supply."

"And we couldn't get any more soap anywhere," said Peale plaintively.

"And you knew it very well," Mary said accusingly.

"We've still got 45,000 cakes to deliver if we can get 'em from you," went on Rodney. "Why let all that money get out of the family?" he pleaded. "It's a business proposition."

"No, it isn't," said the father. "Don't fool yourself. I sent that telegram."

"What telegram?" asked Rodney.

"The telegram from Brown & James ordering the 50,000 cakes," grunted old Martin.

Mary plumped down on a chair in dismay.

"You sent it?" she gasped.

Mr. Martin decided to amplify a little.

"That day at the office you were pretty game, son," he said, "and, to tell the truth, I felt so sorry for you I had to do something, so I sent that wire"—

"So that success is all a bluff, too?" sighed Rodney.

"Well," said his father, "I figured an order like that would stall off your creditors, and when I had fixed it with one of our factories to let you have 5,000 cakes at 3 cents a cake I knew it would mean some ready cash for you from Brown & James."

"But how did you square Brown & James?" inquired Peale, still hoping it was his ads.

"Oh, I just wired 'em I'd be responsible," said Mr. Martin. "And say," he added, turning to Rodney, "you had a nerve to charge 'em 60 cents a cake. I had to pay the bill. That shipment cost me $3,000 for $150 worth of soap."

Peale laughed.

"That isn't funny, young man," said Mr. Martin, glaring at him.

"No, it isn't," admitted Rodney. "I thought we'd really made good, and all the time it was you behind us"—

"You see, my boy," said Martin senior, "even if you did nearly trim me, I've got a soft of sneaking fondness for you. Look here, son, why not quit? There's no market for dollar soap."

"But how do you know?" Rodney objected bravely.

"How do I know?" asked his father. "Because I had a letter from Brown & James a few days ago asking me what to do with the soap. They hadn't sold a cake. I told 'em to dump it in the Chicago river. It might help the drainage canal."

"But you didn't give our advertising a chance," objected Rodney.

"Yes," said Peale eagerly. "We only finished a great big advertising campaign in Chicago two days ago."

"I know the soap would have made good," insisted Rodney, "with that trademark."

"If your trademark was so marvelous," said Martin, "somebody besides your poor old father would have bought your soap."

In the meantime Peale had grown more and more discouraged.

"Oh, what's the use? He doesn't believe in advertising," he said pathetically.

"Oh, yes, I do," Mr. Martin objected; "sound conservative advertising, but not the crazy, sensational stuff you go in for."

Mary decided she would try another tack.

"Oh, you're just mad because the soap trust didn't think of 13 Soap itself," she said, half mischievously.

"Why, we wouldn't touch a fool thing like that," said Mr. Martin. "If you deliver the goods your goods will advertise you; that's always been our policy."

This was an unfortunate lead for the old soap king to have made. To doubt the efficiency of his ads. was to strike at the vitals of Ambrose Peale, to challenge him and draw his fire every time. And now Rodney was his enthusiastic squire and second.

Both boys drew good long breaths and began on their favorite themes. Poor Mary felt that she, too, was being swept along with them in the flood of Peale's enthusiasm.

"I'm sorry, father," Rodney led off, "but you are too old fashioned to know the modern way of advertising. Why, do you know the Federal Biscuit company was on the verge of failing until they hit on a catchy name for crackers?"

Mary took a hand tod.

"And since then they have had over 400 lawsuits to protect it," quoted Mary.

"Their trademark made 'em," Rodney went on. "They value that trademark now as $6,000,000."

Peale had listened with grim satisfaction.

"Great stuff," he echoed.

"And did you ever hear of the Wilkins safety razor?" asked Mary. "Tell him about it, Rodney."

"It costs you $5," said Rodney. "Don't you know there's a mighty good safety razor for a quarter and dozens at a dollar? But you use the Wilkins because Wilkins was there first. You buy his razor at a high price simply because of its trademark."

"Advertising," said Mary, with a gesture she had learned from Rodney.

"Absolutely," said Rodney, with a word he had learned from Peale.

Peale himself went on:

"And Andover soap in the magazines alone used $450,000 worth of space in 1913, and at 3 cents a cake wholesale that represents 15,000,000 cakes for magazine articles alone."

"I don't believe it," old Martin interrupted.

"Yes," said Peale irreverently, "and a lot of other guys didn't believe that iron ships would float, or that machines heavier than air would fly, or that you could talk to Chicago on a wire, or send a message across the Atlantic without a wire. Pardon me, sir, but you want to get on to yourself."

"Yes, father, you certainly do," said Rodney.

"And you'd better hurry up," added Mary.

Mr. Martin laughed grimly.

"You've got a fine lot of theories, but what have you done for those 5,000 cakes of 13 Soap out at Brown & James?"

"Why, we haven't really spent enough money advertising," said Peale, true to his faith. "That's the trouble."

"That's true," Rodney agreed. "Every time the Miller Tobacco company puts out a new cigarette they start off by appropriating $200,000 to boom it."

"And I suppose they are a lot of boobs," put in Peale.

"And think what other firms spend," said Rodney. "I've gone into this thing, father. Think what national advertising is accomplishing. It sells automobiles, vacuum cleaners, talking machines, rubber heels, cameras, washing machines, foods, clothes, shoes paints, houses, plumbing, electric irons, fireless cookers, mostly to a lot of people who'd never even hear of 'em if it weren't for advertisements."

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Give me a cup of tea and let me cool off a minute. I shall burst with laughing I haven't dared let out, and I want to tell you my story first so we can all laugh together." Olive sank into a chair in Nell's cosy sitting room where she and Jo Parsons were sewing.

"I'm afraid this tea won't cool you much; it's been near the fire. What's your fun, please? Will you have lemon?"

"Yes, thanks. It's Mrs. Jaynes again. You really must go to that sewing society once in a while instead of sewing here by yourselves. It's too good. I went because I gathered that some of them have it in for me and I wanted to beard them in their lair. And I was richly rewarded."

"We've held our breaths long enough," laughed Jo.

"It's Mrs. Jaynes again. Talk about an asset! She's worth three towns-full of common society women. And there are some truly nice people there, too. Don't misunderstand me; I don't go to make fun. Well, Mrs. Jaynes and Mrs. Stivers—your quilt woman—are hand in glove. The ladies asked Mrs. Jaynes to talk about the spiritual revival in Europe since the war—a timely topic. Mrs. Jaynes was got up regardless."

"Low neck and shoulder sleeves?" asked Nell.

"Not quite; brilliant peacock blue dress, deeply scalloped, very short of course; silk stockings to match; waist covered with net and spangles; a band of jewels in her hair—she probably calls it a tirara."

"What splendor!" chorused the audience.

"Well, that was the principal part of her address, as you've probably guessed. She talked in most rambling fashion of the dear brave French boys, no larger than her son Clyde—she used a perfectly dry handkerchief here—marching so bravely off to war, and of how their mothers and sweethearts send them milk chocolate and tobacco by mail, and how cheerful everybody is, and so on.

"She was most enthusiastic about the American Red Cross hospital in Paris. You know, the Jayneses were over there when war was declared and had a time getting out. It seems from her account that all the aristocracy of this country are showing off their wealth by helping hospitals over there. She made a great point of the fact that all the ambulance autos were driven by young gentlemen; she said particularly that they were persons who did not have to work for a living. Evidently just in Clyde's class! Also that there was a lady—one of the representatives of our best American families—in each ward every afternoon to serve tea and to cheer up the brave wounded!

"Have you heard about the London family who were taking wounded soldiers driving in their car, and asked that they might have some a little worse wounded so that they'd show more?

"That's just the idea apparently. Mrs. Jaynes would have us think that she was just in the swim there; probably she was; she has all the qualifications.

"But her principal point was the difficulties getting out. I honestly never fought so hard not to laugh as when she told of some old American millionaire sitting all day in the rain on a flatcar trying to get from Brussels to the coast. And bless your heart! he was knitting socks for the poor Belgians. I looked about for sympathy and thought I saw one woman—isn't there a Mrs. Burt?—who looked as if she might be a kindred spirit. But Mrs. Jaynes had tears in her voice, and the rest were solemn as a congress of owls."

"What did you say Mrs. Jaynes' subject was?" asked Nell with a puzzled face.

"Subject! She didn't say a word on or within a dozen miles of it, not one. Give me another cup of tea, please; I've earned three, at least. Oh yes! Mrs. Jaynes also proposes a Kermess—she explained that it's a sort of European bazaar—to aid the poor of Fairport at Christmas."

"Looks as if it might be some fun," suggested Jo. "I suppose she means the Italian laborers on the factory construction."

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Conducted by the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

New Jersey Senator for Suffrage.

United States Senator William Hughes, of New Jersey, has come out with a public announcement endorsing woman suffrage. Senator Hughes' wife is an ardent suffragist and a member of the suffrage organization in Paterson. Senator Hughes says:

"I voted for the equal suffrage Constitutional amendment to be submitted to the people of the State of New Jersey at the coming election. I voted to levy an income tax upon the incomes and earings of men and women alike, and I can see no reason why, if women is to be taxed on the basis of equality with a man, she should not be given an equal vote with him as to how her money is to be expended by public servants.

"Modern legislation deals largely with industrialism, and attempts to better the situation of the working forces of the world. It seems only just that women, who, with their children, form such an important part of our industrial system, should be given the right to attempt to alleviate and better the conditions surrounding them and to try to gain a larger share of what they produce. This, it seems to me, must be the chief end and aim of civilization. It cannot be retarded, but in my belief it will be advanced by granting the franchise to women."

Colorado Counterblast.

Senator Helen Ring Robinson, of Colorado, who has come to help in the suffrage campaign in the East, is giving some interesting testimony in defense of Colorado. She says:

"The State has now the machinery for safeguarding the interests of the third party in any industrial dispute—the general public.

"The last Colorado General Assembly passed an industrial disputes act which has already prevented one strike which threatened Denver. By this act, when any dispute arises between employers and employes, both sides must appear before an industrial commission created by that act and submit their differences to the consideration, and, if possible, to the settlement of that commission. In any case, at least thirty days is provided by law as a "cooling time," and during those thirty days no strike or lockout or cut in wages is lawful.

"This is the most advanced industrial legislation now in force in any State in the Union. Colorado learned a lesson from her affliction. It is time other States stopped 'pointing the finger' at her and began to think about following her example."

Editors' Opinions of Woman Suffrage.

On October 9 a special number of The Literary Digest will contain interviews by telegram with about one thousand newspapers throughout the United States on the question of woman suffrage. Replies from the majority of them have already been received, and at the present time about two-thirds of them are in favor of woman suffrage.

This issue of the Digest on the suffrage question will be divided into three parts: First, from those States that are suffrage, second, from those States in which the campaign is now on; third, from those States that are not for suffrage.

TY COBB HELPS BEAT BOSTON; THEN RED SOX FANS ATTACK HIM

Arrow points to Ty Cobb in center of Boston mob at game's close.

This picture was taken on the Boston American field just after the recent game in which Ty Cobb helped the Tigers defeat the Red Sox. Boston fans became so infuriated that when the game was over they rushed onto the field with the apparent intention of doing Cobb physical injury. Had it not been for the police who surrounded him the Georgia Peach undoubtedly would have been hurt.

Scattered Sport Gleanings

One of the beauties of the closing of the baseball season is the cold weather which accompanies it.

'Tis said that Plainfield High School is about to show us an improved grade of football this season. We might add that there is lots of room for improvement.

Friends of Manager "Doc" Doyle are wondering what he will do this fall if the Holy Cross eleven doesn't happen to reorganize. One unkind youth accused him of having political ambitions but "Doc" stoutly protested that he would not have his character blighted by delving in the political pastime.

From the Monday after reports of auto accidents one is compelled to believe that the church pew is the best place on Sundays and with the football season upon us it's too bad we can't have church Saturday afternoons. There's a whole lot of difference between killing a man outright and pulling his limbs to pieces.

Sport note—"Jamesburg ball player, after being hit by auto, plays great game." If Henry Ford could only get a royalty on this one for his advertising campaign.

Now that those big league pennants have passed the near-won stage it's high time us baseball fans started to dig upon freight schedules for the Quakertown.

Just to let us know that they're alive the Y. M. H. A. basketballers announce a double-header for New Year's day. Baseball promoters once in awhile manage to get away with these morsels, but we're willing to bet a door-knob to a key-hole that one team won't find a whole lot of enjoyment out of wading through two basketball scraps.

How does that City Basketball League look to you pessimists now? It's a pretty healthy squawk for an infant.

Rumor has it that "Doc" Hamilton, the Holy Cross football coach, is contemplating a campaign before the footlights. The Holy Cross outfit is evidently making no bones of the fact that its members will have to seek elsewhere for rooters than the football arena.

INTEREST KEEN AT MEETING TO ORGANIZE A CITY BASKETBALL LEAGUE IN PLAINFIELD

Enthusiasm was the keynote of the basketball organization meeting held in the Daily Press editorial rooms last night, delegates being present from six different clubs and indications pointing to the advent of at least four additional applications prior to the next meeting which will be held next Tuesday night in the same rooms. Twenty-five interested basketball promoters attended the session and all were keenly optimistic of the prospects for a flourishing season on local courts. The clubs represented and their delegates were Knights of Columbus, John T. Caulfield and Daniel McAfee; T. A. B., Denny, Scott and Force; Y. M. C. A., Moulton, Taylor and Newkirk; St. Joseph's McDonough and Seidel; Y. M. H. A., Rosenson and Oliner. Hope Chapel, First Baptist, North Plainfield and Plainfield Recreation Club are prospectives.

A committee, composed of Taylor, Denny, Rosenson, McDonough, Jones and Caulfield, was appointed to consult with other teams and Newkirk and Oliner will get together on a constitution prior to the next meeting.

PRINCETON TOURNEY NOW NARROWED DOWN TO THREE

Phil Mills, P. H. S., defeated Judson Blake, Leals, yesterday in their match of the Princeton Club's tournament, the scores being 2—6, 6—4, 6—4.

The finalists in the tournament, therefore, are Phil Mills, Eustace Eggie and Rodman Parvin.

P. H. S. FOOTBALL PLAYER DISLOCATED SHOULDER

Warren Mumford, one of the most reliable football candidates for the Plainfield High School eleven, dislocated his left shoulder in practice yesterday.

Mumford was hurt in a like manner last year. He is not confined to his home, but will be out of the game for the rest of the season.

BILL SAMUELS HAD A SEASON IN WEST

Former Plainfield Ball Player Offered Contract With Houston Club.

"Bill" Samuels, formerly with the Plainfield Pets and at one time first baseman for the Dunellen Central New Jersey Leaguers, who has been playing sensational baseball with the La Junta (Colorado) club, will be back at his home in New Brunswick some time this week, according to a letter received by a friend. The La Junta club won the pennant, and the team since then has been playing a post-season series with the Denver and Pueblo clubs. In the series with the latter club the La Junta team won three straight games.

Monday he returned to La Junta, and after one game in that place, starts for New Brunswick, arriving some time next week. Samuels has been fielding at a fine clip and hitting over the .300 mark. In 100 games in which he played he compiled two home runs, 30 triples and 20 doubles, in addition to his single base hits.

The La Junta club was a strong outfit, and several of the team will be found in faster company next year. Samuels has been offered a contract to play with the Houston club, in the Texas League, next year, but has not accepted as yet. Two of the club pitchers have been offered contracts with the Denver club of the Western League.

Baseball seems to be in a flourishing condition in the West, and big crowds have turned out to the games in which Samuels' club has participated.

SIX MORE CARS ARE IN BIG AUTO RACE

Bob Burman Qualifies at Rate of 103 Miles An Hour.

Among those who qualified yesterday was Bob Burman in a Peugeot, who made a second trial in 1.09.73, a rate of 103 miles per hour. All entrants are privileged to make three trials. Earl Cooper made a second trial in 1.12, averaging 100 miles an hour. Ora Haibe, in a Sebring, Jr. Vail in a Mulford Special, and Le Cain in the Fugh Special, also qualified.

SPORTING NOTES

The forward pass and punting are getting more attention than in previous years at the gridiron training grounds.

The close finish in both major leagues has kept baseball bugs on edge, and now, as a climax, it's hard to pick a winner in the world's series.

Carl Morris is billed to go fifteen rounds Friday night at Tulsa, Okla., against Tony Ross, of Pennsylvania.

Night baseball gets another tryout tonight at the Brooklyn grounds of the Federal League. Steel towers eighty feet high hold the big lights.

The New York boxing fans will see Al Reich and Gunboat Smith in action tonight in a ten-round bout at St. Nicholas Rink.

Ralph De Palma has entered for the auto contests at Trenton Fair. The speed king formerly lived in Jersey.

Tomorrow is get-away day at Havre de Grace.

Hughie Jennings' great fight for the pennant was one of the gamest old baseball has known.

BONE PLAYS RESULT OF PROGRESSIVE PLAYS, SAYS SCHAEFER.

"Any player who fails to work along the old fashioned lines is likely to pull a 'boner' every so often," asserts "Germany" Schaefer of the Newark Feds. "That's why so many of the brainy men in baseball pull 'boners.'

"It takes brains to figure out new plays. If the new play goes through all's lovely, but if it doesn't the player is branded as an ivory domed guy.

"That's why there aren't many new plays being originated in these days. Players hate to take the chance of falling down and being labeled a bonehead."

FOOTBALL OLD GAME, SAYS HARVARD SCRIBE

Was Played by Spartans Until Stopped by Their Kings.

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 29.—Football, while not quite dating back to the time of Adam, is a very old game, according to Joel A. Goldthwait, Harvard under-graduate statistician.

Writing in the Harvard Illustrated, Goldthwait says: "The Spartans engaged in a game called harpaston during the intervals between battles. The object was the familiar one of getting the ball across the goal line by any means. Two English Kings, Edward II. and Henry VI., forbade football because the people deserted archery for football, resulting in bad markmanship."

ALMOST OVERLOOKED HAZARD

Golfer Thought He Had Easy Shot, but Opponent "Butted In."

A human interest story is going the round, and it is only one of many arising in the "rough" recesses of the nineteenth hole. Where would golf be without its stories and who could appreciate it so highly if it were not for these sad games?

The drive of a certain golfer had been a sweet one, far and straight. Coming up to his ball he found the lie ideal and prepared for the second to get home. "What a setting for my next!" he exclaimed. "Overhead the beautiful sky, behind me the woods and nothing before me but a sloping stretch of the green and the flag."

"And the purling brook," murmured the partner, who already had played 4 and stood 3 down. The exultant one overheard and trembled. Swish! The ball was topped. Splash! "Ah, yes, the brook!" he sighed, and thereafter the match was grimly and silently played.

COLLEGE BOY IDEA WORKS.

Rickey Has Picked Two Stars In Sisler and Koob.

Branch Rickey of the St. Louis Browns is beginning to show that his idea of picking up college boys and turning them into big league ball players is a pretty good one.

Rickey got Sisler from Michigan university, and the youngster has played almost every position in the club, pitching one day and playing the infield or outfield the next. He has hit well too.

Ernest Koob, from Ypsilanti, is another who has produced. He has looked like a real big league pitcher since he left school to work on the diamond.

How to Keep Our City Moving

We must keep moving. A city booms only so long as its manufacturers and merchants keep moving. The wheels of every line of endeavor must be kept turning if the city is going to develop, and what is of deeper concern than the wheels of Plainfield kept turning?

Should every one who has the interest of Plainfield close at heart buy goods from our merchants, the benefits all around can easily be seen. Thousands of dollars that would otherwise go out of the city will be kept circulating here and contribute a big share towards making a bigger and busier Plainfield.

A dollar spent at home will keep that dollar at home and all will share in the profits.

MEMORIAL FOR FR. W. H. MILLER

Statue of St. Joseph to Be Placed on Mt. St. Mary College Campus.

GIFT OF HIS PARENTS

Appropriate Ceremonies Will Mark the Unveiling in Honor of Priest Who Served St. Joseph's Church Many Years.

There is soon to be erected within one hundred yards of the main entrance to Mt. St. Mary College a fine and costly statue of St. Joseph, which has been given to the college by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Miller, of South Amboy, in memory of Father William H. Miller, who for more than twenty years was the beloved pastor of St. Joseph's church, in North Plainfield. There has always been the closest bond of friendship between St. Joseph's parish and Father Miller's parents. An evidence of this was shown when Mrs. Miller, at a considerable expense, gave the corner-stone for the handsome new church in the borough. This was brought from Ireland and suitably inscribed, the entire cost being borne by the parents of the late priest.

The statue of St. Joseph, which is being made by Walter Manning, at his marble yards on West Front street, stands seven feet six inches, stands on two bases, and will fit in nicely with the landscape architecture designed for the college campus. Concrete steps and concrete walk will encircle the bases upon which the statue is to stand, and from this a direct path will lead to the main entrance to the college.

On the sub-base there is this inscription: "In Memory of William H. Miller; Donors, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Miller." The statue is now about completed, and it will be placed in position within a short time. Arrangements have not yet been made for the unveiling, but appropriate ceremonies will mark the interesting event. Father John Baldwin, chaplain of the college, has this matter in hand, and as soon as the details are complete they will be announced.

The memory of Father Miller is being further honored by the erection of a handsome monument in the family plot at South Amboy. This is being put up by the parents of the late priest. It is a large and imposing shaft and is suitably inscribed. This was also made by Mr. Manning. It was largely through the unceasing efforts of Father Miller that St. Joseph's parish has its handsome edifice, and his good works will always be of lasting memory among his people.

MISS DAISY HARRISON TO VISIT FITZGERALD, GA.

Miss Daisy M. Harrison, private secretary to A. J. Brunson, president of the First National Bank, leaves today for the South, where she will spend a month's vacation with her sister, Mrs. A. M. Davis, who resides at Fitzgerald, Ga., about one hour's run by rail from Savannah.

She will sail from New York on the steamship Colombus, for Savannah, and will be accompanied on board the boat by two friends from Canada. Her return trip will be made on the S. S. City of Savannah, which sails from that place on October 28.

MRS. IDA M. COLLINS.

Mrs. Ida May Collins, aged thirty-five years, wife of Arthur Collin, died yesterday from a lingering disease at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Adams, at 49 West Clinton street, Dover. Mrs. Collins was a cousin to Mrs. Mary E. Firstbrook, of East Second street. The funeral will be held privately tomorrow afternoon, and burial will be in the Orchard street cemetery, Dover.

EDITH ECKHARDT.

SCHOOL IN POLITICS TO OPEN TOMORROW

Suffrage Workers Will Be Taught How to Reach "Dear People."

Plainfield suffragists who are anxious to qualify as politicians before the election of October 19, so that they will be able to meet men on their own grounds at the polls that day will assemble at suffrage headquarters on Depot avenue tomorrow for instruction.

Two classes in the workers' and watchers' school will be held tomorrow. The first will be called to order at 10:30 and the afternoon session will begin at 2:30. Some of the leading women of Plainfield will be in the kindergarten class.

The purpose of this school is to instruct intelligent women in the duties of a watcher or worker at election polls, so that they will be of service to the cause when a vote is taken on the suffrage amendment next month. They will be told how to approach voters so as to make an impression, how to argue in favor of suffrage with a man, and a few political tricks that are honest—conceding the presence of such an animal—and the instructors will be women. The faculty has not been publicly announced. It is asked that all sympathizers with the cause who are able to devote time to its advancement enroll in the school. No tuition will be charged.

Mrs. Greeley was the speaker at yesterday's factory meeting. She spoke to the employes of the Bosca Magneto plant and made an impression in her appeal to them for support. She also addressed a crowd at the postoffice corner last night, in which she told of the evolution of the feminist movement and of the need of woman's influence in the management of public affairs. As proof of the failure of man in his self-imposed stewardship of the morals of the country she pointed out the horrible conditions under which the children of Georgia are forced to live. Child labor laws now in force there enable sweatshops to work children over eleven years of age, ten and twelve hours each day, she said, and the age of consent is ten years.

There will be a street meeting at the postoffice corner tonight. It will be addressed by Mrs. George Bass, of Chicago, who was instrumental in keeping Mrs. Ella Flagg Young at the head of the Chicago Board of Education a short time ago when politicians sought to force her removal from that position.

NOW HE KNOWS IT'S BETTER TO LET WELL ENOUGH ALONE

Stubbornness cost Phillip Kohnkouses an extra $5 when he was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning, on the same charge for which he drew a reprimand and suspended sentence before the same magistrate yesterday. He was yesterday accused of insulting one Ignatz Ritouski and warned not to repeat the offense. According to the complainant the taunts of Kohnkouses were renewed as soon as he was liberated and this resulted in his rearrest.

In the city court this morning, Judge DeMeza fined him $5 and this provoked a volley of insulting language from the prisoner. During the course of his remarks he took occasion to denounce the judge, police department and city in general and the magistrate called him back to the bar and added another five to the fine.

Kohnkouses immediately proceeded to get $10 worth of say in and it took the combined efforts of Lieut. Maurice Higgins and Patrolmen Neylon and Hendershott to put him back in a cell. This noon the prisoner was very sorry for all that he had done and pleaded with the patrolmen to seek the $10 fine from some of his friends.

SEEKING AN ITALIAN.

The Plainfield police have been requested by the authorities of Berkeley Heights to keep a watch out for Michael Amiano, an Italian, who is charged with abducting Angelina Brown, a fifteen-year-old negro girl, of that place. Amiano is described as being twenty-four years old, five feet six inches in height and weighs 120 pounds. He has dark eyes, hair and complexion.

RAPID PROGRESS ON TRUNK SEWER WORK

1,660 Feet of Pipe Line is Laid During the Past Month.

A good report of work done was made by the engineer in charge of the main sewer trunk line at the monthly meeting of the Joint Sewer Commission last night. It was stated that 1,660 feet of trunk line was laid during September.

Upon certificates presented by the engineers, bills amounting to $18,046.30 were ordered paid. Plainfield's 60 per cent. of this sum is $12,271.48; North Plainfield's share, 25 per cent., $4,511.58, and Dunellen's 7 per cent., $1,263.24.

It was voted to reimburse the borough of Dunellen the sum of $794.75 which that municipality has paid out for certain improvements made in a street through the Equator Park tract to induce the owners of the park to dedicate the street to that borough. It was necessary to obtain the right of way for the sewer line through that street, but as it was owned by a private corporation, the right had to be obtained in a legal way. Condemnation proceedings were decided to be too expensive, as owners of property on the street are scattered all over the country, and some of the purchasers of lots hold them only on contract, the title still vesting in the company. These buyers on contract would have to be served with notices in the event of condemnation proceedings.

A better plan was proposed, and accepted by the borough. The owners of the tract agreed to dedicate the street to the borough providing certain municipal improvements were put down in the street, and it was the cost of this work, amounting to $794.75, which the Commission last night voted to pay back to Dunellen out of the general fund.

MATERIAL FIT FOR A MOVIE SCENARIO

John Duffy's Failure to Get Acquainted With Borrowed Bike Fatal.

While he didn't mean to play a Jesse James role or to demonstrate just how easy it is to kidnap someone else's bicycle on Plainfield's main street, John Duffy, of Liberty street, this afternoon did both to the fullest degree of perfection. While there didn't happen to be any of the city's finest in the immediate vicinity to profit by Duffy's unconsciously committed piece of dare-deviltry several of his friends enjoyed it immensely and are passing "compliments" along to the perpetrator of the daring deed.

Shortly after noon today Duffy borrowed a wheel from Morris L. Abrams, a clerk in Abrams' shoe store, for the purpose of taking a short spin. The rider had not gone far when he decided that it might be well to secure a pair of trouser guards and left the wheel along the curb in front of the postoffice in charge of Jacob Fass, while he wandered back to the store for the necessary equipment. In the meantime Fass happened to see one of his friends, John T. Caulfield, on the opposite side of the thoroughfare and used the wheel to go to the spot where Caulfield was standing.

Duffy injected his handiwork into the situation, and soon had a suitable pair of guards manufactured from a string, and proceeded back to reclaim the wheel, with which he was all too well acquainted. He didn't see Fass in the immediate vicinity, but he thought little of this fact, well knowing his friend's inclination toward wandering and pedestrianism. Duffy, accordingly, remounted a wheel which he thought was the one he had borrowed, and rode away. Fass later discovering that he had gone.

In the course of the next few minutes developments began to pile up with all kinds of speed. The owner of the wheel on which Duffy was pastiming put in an appearance and instituted a search for the supposed thief. Fass went to look for Duffy, and later in the afternoon found him. Duffy also found the owner of the bike he had been using, and 'tis said that the aggravated owner found something belonging to Duffy, but here the story endeth, and we know not what this was.

MAYORS INVITED TO JOIN LEAGUE

Plainfield Executive Sends Letters to Many Towns and Boroughs.

EXPLAINS ITS PURPOSE

Efforts Will Be Made to Increase the Membership in the Newly-Organized League of Municipalities.

In an effort to increase the membership of the newly organized League of Municipalities, Mayor Leighton Calkins, of Plainfield, is sending letters to executive heads of other municipalities in this section. Mr. Calkins was one of the organizers of the league, and is its third vice-president. Its purpose is to secure legislation which is calculated to advance a business-like conduct of city affairs. Mr. Calkins has mailed copies of his letter, with a sample form of application, to the Mayor of the following towns and boroughs: Garwood, Westfield, Clark township, New Providence, Summit, Elizabeth, Roselle, Linden, Kenilworth, Union, Rahway, Fanwood, Cranford, Roselle Park and Mountainside. The Mayor's letter is as follows:

"I am interested in having the cities, towns and boroughs of Union county join our newly organized League of Municipalities. It will cost you, in annual dues, only $2 per thousand of inhabitants. The purpose of the league is to have an organization which shall enable municipalities to secure legislation which is calculated to advance a business-like conduct of their local affairs.

"The league stands especially for a real measure of practical home rule, by constitutional amendment. Cities and towns need a broad, general grant of power, reversing the presumption that a municipality has no powers except those expressly conferred and incidental thereto. In the conduct of their local, internal affairs, cities and towns should be presumed to have all necessary powers, not expressly retained or denied by the State Constitution and laws validly enacted thereunder.

"To join the league a resolution should be adopted by your Common Council or other governing body, similar to enclosed form. After adopting same, send a copy to C. J. Swartz, secretary, City Hall, Trenton.

"I enclose a copy of the constitution of the league, and hope you will take a personal interest in having your community become a member."

SAFE MAN OPENS SAFE CLOSED FOR ONE YEAR

Samuel Rubin, a West Fourth street merchant, lost the combination to his safe a year ago, and had not been able to open it until last night, when H. C. V. Mixner, of Plainfield avenue, an employe of a New York safe concern, did the trick for him.

Mr. Mixner was in the store when Mr. Rubin mentioned his predicament to him. Becoming interested, Mr. Mixner went to work at the safe, and in thirty minutes had the doors open without having to resort to the use of any tools or instruments.

HUNGARIAN ORCHESTRA TO PLAY AT DUNELLEN

The purchase of a farm near Dunellen by A. L. Sloane, director of a Hungarian orchestra known throughout the country, led to the engagement by the latter of Wayside Park at that place, for the purpose of entertainment.

PRIMARY VOTE THIS YEAR WAS HEAVY

Comparison of 1915 Figures With Those of Two Years Ago.

While generally considered a comparitively light vote, the primary vote of Tuesday in the county compared with the last "off year," 1913, when a Governor, members of the State committees, Assembly candidates and members of City Council were chosen, shows the balloting yesterday to be much heavier.

In the entire county yesterday the Republican Assembly ticket averaged more than 5,800, while two years ago the average Republican Assembly vote was about 3,000. The Democratic Assembly vote yesterday averaged about 4,000 for the county, while two years ago it averaged about 2,500.

The total Democratic vote for the Assembly in Elizabeth two years ago averaged about 2,000, while the Republican Assembly vote in this city averaged about 1,200. Tuesday the average for Democratic Assembly vote in Elizabeth was about 3,000, while the Republican vote in the city averaged about 2,400.

In 1913 the Democratic Assembly candidates received the following vote in the county: Dobbins, 2781; Dooley, 2,430; Griffin, 2,655; Leonard, 3,054; Linke, 1,724; Lowden, 1,704; McLoughlin, 2,543. The Republican county vote in 1913: Babcock, 4,161; Buetel, 2,575; Evans, 3,532; Martin, 3,615.

As the result of the notice in the Daily Press of the death in Boston of Michael Doran, formerly of this city, a woman claiming to be his wife called at the Daily Press office yesterday. About ten years ago he left Elizabeth to take a position with a railroad company at Boston, and his death occurred in that city following a brief illness from pneumonia. He was 45 years old and had a large circle of friends.

CHECKS WILL BE ACCEPTED AT PAR

State Trust Co. Makes Announcement Today of Interest to Patrons.

The State Trust Company, together with a large number of other banks throughout the country, has agreed with the New York Clearing House Association to remit at par daily for checks on their respective institutions, sent them by the association. Checks on all these institutions will, therefore, be accepted in New York and elsewhere at par, on and after tomorrow, October first.

The out of town banks feel that they have won a great victory in inducing the New York Clearing House Association to adopt this plan. About two years ago New York banks, members of the Clearing House Association, agreed to accept at par in New York, checks of such institutions in the States named, as would agree to remit to the sending banks at par. This plan, if accepted, would have imposed a large amount of clerical labor on the consenting banks. A counter proposition was made, however, by these banks, in which they agreed to remit at par each day to the New York Clearing House Association in one check for all the checks sent them by the association, so that instead of the out of town bank being called upon to remit to the separate New York member banks each day, they would only be required to send one check to the New York Clearing House for the total of the checks sent them by the Clearing House, and this plan has now been adopted; under it the various banks in New York will send the checks on the assenting out of town banks to the Clearing House, where they will be bunched and all the checks on a given out of town institution sent to that institution, which will remit by New York draft in payment. The National Banks in Plainfield have had a plan in operation for several months, whereby their checks were payable at par through the New York Federal Reserve Bank, and this arrangement that goes into effect tomorrow will give the Trust Companies here the same privilege, so that Plainfielders may in future maintain their bank accounts in Plainfield, with the assurance that their checks will be acceptable at par practically everywhere.

FRENCH HOLDING GERMAN TRENCH

Fierce Artillery Fire Fails to Drive Them From Captured Ground.

AMERICAN SHIP SUNK

Hits Mine Off Cape Orloff—Captain and Three Members of Crew Hurt by Explosion—Second Austrian Protest Mailed to Wilson.

Paris, Sept. 30.—French war statement:

"The activities of the enemy in the Artois district were confined to a very violent bombardment of our new positions to the east of Souchez. In Champagne we have gained a foothold at numerous points in the trenches constituting the second position of German defense to the west of the hill of Tahure and to the west of the Navarin farm. At the latter point certain parts of our troops broke the German line and resolutely advanced farther, but their progress could not be maintained because of heavy artillery fire and very violent firing on their flank. Our troops hold firmly the captured points in the second line of the enemy. To south of Ripont we have enlarged and completed the conquest of the first German position by capturing an important point of support known as the Fort La Desaite. Despite atmospheric conditions, which were most unfavorable, our airship squadron yesterday bombarded the lines of communication behind the German front. Shells were thrown down on the stations at Vallee De La Suippe, Bazencourt, Warneriville, Pont Faverger and St. Hilaire Le Petit, as well as on a column near Sommepy."

American Ship Sunk.

Washington, Sept. 30.—A message received at the State Department today from Ambassador Marye and the American Consul at Petrograd reported the blowing up and sinking, near Archangle, Russia, of the American vessel Vincent. Consular advices say the Vincent struck a mine off Cape Orloff, White Sea, to north of Russia. Capt. Andrerman Anes and three members of his crew were seriously injured and were taken to a hospital in Archangel, where they are being treated. The ship was formerly of British registry but recently changed to American registry and was on her first voyage from this country to Archangel.

Another Austrian Protest.

The State Department today was informed that a second Austrian protest against the sale of munition of war to the Allies from the United States is on its way to this government. It was mailed from Vienna. The protest, it is understood, conforms to the general tenor of the first Austrian note.

Germans Admit Reverses.

Berlin, by wireless, Sept. 30.—Today's report of the General Staff admits that the French troops have inflicted reverses upon the Germans in the western theatre of war. The French have penetrated the German lines, it states, and have also captured hill No. 19, near Massiges, in Champagne region. Mining operations by the Germans against the British troops are proceeding successfully, however. South of Ypres, positions held by two companies of English troops were blown up. Successes for the Germans in the eastern theatre are reported by the General Staff. It says that east of Smorgonje on the Vilna front, 1,000 prisoners were captured, with some guns.

Another German War Loan.

Amsterdam, Sept. 30.—Dr. Von Bethmann Hollweg, the German imperial chancellor, has left Dresden for Budapest. The chancellor has held numerous conferences with officers of banking and other corporations and with the officials of various municipalities. He has decided to issue the third war loan at the end of October. The rate of interest will be six per cent. and the conditions the same as for the previous loan.

Switzerland Is Cut Off.

New York, Sept. 30.—The Western Union Telegraph Company announces that the French administration advises that on account of military necessities the acceptance of private messages from anywhere destined to Switzerland is provisionally suspended and that messages for the continent transmitted through France will be subjected to a delay of forty-eight hours.

OLD HURT TELLS HIM OF SIMILAR ACCIDENT

Louis Block Believes He Felt Train Hit His Friends.

Louis L. Block, of Orange street, Dunellen, is wondering whether or not he had advance notice through some mystic source of the accident of Joseph Cashin and Charles Fuchs last Saturday. The two men were injured when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by a Philadelphia flyer at Lincoln crossing.

Thirteen years ago Mr. Block experienced a similar accident at the same place, and as a result he carries a crippled shoulder. He was thrown more than thirty feet into the air when the train hit him and considers himself fortunate that he had a shoulder to bother about.

Saturday afternoon, Mr Block was assisting his son, Louis, Jr., who recently entered the meat business in Metuchen. The Cashin accident occurred at 4:45 and just at that time Mr. Block's shoulder began to pain him severely. The pain was greater than at any time since he left his bed after the accident thirteen years ago. It was so intense that he was forced to drop two chops that he held in his right hand, and it continued for half an hour. He is wondering whether or not his pain was connected with the other accident.

Mr. Cashin and Mr. Fuchs were not seriously injured The former is still confined to his bed at his Plainfield home, and Mr. Fuchs has developed an injury to his back, but it is believed he will be out in a short time.

ATTENDED SURPRISE PARTY.

The following from the borough were present at a surprise party given to C. O. Deacon, of Clinton avenue, Tuesday evening in honor of his forty-fifth birthday: Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Dusel, Mayor and Mrs. E. B. Latham, Dr. and Mrs. Tuttle, Mr. and Mrs. J. Z. Kelly and Mrs. Frank R. Wynkoop. The surprise was a complete one, and a most enjoyable time was had by all. The program included the game of "500," music, dancing and whistling by J. Z. Kelly, the local artist. Elaborate refreshments were served during the evening.

Contractors Kirchner and Wormser have been awarded the painting contract of the new Walter M. Fowler house on Washington avenue.

AFTERMATH OF THE DUNELLEN PRIMARIES

Considerable Political Gossip is Heard Throughout the Borough.

Considerable comment is still heard about the heavy Democratic primary vote of Tuesday in the First district, where 174 Democratic ballots were cast out of a total registry of all parties of 376. Fifty Republicans voted in this district, making the total number of votes for the district 224. In the Second district the voting was light in comparison, only 91 ballots being cast out of a registry of 256. Sixty of the ballots were Democratic Mayor Latham only polled ninety votes, but the reason for that was that while the Democratic party supported him, his name was not printed on their ticket, and the result was that the majority of the Democrats who voted did not bother about filling his name in the blank space. All of the Democrats who took the trouble to fill in this space voted for Mayor Latham with the exception of two. Those two voted for John McMahon and Vincent Monahan.

A story is in circulation following the victory of J. H. L. Peters over Judge David S. Campbell, for the nomination of assessor, to the effect that Mr. Peters, who has been seeking the postmastership, has withdrawn in favor of Willard N. Apgar, the Democratic leader.

With former Mayor William Wyckoff, by his decisive defeat on Tuesday, as good as out of the race for the postmastership, and J. H. L. Peters withdrawing, the contest for the prized appointment is now between Willard N. Apgar and G. Sumner Smith. Many boroughites think that Mr. Apgar, with the support of the rank and file of the Democratic party, will be the one to get the plum, but there are a few who think that Mr. Smith, through his acquaintance with Joseph Tumulty, President Wilson's secretary, will be the lucky man.

Somerville

Sargent Brothers, a large lumber company, is likely to change hands within the next few days. John E. Dunn, of Plainfield, is negotiating to take over the A. V. Sargent interest and the Bernhard Meyer stock. It was thought that Gunzelman and Cramer, lumber dealers and contractors, of this place, were to take an interest. Bernhard Meyer will retain his interest for a short time. Mr. Dunn entered the lumber business with D. K. Craig and Co. and later remained with Sargent Brothers when the Craig Co. interest was taken over by the Sargents. Mr. Dunn left Somerville about fourteen years ago and associated himself with the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Company in Plainfield. It is said that he was negotiating several years ago to become associated with Boice, Runyon Company, of Plainfield.

Ben Zadovic was arrested last evening by Detective George D. Totten on Franklin street. Zadovic was indicted by the April grand jury for having promised to marry Mary Yanskoski, but broke his promise and left this part of the country. Zadovics is now in the county jail.

The barn dance given by St. Joseph's church at Millstone last evening attracted about forty-five people from here. Oberbrunner's orchestra furnished music.

Miss Helen Gernert will open her dancing school in the Somerset Hall Building October 9.

Walter F. Scott left yesterday for the Panama Exposition.

John Kline returned last Tuesday from the Pacific Coast, where he attended the Panama Exposition.

Frank Taylor, former manager of the Somerville theatre, was here yesterday visiting old friends.

Mrs. A. W. Mack and son will leave in a few days for New York, where they will spend the winter.

Mrs. Alfred Renskorf and daughter will take up their winter residence in New York city in the near future.

L. A. BELLIS SAYS HE WILL ABIDE BY PRIMARY

Lewis A. Bellis, the defeated Democratic candidate for councilman at Somerville, has decided to accept the vote at the primary and not run independently or on the Progressive ticket as reported. William F. Wright received the nomination with a total vote of 196; William Hardgrove, the other Democratic candidate, receiving 186, while Mr. Bellis received 169.

There was a report that Mr. Bellis intended running on an independent or Progressive ticket, but he announced today that he had no such idea, being willing to abide by the decision of the primary.

How to Keep Our City Moving

We must keep moving. A city booms only so long as its manufacturers and merchants keep moving. The wheels of every line of endeavor must be kept turning if the city is going to develop, and what is of deeper concern than the wheels of Plainfield kept turning?

Should every one who has the interest of Plainfield close at heart buy goods from our merchants, the benefits all around can easily be seen. Thousands of dollars that would otherwise go out of the city will be kept circulating here and contribute a big share towards making a bigger and busier Plainfield.

A dollar spent at home will keep that dollar at home and all will share in the profits.

A Galley o' Fun!

ANTEDILUVIAN.

Said Noah: "Wife, I've had a dream—
(No, I'm not always dreaming!)
I dreamed the sea was everywhere,
The sea was all a running stream,
And there was darkness in the air,
And not a star was gleaming
Above the waters black and bare;
And everything was drowned—Don't stare!
(No, only weak tea, Waila!)

"So, wife, I'm going to build a ship;
For if this dreadful dream comes true,
And mountains in the water slip,
As all last night I saw them do—
(I've told you twice 't was ten, not two,
When I came indoors, Waila!)

"You doubt if I could build a boat,
And if I did, it would not float?
You're always doubting, Waila!
Why, on the Tigris, when a lad—
O no, it is not quite so bad! ....
No, I am not so old as that,
I have not yet reached forty score!
Were I a thousand, less or more,
How old would you be?—Just a bluff?
Well, then, you needn't be so blunt!
Not necessarily a punt ....

'Of course I'll try to keep inshore. . .
I know the water may be rough . .
A few; there'll not be room enough:
We'll take those two nice girls next door . . . .
. . . . Well. I'll be blessed!
They are not worse than all the rest!
That is not true,—I never swore!
O, let them drown, then, if you won't!
You and the children,—no, no more. .
It does seem selfish! Take the cat?
'Twould be unlucky if we don't,—
We never should see Ararat!

"Yes, take the pony and the cow,
And all the animals you wish.
(And leave the poor girls out, I vow!)
O, no, I would not take the fish! . . .
Please pack my new reel, Waila!"

Maude—No. But what of it?

PRIVILEGED CLASS.

More Than a Hundred People Will Be Selling the Gloves

It is a larger, better glove sale than we have ever had—in the face of difficult conditions. Grenoble, the old, old glove city of the world, is working only about a fifth of its usual capacity. Fine imported gloves are growing scarce today, and there is every prospect that they will be even scarcer.

Only by the cordial co-operation of a large importer, who handles nothing but the highest qualities, have we been able to procure the large quantities we needed.

The sale will continue until all the gloves are put into the hands that we are sure are waiting for such good things.

It may last one, two, three, four days—even a week.

First choice tomorrow—everything you want—every size—fresh, unhandled.

Extra salespeople, enlarged selling space—the Women's Glove Shop, the entire Main Aisle, Main floor, Old Building; outposts at the Subway Entrance, New Building.

"SAFETY FIRST" TO BE TAUGHT IN SCHOOLS

Dangers and How to Meet Them Will Be Part of Instruction.

Trenton, Sept. 30.—"Safety first" as a principle to be taught in the public school of the State is the subject of a monograph just issued by the New Jersey Department of Public Instruction entitled, "The Teaching of Hygiene and Safety." It is a finely printed, graphically illustrated book of 156 pages, filled from cover to cover with information designed to educate children and grown-ups in the interest of the prevention of accidents and the loss of life, thereby. The booklet is one of a series being issued by the Department of Education for the improvement of teaching and general education.

Besides the general chapters on hygiene, sanitation and similar subjects, the volume devotes considerable space to the consideration of dangers and how to meet them, such as dangers from fire, on the street, on railroads, at home, in school, etc. The Legislature of 1913 enacted a statute making it obligatory to teach safety in the public schools.

REV. CHAS. FISKE RECEIVES BLESSING FROM CARDINAL

Baltimore, Sept. 30.—Cardinal Gibbons has sent his blessing and congratulations to the Rev. Charles Fiske, formerly of New Brunswick, who will be consecrated Protestant Episcopal Bishop of central New York today.

As there is no cathedral in the central New York diocese, the consecration will take place here in the Church of St. Michael and All Angels, of which the Rev. Dr. Fiske has been rector for several years.

Bishop Olmstead, of New York, and the Bishops of Washington, Georgia, Maryland and Fond du Lac will conduct the services.

MANY MEN AND BOYS ATTEND SPECIAL SERVICE

The midweek prayer meeting at First Baptist church last night was largely a men and boys' meeting, there being an attendance of half a hundred men and twenty-five boys, besides the members of the other sex, who were as much welcomed as ever. Spiritually the meeting was a great success.

The Rev. Dr. Philip Strong, the pastor, had charge, and besides remarks made by him, Arthur M. Harris, superintendent of the Bible school; Francis E. Bach and Ernest Powlison spoke. The latter two are scoutmasters. The remarks of all the speakers were designed principally for the men and boys. It was noticeable that several young men who are to cast their first vote this fall were present last night and took part.

PERSONAL.

J. Evarts Tracy, a former resident of West Eighth street, who has been quite ill at Muhlenberg Hospital, is reported to be a little improved.

Mrs. Alexander Mallinson, of this city, who sailed last week for California, is expected to reach her destination early in October.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Vermeule and family, of Jackson avenue, the borough, are planning to spend the month of October in Maine.

William Sandford, of East Seventh street, has returned home after spending some time at Dingman's Ferry.

Mr. and Mrs. Blanchard Fosgate, of 820 Park avenue, have returned after spending four months in Chicago, Ill., and the West.

LABOR FAVORS BIG LOAN.

Washington, Sept. 30.—Labor is distinctly favorable to the Allies loan. This is the unqualified announcement of Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor. It means he says, a larger purchasing power in the United States from which labor will benefit immensely.

GASOLINE GOES UP.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 30.—An advance of one cent a gallon in the price of gasoline has been announced by the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana. The price of coal oil has been raised one-half cent a gallon and of naphtha one and one-half cents.

ZEPPELINS SIGHTED.

Amsterdam, Sept. 30.—Six Zeppelins flying westward were sighted near Aerschot today, the route then being followed would take them to the English coast near Dover.

PRISONERS INCREASED.

Berlin, by wireless, Sept. 30.—British prisoners taken in the Arras region have been increased by 24 officers and 2,194 men, the War Office announced today.

CROSS-CONTINENT BY WIRELESS TELEPHONE

New York to San Francisco Message Sent Last Night by Officials.

New York, Sept. 30.—Yesterday afternoon the human voice traveled across the continent from the Atlantic to the Pacific without the aid of wire, by means of wireless telephone apparatus and methods developed by the engineers of the Bell System. President T. N. Vail, of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, sitting in the offices of the company at 15 Dey street, New York city, spoke into a Bell telephone, connected by wires of the Bell System with the wireless tower at Arlington, Va., and his words were transmitted by wireless telephony to Mare Island, near San Francisco, Cal. This latest and most remarkable triumph of the telephonic art was under the direct supervision of John J. Carty, chief engineer of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, who has been in San Francisco for several weeks. He received President Vail's first messages at Mare Island, and replied to them and repeated them back to Arlington by wire. The demonstration was held by permission of the Navy authorities at the radio stations, and the experiments were witnessed and verified by them.

The transcontinental wireless telephone employs radically new ideas in wireless working which have been invented and developed by the general engineering staff of the A. T. & T. Co. working to this end by direction of President T. N. Vail. But it is interesting to note that in starting this first message on its flight through the ether to the Pacific coast President Vail used a Bell telephone designed for wire working.

Prior to these wireless telephone messages from New York, a large number of wireless telephone messages were received from the Naval Radio Station at Arlington, Va. Words, phrases and sentences were heard by the listeners at Mare Island, notwithstanding the fact that the "static" disturbances were of an unusually violent nature.

When asked what he thought would be the limit of this new system of his company, Mr. Carty stated that he had no doubt whatever that when the necessary apparatus is installed that it would be possible to talk from New York to Tokio, Japan, using the transcontinental line from New York to San Francisco and wireless across the Pacific.

The use of such long distance wireless telephone communication in naval or military operations is still in an undeveloped state, but it is expected valuable use can be made of this wonderful demonstration, but aside from such considerations the department and its officials may well feel proud that they have been interested co-operators in the first practical development of this last march in the wonderful science of radio communication.

PREPARE FOR OBSERVANCE OF "FIRE PREVENTION DAY"

Trenton, Sept. 30.—As an aid in bringing about a proper observance of "Fire Prevention Day," Saturday, October 9, State Commissioner of Education Calvin N. Kendall has asked that a part of Friday, October 8, be devoted to a discussion of fire prevention.

Governor Fielder recently issued a proclamation fixing "Fire Prevention Day" for October 9, the anniversary of the great Chicago fire, and requesting that on that day precautionary measures be taken generally to lessen fire risks. He asked that on that day inflammable trash be removed from premises, heating and lighting fixtures be inspected and repaired, where necessary; that factories and institutions be inspected for fire risks, and that municipal bodies give attention to providing adequate water supplies.

LITERARY

Plant at Least One Tree This Fall.

Farm and Fireside, the national farm paper published in Springfield, O., advises all that can to plant at least one tree this fall. Following it the suggestion:

"Twenty-five dollars would plant and care for at least five elm trees for a ten-year period. It is a moderate estimate to say that, at the end of the second year, a building lot would be worth a hundred dollars more for their presence. At the end of twenty-five years no man who owned the land on which they stood would take a hundred dollars apiece for them. Plant an elm or a maple near your home this fall, and look upon it as a hundred-dollar endowment policy, maturing in 1940, with no premiums after the first year.

"No one thinks of shade trees as a profitable crop, and yet, of all vegetable growth cultivated by the hand of man, none renders a more generous return."

Ghost of the Castle.

Hurstmonceaux castle, about the "restoration" of which antiquaries appear to be perturbed, is strictly a fortified mansion—what Cromwell called "a strong house"—rather than a castle and probably the only English stronghold since Roman times that was built of brick. It once possessed the tallest and noisiest ghost in Europe. He was nine feet high and used to stride along the battlements on stormy nights beating a big drum. Some kill joy skeptic seems to have discovered that this ghost was really a gardener signaling to Pevensey smugglers, with whom he was in league. Whoever he was, he achieved dramatic immortality through being introduced into a play by Addison.—Westminster Gazette.

Hymns at $500 a Yard.

A musical composer once said to Mr. Sankey with more frankness than courtesy that he could write such tunes as those of the "Gospel Hymn Book" by the yard if he were willing to come down to it. "Well, sir, all I have to say is that I am willing to pay $500 a yard either to you or to anybody else for all the tunes you can bring me like those in our 'Gospel Hymn Book.'"

We Tailor Better Than We Write

You will find nothing in Rothberg advertising which you cannot find in the clothes.

You will probably find much in the clothes which is missing from our advertising.

That is because we are more proficient in knowing clothes than in talking about them.

Like a woman's beauty, the style of Rothberg tailoring is easier to distinguish than define.

And like a man in love, we frequently have more thoughts than words to express them.

But you have at least the advantage of knowing that Rothberg Clothes are better than we give them out to be.

DECLARES COLLINS IS NOT A MEMBER

Champlain L. Riley Takes Exceptions to Statement by Anti-Suffragists.

Champlain L. Riley, of North Plainfield, president of the New Jersey Men's League for Woman Suffrage, states in a second open letter to Mrs. E. Yarde Breese that her reply is irrelevant. General Dennis F. Collins is not an officer of the Men's League, and that is the statement by the anti-suffrage speakers to which the Men's League took exception. Mr. Riley's letter follows:

"I wrote you recently asking that you direct the speakers representing your association to cease making the statement that a brewer, General Dennis F. Collins, of Elizabeth, is a vice-president of the New Jersey Men's League for Woman Suffrage, and that he has been asked to contribute to its support, as these statement, repeatedly made by your speakers, are untrue and have frequently been denied by suffrage speakers.

"In reply to my communication you submit some quotations from the Elizabeth Daily Journal and the Elizabeth Evening Times, which show that General Collins had been invited by local suffragists to join a committee organized to hold a meeting in Elizabeth, and that he had joined the committee and had permitted his name to be used as a vice-president of that meeting. Nothing is said by either newspaper to indicate that General Collins had been asked to become a vice-president of the Men's League or to contribute to its support, or that he had done either of these things.

"If you have evidence tending to justify your speakers in making the statements to which I object, why do you not submit it instead of diverting attention to irrelevant matters?"

NEW YORK FANS HAVE ENOUGH OF BASEBALL

New York, Sept. 30.—There will be no intercity baseball series in Greater New York this year. This was decided yesterday at a conference of owners of the New York Nationals, New York Americans and Brooklyn Nationals, held during the ball game at the Polo Grounds.

The club owners, it was stated, had come to the conclusion that New York has had enough of baseball for one season.

MORDECAI BROWN SUES CINCINNATI FOR $1,250

Chicago, Sept. 30.—Mordecai Brown, former star pitcher of the Chicago National League team, and later with the Reds, yesterday filed an attachment suit to recover $1,250 which he alleges is due him from the Cincinnati National League management.

The suit seeks to attach the gate receipts for the present Cincinnati-Chicago games here, on the charge that Cincinnati owes Brown $1,000 of his contract salary of $6,000 for the season of 1913, with interest at six per cent.

WILL MEET SATURDAY TO FIX SERIES' DETAILS

Cincinnati, Sept. 30.—It was officially announced at the headquarters of the National Baseball Commission yesterday that the commission will meet in New York city at 11 a. m. on next Saturday to take up the details of the world's championship baseball series.

"It is not time to discuss details now," said Chairman August Herrmann yesterday, "and we will not discuss them until both pennant races are definitely decided. No arrangements whatever will be made by the commission until after the meeting next Saturday."

WESTFIELD HIGH SCHOOL HAS SEASON SPORT PASSES

Westfield, Sept. 30.—The Athletic Advisory committee of the Westfield High School has issued 300 season tickets entitling the holders to see all games of football and baseball that will be played by the High School teams. There will be at least seven home games of football and equally as many in baseball.

They will be offered to the High School pupils first and opportunity given them to purchase. This issue will be the only one for all of the games in the two branches of athletics. Admission to basketball games will depend upon the individual games. It is not now planned to issue season tickets for this sport.

PHILADELPHIA SNATCHES NATIONAL LEAGUE FLAG

Philadelphia, Sept. 30.—A wave of wild enthusiasm swept through the business section of this city yesterday with the announcement, flashed on many scoreboards, that the "Phillies" had finally clinched a pennant and would be contenders for the world's baseball title. Old and middle-aged men who have been faithful rooters of the local club for thirty-two years hugged each other, and even total strangers on City Hall Plaza cheered when the electric lights on the scoreboards, which had told the story of the game to a multitude of spectators, flashed Compton's final fruitless swing.

Thousands of fans crowded every available spot on the broad sidewalk around City Hall to view the progress of the game. Cravath's home run, clearing the bases, caused a shout which brought the clerks and others in offices in the vicinity to the windows, and apprised them intuitively that the National League flag had been won for this city.

BIG HORSE SHOW AT FAIR.

San Francisco, Sept. 30.—The big horse show at the Exposition, which will last two full weeks, opened today, and promises to be one of the prominent horse events of the season. Many draft horses are being shown, together with trotters and pacers, thoroughbreds, saddle horses, Morgans, hackneys and Arabians.

HIGH SCHOOL POOL TO BE RE-OPENED

Arrangements for Private Classes Are Now Being Made for the Winter.

The Plainfield High School swimming pool will be opened for public use, beginning next week. The arrangements are much the same as last year. For private classes the rate is four dollars, giving exclusive use of the pool and dressing room for one hour. A competent instructor is provided. Classes are organized for periods of ten weeks, and may be continued if, at the end of the term, no new class wishes the time. Classes will be arranged during the day on Friday and Saturday, and on the evenings of Monday, Thursday and Friday.

For those who are not members of any organized class, the pool will be opened Tuesday, from 7:30 to 9:30 for men, and Wednesdays at the same hours for women. The admission fee for these evenings is 15 cents. These classes will be continued only as long as the patronage seems to warrant.

In all classes women will wear the Annette Kellerman suits, which may be ordered at the school. Men will wear no suits. Arrangements may be made with R. S. Patch at the High School, telephone 2361.

Several classes have already been organized, but a number of periods still remain open.

In organizing a class it is necessary that one person shall be responsible for the class in regard to collections and payments. This person should gather together a sufficient number of his friends to guarantee the fee and then make arrangements for the use of the pool. Experience has shown that classes in which subscriptions are collected in advance on a strictly business basis are the most successful.

AUTO RACING ENTHUSIASTS TO ATTEND ASTOR CUP MEET

Plainfield will be well represented at the Sheepshead Bay automobile classic Saturday afternoon, a number of automobile and train parties having already been arranged for the occasion. The cream of the country's automobile pilots are scheduled to drive high-powered cars, and indications point to an average speed of 100 miles per hour being developed by the leaders.

The elimination trials will be concluded Saturday morning, and a large number of the best-known racers have already qualified their motor-driven steeds for the big events.

WALTER J. TRAVIS QUITS GOLF

Veteran, at Age of Fifty-three, Announces His Retirement.

Walter J. Travis, the metropolitan golf champion, has confirmed the statement that he will not play in any more tournaments.

His has been a marvelous golf career. Born in Australia in 1862, he took up golf late in life and when he was thirty-eight won his first national championship. He is the oldest golfer who ever captured the national title.

So wonderful a player is he that at the age of fifty-three he won the metropolitan crown from a field which included such stars as Travers, Kirkby, Anderson and Marsden. He won the national championship in 1900, 1901 and 1903, the amateur championship of Great Britain in 1904 and the metropolitan championship in 1900, 1902, 1909 and 1915.

Travis was national semifinalist in 1898, 1899, 1906 and 1908, and he was the gold medalist in 1900, 1901, 1902, 1907 and 1908. He has also won the Florida championship on several occasions and the north and south title three times.

NINETEEN YEARS IN MINORS.

Meek With Fourteen Clubs In as Many Different Circuits.

One of the unique records of modern baseball is that attached to the name of Dad Meek, until recently pinch hitter for the Los Angeles Pacific Coast league team. Meek played nineteen years in minor leagues, having been a member of fourteen clubs in as many leagues since his debut in 1896.

Although he fitted in as either catcher or first baseman with fairly satisfactory results, his chief value lay in his ability to hit the ball out in emergencies. Meek's record with the bat shows a grand average of .330 for nineteen years of play, with a high water mark of .419, made in 1897 while a member of the Port Huron club of the Michigan league. But for the fact that he was badly handicapped by his slowness afoot Meek's big bat would have carried him into the big leagues years ago.

Y. M. C. A. BASKETBALLERS GET JUMP ON OTHER TEAMS

Preparatory to picking a team for the City Basketball League circuit prospective candidates for places on the Y. M. C. A. outfit held a limbering-up drill in the association gymnasium last night, a big squad being on hand for the initial workout. While this year's aggregation will probably be formed around a nucleus composed of the strong last year's squad a number of new names have been added to the list and it is expected that some lively competition for places on the quintet will develop.

Dunning, Taylor, Moulton, Newkirk, Burner and other veterans are rounding into shape for the season's campaign and the association team appears to have some pretty formidable stock to use in chasing the league pennant.

PLAINFIELD NOT TO COMPETE IN K. OF C. BOWLING LEAGUE

For the purpose of organizing a 1915-1916 bowling circuit a number of councils from various parts of the State will meet in Columbus Institute, Newark, Sunday afternoon, October 10, at 2 o'clock.

Two years ago, Watchung Council, of this city, was one of the competitors on the Knights of Columbus circuit, but owing to the activity in tournaments on the home alleys the Plainfielders will probably not go into the organization again this year.

100 CANDIDATES FOR HARVARD'S ELEVEN; HAUGHTON MUST MAKE ALMOST NEW TEAM

Left to right: Captain Mahan, Coach Haughton and Soucy.

Coach Haughton of Harvard has a big task on hand. He must build up a team for Harvard out of one hundred raw men, practically all the stars of last year having graduated. Two of his best men are Captain Mahan, who has played brilliantly for two years, and Soucy, who gave a good account of himself in the Harvard-Yale game last fall.

LAST OPPORTUNITY FOR CLUBS TO ENTER BASKETBALL LEAGUE AT MEETING TONIGHT

Meetings of the committee on teams and by-laws will be held in connection with the City Basketball League organization in the Daily Press editorial rooms tonight. A tentative set of rules will be drawn up for presentation to the governing board at next Tuesday night's session.

A number of prospective teams have been interviewed through their managers, and any organization desiring to enter the league may file an application at tonight's meeting. While it will not be necessary to increase the number of teams on the present circuit the management is desirous of giving a last opportunity to all clubs to gain admittance in order to do away with any ill feeling that might develop after a schedule is drawn up.

It is proposed to make the league a representative one and the championship of an unquestionable character.

CAN IT BE THAT HOLY CROSS IS GOING TO RENIG WITHOUT HANDING US THE REASONS?

"Mr. Doyle, are you going to have a football team?"

Plainfield followers of the gridiron spot, and there are several of them, want to know, and want to know immediately, whether or not the Holy Cross club intends to monopolize the football limelight again this year.

For some weeks past we've been hearing a little buzzing from Holy Cross quarters which would indicate that there is some demand on the part of the players for a team. Then, again, the Holy Cross leaders are making no bones of the fact that they held a very unsuccessful meeting in Scotch Plains one night last week. The session was called primarily for discussing season's plans, but it is a known fact that the attendants sought a far different brand of diversion during the evening.

Mr. Doyle, you've given us some good football during the past few autumns and we don't want to say or do anything that will hurt your feelings or tend to discourage you in whatever you might be planning for this season, but the time has come for a decision one way or the other and we are prepared to hear the worst lest we lose our opportunity to break the news with the least chance of losing your life.

There are plenty of footballers in Plainfield but few managers of "Doc" Doyle's calibre and this is the main reason for the scarcity of good eleven around the Queen City. We may appear a little pessimistic but we're of the opinion that without the guiding hand of Doyle even such stars as are enrolled in the Holy Cross club would cease to shine ere long. Therefore, to have football we've got to have Doyle.

Last season was not all that could be expected along financial lines and the management had its hands full trying to squirm out of tight holes during the winter months. To have a football eleven we've got to have better support than we've been getting, and in view of the temporary letup in general interest it might be well to shelf the pastime for a year at least.

SACRIFICES WITH NONE ON.

Way Fan Sizes Up Murphy With Major League Barnstormers.

Eddie Murphy, the former outfielder of the Philadelphia Athletics, who is now a member of the White Sox, tells this one about a critic: The Pacific-Hawaiian barnstormers were playing at Mandon, S. D., last fall on the day that Grover Alexander struck out twenty-one American league batsmen. The teams played at an adjoining town named Forsythe the next day.

A fan in Forsythe laughingly showed the players a postcard he had received from a friend in Mandon. It read:

"Dear Pete—Don't pay money to see them bushers play. I seen them pull awful things and make it a farse over hear. Why, I even seen one guy named Murphy try to sackrifice without nobody on base."

Cravath After Freeman's Record.

C. C. Cravath, the center fielder of the Philadelphia National league team, may surpass Buck Freeman's record of twenty-five home runs for a season.

BETTER ARMS IN OLD DAYS.

Outfielders Used to Nail More Runners With Some Great Pegs.

Statistics show that the outfielders back in the eighties and nineties had the shade on the present day outfielders in making assists. The best record in number of assists made in one season in the majors in recent years, or since 1900, was stacked up by Harry Niles, then with the St. Louis team in 1906. Harry nailed thirty-nine men from the outfield, getting them at different bases.

Mike Mitchell, while with the Cincinnati team, equaled the mark set by Niles, heading off thirty-nine men by his power to shoot a ball from the farthest corner of the outfield with sufficient accuracy and speed to get his man. Ty Cobb, Joe Birmingham, Tris Speaker, Joe Jackson and Milan all have made especially good records in this direction and lead their respective teams in throwing out runners from the remote corners of the outer garden. In his day Fielder Jones was a past master in pegging the ball from the outfield and nipped many runners.

ROBERT FAIRBAIRN TO SHOW CLYDSDALES

Notable Exhibition to Be Held at Bryn Mawr, Pa., Tomorrow.

Through the co-operation of wealthy amateurs who have taken up the breeding of Clydesdale draught horses there will be a notable exhibition at the Bryn Mawr Horse Show tomorrow morning, beginning at 10 o'clock. Among the exhibitors are W. W. Atterbury, vice-president of the Pennsylvania Railroad; William Woodward, president of the Hanover National Bank, in New York; Robert A. Fairbairn, vice-president of the National Horse Show Association, in New York; Joseph Larocque, of Bernardsville, and Conyngham Brothers, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa. These and others have made fifty-eight entries in the Clydesdale classes. While there have been larger shows of the Scottish draught horses in this country, it is believed that the exhibition will be more select than any yet seen in the United States.

Nearly every horse entered is a prize winner here or in Scotland, where most of the animals were bred. Among the celebrities is Harviestoun Baroness, probably the most valuable Clydesdale mare now living. She is distinguished as the only mare that ever won the championship at the national horse shows of Scotland, Canada and the United States, and she did this in one year. Her first colt was sold for $5,000 as a yearling last season by Mr. Fairbairn to F. Lothrop Ames, of Boston. Other noted horses entered are Mr. Conyngham's stallion, Fyvie Baron, champion at the National Highland Show, in Scotland, and Mr. Larocque's King of All, reserve champion at the last International Live Stock Exposition in Chicago. All of Mr. Atterbury's entries are imported horses not yet shown in this country.

SOUR GRAPES.

There was one man of great gifts and large promise, the majority leader former Judge Runyon. At the beginning the leader looked very much like a man of real spirit and courage, but it was not long in oozing out of him and the session was not far advanced when he, too, was lined up with those whose spines were soft and wabbly.—Charles R. Bacon, in article on the men in the last New Jersey Legislature in the the Philadelphia Record.

Of course we don't know, but perhaps Judge Runyon began to "ooze" at the time that he refused to vote to perpetuate Mr. Bacon's job as head of the Bureau of Shell Fisheries. Had he done so he would have violated the principal pledge in the Republican platform, for more economy in the conduct of State affairs. Judge Runyon was head and shoulders above every other man in the Assembly, and the three Union county men were so much stronger than the other fifty-seven men in the House, that any criticism such as that which is made by Mr. Bacon is entirely unjustified. The personal animus is certainly there.

ASK YOUR CANDIDATE.

Now that all of the candidates for General Assembly from the State have been nominated and are squarely before the people it would be well to demand an expression from them on public matters of importance that will come up at the next session of the Assembly. The voters should demand that each man, no matter whether a Democrat or Republican, express his views on national preparedness, for one thing, and pledge his support to an increase in the militia appropriations if he favors this policy. There is sure to be an effort to improve the New Jersey militia at the next legislative session and those who believe that the safety of the State demands such action can exert their influence between now and election to better advantage than any other time. Ask your candidate how he stands on this and other public matters.

WHAT FOR?

New York now has the fastest automobile race track in all the world. Next Saturday the greatest race drivers of all time will compete in a death-daring trial to set a new record for the fastest time made by man in motor driven machine. Oldfield, Resta, Burman and others have made more than 100 miles per hour in practice spins. They promise two miles a minute, and the winner may have to do even better than that. Some of them will pay the price that is exacted by the God of speed, but it will be great sport. And we wonder what European nations are fighting for.

An automobile statistician of authority is responsible for the statement that a total of $13,259,440 was paid in fees to the government by the owners of motor cars during the first six months of 1915. And this does not include fines.

A movement to organize a Newspaper Writers' Union in Plainfield fell through because the organizer didn't bring a nest-egg for the striker's food fund.

Not being able to even get real motion pictures of the war, New Yorkers will throng the new Sheepshead Bay automobile track next Saturday.

Forty thousand Germans were drowned through a successful Russian strategy. Yet the allied powers still howl for a "humane" war.

That Connecticut man who caught a four-legged fish with a head like a monkey's, might tell us what brand of bait he imbibed.

Archibald is here, but we have heard no wails from the woodshed as yet.

GRAND ARMY MEN PASS IN REVIEW

Survivors of the Civil War March Under Folds of Faded Battle Flags.

Men of the Grand Army of the Republic from every State in the Union passed in review in Washington yesterday in celebration of the grand review of the Union army of fifty years ago. Under the folds of faded and shot-torn battle flags they marched as they marched half a century ago, when they were fresh from many hard-fought battlefields.

Fifty years ago there were 200,000 veterans in the line on the first day of the review. Yesterday the ranks were thin, for many of those who fought under Grant and Sherman, Sheridan and Thomas, and a host of others of the nation's heroes have answered the long roll-call. Many of those who were in the line yesterday marched with the feeble, faltering step that age bestows, but with hearts as devoted to the Union cause as they were when the sound of Fort Sumter's guns echoed around the world.

What was then the greatest military pageant of the age was held in Washington on May 23 and 24, 1865, after the Army of the Potomac had returned home from Southern battlefield, subsequent to Lee's surrender at Appomatox.

TO SHOW UP DELINQUENTS.

Washington, Sept. 30.—Secretary McAdoo has threatened to make public tomorrow the names of those who were aided by government money to get home from Europe and who have failed to pay back what was advanced to them. This drastic action has brought many of the delinquents to account, but there are some yet to be heard from. Secretary McAdoo may go still further, and ask the department to begin suits against such as are able to make repayment. Congress appropriated $2,500,000 for the relief of Americans caught in Europe by the war, and the resolution provided that all who were financially able to reimburse the government should do so.

POLICE BAND AT THE FAIR.

San Francisco, Sept. 30.—The police department band, of Seattle, has reached the Exposition and will take part in the Washington and Seattle Day celebrations, set for tomorrow and Saturday. The policemen horn-tooters are waking up the city and the Exposition. Ragtime and classical music, with the varieties in between, are on their repertoire, and a high note is handled as gracefully as Sousa's men can handle a "billy."

Y. M. C. A. MOTION PICTURES.

The motion pictures to be shown at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday will include the following subjects: "The Gorges of the Tran" (colored); "The Praying Mantis" (a nature study); "Malaga, Southern Spain," (colored); "Industrial;" "The House Divided" (two-reel drama in colors); "Pathe News" and "Romiet and Julio" (comic).

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

The Nails

SINCE prehistoric days the nails have been without an indispensable function. About all we use them for to-day is (1) opening penknives; (2) pinching out blackheads; (3) pushing needles through trouser bands; (4) scratching wherever it may itch, and, on great provocation, (5) defending one self against an infuriated sister.

Fingernails are a nuisance and a menace to health on the one hand; but on the other hand they furnish some people an occupation—manicuring. On both hands they are a boon to nervous individuals who work off lots of superfluous energy chewing them. We have it on the authority of a distinguished correspondent that nail-biting can be cured by painstaking attention to manicuring; the idea being that a smoothly trimmed and polished nail offers no subconscious temptation to the teeth.

An acute illness leaves a transverse marking or furrow upon the nail, due to a feebler output of matrix when the system is weak.

Persons whose metabolism is paving the way for joint disease notice that the nails are very brittle.

Paronchia, or inflammation and suppuration at the edge or base of the nail, may be an acute infection or a chronic eczema or acquired or hereditary luetic infection.

Ringworm of the nail is an occasional condition and an exceedingly obstinate one to treat, unless by autogenous vaccines, which seem to be very effective for ringworm of scalp, beard or nail. The nail is raised, thickened, split and contorted.

Ordinary "run around" is usually a streptococcus infection. A good treatment is a light wrapping of gauze soaked in a solution containing one ounce of aluminum acetate in ten ounces saturated solution of boric acid, the whole wet dressing covered by a loose rubber finger-cot. Severe cases require incision and drainage.

White specking or marking on the nail is due to air bubbles in the nail. It does not indicate or foretell any illness.

Ingrowing nail is caused by degenerate footgear. Pointed shoes, narrow shoes and shoes with diverging inside sole lines make ingrowing nail. Mild cases are helped by narrow strips of adhesive plaster so applied as to draw the sore skin edge away from the nail. If there is granulation tissue in the furrow ("proud flesh"), it must be cut away, burned away with lunar caustic, or shrivelled with alum or other astringent. Appliances other than correct shoes are useless for ingrowing nail. Bad cases require surgical relief at the hands of a doctor.

That poison which the ancients made of fingernails was undoubtedly the cultured microbes the then worthies carried, as do their modern descendants, in the furrow beneath the nails.

VIGILANCE COMMITTEES

THE vigilance committee was an institution which flourished in California at a time when justice was not only blind, but was paralyzed in both arms and had a wooden leg.

When gold was discovered in California in 1849, thousands of people arose from various places and hustled out to the coast. Some of these were estimable gentlemen and others were hyenas who had degenerated a good deal.

There was a great deal of free-hand murdering in California in those days and large numbers of alleged humans took a pride in boring a hole through a total stranger in a workmanlike manner. In the course of time San Francisco acquired quite a number of citizens who felt dull and listless all day if they did not shoot a man before breakfast.

There was some government of course, but not enough to interfere with anyone's pleasure—about as much as there is in Terre Haute, Ind., during an election. The quick-tempered citizens with the convulsive trigger-fingers went on shooting people for breathing the air in their vicinity until something had to be done about it.

At this point a large number of citizens organized a scientific society. The object of the society was to discover whether a gunman and general desperado would remain healthy after being hung from a telegraph pole by the neck.

A large number of experiments were carried out with great enthusiasm. At length they were discontinued for two reasons. In the first place, the society came to the reluctant conclusion that hanging a desperado by the neck was invariably fatal. In the second place there were no desperadoes left to hang.

There were no desperadoes left to hang

Vigilance societies are a little out of fashion now, but a modification of the old organization might be very useful in every American city which is cluttered up with inspectors who don't inspect. If Chicago had had a vigilance society poking around into conditions for the last few years and pointing out things with long bony forefingers the Eastland would probably have carried 500 people out into the lake last July in perfect safety.

Views Of The Press

The Czar And The Grand Duke

SOMETHING hieratic, symbolic, Byzantine, clings to the Czar of All the Russias. To multitudes of his people he is a kind of sacred icon, if not a divinity. As in years that outrun memory the chief of the clan, the head of the horde, the King, led his wild followers to battle, so Nicholas II. puts himself at the front of the armies of the nation. A stimulation of patriotism, a half-religious fervor creeping through all that mighty mass of men and races, may be stirred thereby. A fine bit of decoration, a good stroke of business.

But as the Czar takes his place in the pageant, the Russian hero of the war, the victor of Galicia, the captor of Przemsyl, the consummate captain who has eluded again and again the Austro-German efforts to envelop him, whose masterly skill in a retreat forced on him by no fault of his own has won the admiration of military experts—the Grand Duke Nicholas—is packed off to the Caucasus. The best Russian General, in the opinion of many enlightened judges the best General of the war, is disgraced, demoted, and his place is taken by the imperial cockade. The implications are sinister. Behind all the explicable want of munitions is there the old welter of incompetence and graft, so sickening in the war with Japan? That, for Russia, was a little war, after all. The inert immensity was not greatly moved. In intrigue, inefficiency, and corruption it was a giant war. In this incomparably more vital hour of Russian destiny has the habit, the good old "Oriental" tradition, of bilking the Government and pursuing the swag survived?

Virtue clucked happily when certain Grand Dukes of the old style were detected in grand-ducal plundering. Now a Grand Duke is punished for being great in victory and greater in defeat. A dark or dubious outlook on Russia and for Russia. On the other hand, the imperial Commander-in-chief may be presumed to know what is good for his imperial bacon. "As I cannot die at the head of my army, I lay my sword at the feet of your Majesty." This patter of the ruined Napoleon the Little must occur to Nicholas II. If he takes the form and exterior of military command he takes the responsibility, he must be confident of triumph. He cannot afford a Sedan. For in spite of lingering "Old World" symbolism and superstition there is a Russia which might add a civil to the military débâcle of its Little Father.—New York Times.

The Doctor's Bill

Q. Some time ago I went to see a physician and followed out a course of treatment prescribed by him. Nothing was said at that time about his charges. He has just presented a bill which, it seems to me, is exorbitant. Can I be compelled to pay?

A. The physician is entitled to make a reasonable charge for his services. Just what constitutes a reasonable charge must depend on the circumstances. Many things are to be considered, such as the physician's skill and experience and his reputation and standing. Other elements to be taken into account are the question as to the difficulty of successfully handling the case, the time and labor involved and the customary fees received by men, ordinarily proficient, in the same profession.

Theatre Tax

Q. Please inform me whether a state has the right to impose a license or tax upon a theatre.

A. Yes.

A Corporation's By-Law Rights

Q. Does a corporation have the right to enact and adopt any by-laws it pleases?

A. No. It may make such by-laws as are not inconsistent with its charter or the purposes and objects of their corporation and such as do not conflict with the law or with any legal duty.

Both After The Job

Q. Where there is an election contest, two men claiming the same office, would it be possible to enjoin the payment of salary to one who is attempting to exercise the duties of the office?

A. Some courts have held that an injunction, in a case of this sort, would lie. The decisions are not uniform, however. Sometimes the statutes regulate matters of this sort.

Property Liable For Debts

Q. Is all of a decedent's property liable for his debts?

A. Yes, as a general rule.

Contract—In Writing, Or Printed

Q. May a contract be partly in writing and partly printed? A. Yes.

The Eight-Hour Law

Q. Are there eight-hour laws in many of the states? Are such laws constitutional?

A. There are eight-hour laws in a number of states. Sometimes these laws are constitutional and sometimes they are not.

The Date Of A Deed

Q. Where the date of a deed is blurred or cannot be read, would it be possible to resort to outside evidence to prove the real date. A. Yes.

The Life Line

BY LAURA KIRKMAN

The Girl Who "Wishes She Were a Man"

If you notice, she seldom says this to women; she says it before men. She says it to attract. It is one of the vivid flags she waves to arrest their attention. And men know this. They know that if she earnestly wished to be a man, she would know that talking about it wouldn't do any good. Anyway we don't shout our real disappointments from the housetops. "Just think of not having to fuss over one's hair!" she sighs, lightly—thereby directing the masculine eye to her mass of tresses. "And oh, how joyful it would be not to have a lot of skirts to get in the way!" Here the masculine eye is expected to appreciate her smart gown. "And yet," she goes on foolishly, "I'd hate to have to shave!" And she seems to think she's voicing an original idea. She doesn't suspect that her listener has probably heard the same thing before—from girls of her type. She's the common, or garden variety.

Current Poetry

The High Brow Magazine

The price of it is thirty-five.
That is too much? Why, man alive
You don't appreciate high art
Shown in the advertising part.
Nine-tenths of it is of this class,
Just one conglomerated mass
Of auto cars and patent soap
And phonographs and other dope.
Of course, there's readin' to it, too,
And when you come to glance it through
You'll find an article or so,
Upon the nicest way to grow
Alfalfa in the arid west,
Or how to save your coin the best
Of course, a lot of that is bluff,
And you don't have to read the stuff.
And it's a dollar to a cent
You wouldn't know just what it meant,
But you're rewarded if you wait;
The ads are always simply great.

Snap Shots

By Jay E. House

Without going into the moral ethics of the matter, the fact remains that the only way the average man can get anything out of politics is by selling his vote.

The man who neglects to look in the glass in the morning can achieve the same general depressing effect by gazing intently at his photograph.

No matter how many free blades you get with a safety razor, it isn't enough.

The first thing a man looks for is a place to sit down. The first thing a woman looks for is a mirror.

A woman can change her name at any time, but a man is compelled to wait until the legislature convenes.

A man should not be judged entirely by his ability to assimilate punishment. His attitude in the face of victory is the better test.

The man who refuses to do it in politics will often "grandstand" a little for the delectation of the women.

One of the recent poems is called The Wife of the Red Haired Man. If you are making a crazy quilt this undoubtedly belongs in it.

In Missouri recently a cat ate canned salmon and died. You now know what to do with the canned salmon.

To avoid argument it may be conceded that football is more brutal than prize fighting. But neither is as brutal as women are to other women.

BELGIANS NEED AMERICAN HELP

Situation Presents More Serious Aspect Than it Did Last Year.

MANY ARE STARVING

Over 9,000,000 People Are Depending Entirely on Provisions Being Sent to Them From This Country Through a Commission.

If the American people believe their work in Belgium is over, or even partially over, they will do well as soon as possible to relieve their minds of that impression. Not only are there 7,000,000 Belgian mouths and 2,000,000 French ones in the "occupied zone" into which nothing enters save what is provided by America, but the situation in some ways presents more serious aspects than it did this time last year.

Lindon Wallace Bates, vice-chairman and New York director of the Commission for Relief in Belgium, at 11 Broadway, said it would be several weeks before it could be definitely known just how much it will be necessary for Americans to do during the coming winter. Much depends on the Belgian harvest. But it is certain that the Commission, which has undertaken to supply the Belgian non-combatants with food until the war ends, has before it perhaps the most arduous part of its work.

Perhaps the most arduous part because, although the first enthusiastic wave of sympathy for the stricken country, which made the collection of donations little more than the sending of acknowledgments, has had a year to lose its original ardor, the task is just as big as ever.

Sixty thousand tons of food have to be sent every month, and over 1,500,000 people fed who have no means to pay for anything. This means a minimum of $3,000,000 a month to be raised, and it is not expected the Commission's present funds can last much longer without substantial replenishment.

Whether a campaign for donations of the size of that engineered last year will be necessary has not yet been decided. The entire Belgian crop is taken over by the Commission, and until it is learned exactly how much the peasants have been able to raise, in spite of the whizzing of rifle bullets and shrapnel over their wheat fields, nothing definite can be planned.

In one respect the work will be much easier than it was last year. The organization of the Commission is complete and well-nigh perfect. Its committee has become accustomed to smooth and harmonious co-operation, and its agents have been established in every center of distribution. The problem thus is merely that of getting the food, instead of getting it and then getting it to the people of Belgium.

The diplomatic obstacles which made the early work particularly arduous also do not now exist. All of the belligerent nations have recognized the Commission as the medium to supply food to non-combatant, and have agreed not to molest its shipments. As Mr. Bates put it, the Commission has become established as an "imperium imperio."

But there have been many births in Belgium, and although many adults doubtless have died, a baby is somewhat more difficult to feed than his father.

The people of Belgium who are able to pay for food, of course, have not been receiving gratis their supplies from the Commission. There are about 5,500,000 of these. As there is little other food for sale in Belgium, they have to buy their supplies from the Commission. They each have had to procure a ticket, entitling them to buy only a certain amount—precisely the same as that given to those who have no money.

The amount is about ten ounces of bread and dried beans and rice and prunes and other basic foods a day. It is about one-third of a soldier's, or about one-fourth of what the average American eats. It costs, for each member of the "bread line," about $2 a month.

In spite of the small amount and the even smaller cost, however, it has sufficed not only to keep alive the people of Belgium, but to keep them well and, physically, fairly contented.

"The permanent effect this will have on the nations is an interesting speculation," commented Mr. Bates. "It seems likely that the habits of thrift and utmost economy which for the past year have been necessary may leave a lasting impression and go far to establish new standards of value.

"In Western Australia there once was a mining district in which there was very little water. The people got accustomed to bathing in a teacup. They learned to use the least possible amount of water.

"A sixteen-inch pipe line was built to the district, at a cost of $20,000,000. It supplied as much water as the people possibly could have used. But they didn't use any more than they had been accustomed to. The force of habit was too strong.

"Finally, the government had to adopt measures to force them to use more water so that enough would be consumed to make possible payment of the interest on the money invested in the pipe line. After the war is over it is possible that the people in the occupied zone will have become so accustomed to great economy that they won't need as much food as they did before."

WILL ENTERTAIN STATE EDUCATORS

J. S. Frelinghuysen to Give Informal Reception on October 6.

Members of the State Board of Education, county and city superintendents of schools, and a number of other distinguished guests have been invited by Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, president of the State Board of Education, to an informal reception and luncheon in honor of William G. Schauffler, the retiring president of the Board.

It will be held at the home of Mr. Frelinghuysen at Raritan on Wednesday, October 6, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

President Woodrow Wilson, Governor James F. Fielder, Dr. John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton University; Dr. W. H. S. Demarest, president of Rutgers College, New Brunswick; Dr. J. G. Lipman, director of the New Jersey Experimental Station at New Brunswick; Calvin N. Kendall, Commissioner of Education, and the members of the Senate and Assembly committees on education are among the invited guests.

It is expected there will be an attendance of about one hundred prominent men and educators of the State, and the day will be given over to informal discussions of the work of the schools and what is being accomplished by the various Boards of Education. It is also understood that those who are so inclined will play golf or tennis after the luncheon.

SERIES OF TALKS ON "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Allen E. Beals, teacher of Class 22, of First Presbyterian Sunday-school, announced this morning that, beginning next Sunday, there will be started a new series of talks for young men between the ages of 15 and 19 years on "The Birth of a Nation." This theme will be continued each Sunday morning at 10 o'clock until the entire story has been enacted.

At the same time Class 22 will be formally organized and provision will be made for extending the annual reunion of the class on rally day to an annual trip or dinner. Every young man not now identified with any Sunday-school is invited to join. An entirely new idea in class organization has been worked out, and the plan will be presented to the members at next Sunday morning's session.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

At a meeting of the junior class held in the old "gym" yesterday afternoon, the following officers were elected: President, Everett Case; vice president, Miss Mildred Clark, and secretary-treasurer, Miss Elizabeth Mumford.

The senior class pin committee has been busy for the past few days looking over the goods displayed by several salesmen and have, now, all but placed the order.

All Oracle subscriptions must be paid for, at least in part, by tomorrow morning. Also the contest inaugurated Monday will end with the close of school tomorrow.

Raymond Samlock has been mentioned as the likely successor to Warren Mumford, who dislocated his collarbone in scrimmage, Tuesday. Mumford is about as usual but will have to keep away from the gridiron.

Spelling tests were given yesterday and those who fall below a set average will have to enter special spelling classes.

FIFTH-BIRTHDAY SALES

Important occasions demand important recognition. This store has completed its first half-decade in serving New York. Its gratification at having won its place in the arduous field of New York retailing, by something more than the mere buying and selling of goods, impels it to celebrate the reaching of its Fifth Milestone by offerings of unusual public benefit.

She Lifted the Lid Just the Slightest Little Bit.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How Pandora Opened the Box of Blessings.

"ONCE upon a time thousands of years ago, when the world was young and there were not so many good things about as now, there was a beautiful Greek girl by the name of Pandora," daddy started.

"Didn't she have any brothers or sisters?" asked the kiddies.

"She had a brother. She herself was very gifted and bright, for the Greek gods had favored her when she was born with other gifts besides beauty. Among other things they gave her was a charming jeweled box full of blessings. But the gods warned her to be very careful about opening it, because if all the blessings of life hopped out at once they would be almost as much nuisance as any trouble."

"What were some of the things in her box, daddy?" asked Evelyn.

"Oh, good health and love and justice and hope and faith and truth! Now, Pandora was just like all other little girls," daddy went on; "she was very curious. She would sit for hours with the beautiful box of blessings on her lap and wonder and wonder what would happen if she opened the tight jeweled lid. Her brother was not nearly as curious as she was, and, being a more obedient child, he used to beg her to be careful and not make unnecessary trouble. Sometimes in his fear he would take the box away from her."

"But it was her box! The gods gave it to her!" cried Evelyn.

"Yes, but very few of us can do exactly what we like even with our gifts, and instead of taking pleasure with the box Pandora used often to quarrel.

"One day she could endure her curiosity no longer. She took the box on her lap, untied the string and ever so carefully at first lifted the lid just the slightest little bit. She had hoped just to see what was inside, but out popped blessing after blessing before she could snap the lid down. The room just swarmed with things that began to quarrel and clash. By the time she had the lid locked again every blessing but one had escaped."

"Which one, daddy?" asked the kiddies.

"The beautiful blessing of hope. All the rest escaped before their time, causing trouble instead of good, and of all the blessings human beings enjoy today the brightest and best is hope."

"Was Pandora sorry she didn't obey the gods?" asked Jack.

"Not very. She liked to have her own way, this Greek girl did. But her brother was sorry and ran about the room trying to catch the blessings."

As the kiddies skipped off to bed daddy heard Evelyn tell Jack, "It's very wrong not to obey, isn't it, brother?"

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Novelized by Samuel Field From the Successful Play by ROI COOPER MEGRUE and WALTER HACKETT

Copyright, 1914-1915, by Roi Cooper Megrue and Walter Hackett.

CHAPTER XVI.

Ambrose Peale.

PEALE took up the refrain next and talked to Mr. Martin about advertising.

"But nowadays it isn't only people who have stoves to sell or toothbrushes that are spending money on publicity," he began. "Banks are advertising for money, nations for immigrants, colleges for students, cities for citizens and churches for congregations, and you sit there thinking it doesn't pay to advertise."

"Six hundred and sixteen million dollars were spent last year in magazines and newspapers, billboards and electric signs," recited Mary.

"Bringing education and comfort and fun and luxury to the people of the United States," said Rodney. "It's romance, father, the romance of printing presses, of steel rails, of the wireless, of trains and competition, the romance of modern business, and it's all built on advertising. Why, advertising is the biggest thing in this country, and it's only just begun."

"Well," said Mr. Martin, "when you boys get through talking and you're flat broke and down and out come around and see me. I'll show you an old business that has a lot of money, that isn't radical and that manages to keep going without wasting a fortune in fool advertising."

"Then you won't let us get any soap?" asked Rodney.

"Risk my business reputation on a silly scheme like dollar soap? I should say not. You may be crazy, but I'm not."

"Yes, you are," said Mary, beginning to lose her temper.

"Oh, come on," said Peale impatiently. "What's the use of talking to a man whose brain is deaf?"

The old soap king only laughed.

And so to the accompaniment of his scornful chuckles the three dejectedly walked out. Poor Mary's mission had failed. In the street outside she could not help pouting a little, especially for Rodney's benefit, and she scolded Peale outright. She was sure she could have managed the old gentleman if she had been allowed to do it in her own intuitive woman's way, and she told both the boys so flatly. What was the use of spouting all those statistics? What they wanted was 45,000 cakes of soap, not 5,000 words of advertising talk. What impression had they made on the soap king? Not the slightest.

"Now, don't you be too sure," interrupted Ambrose. "Just let it sink in and rankle a bit and we'll see."

"Nonsense!" said Mary crossly.

Poor Ambrose! He wouldn't have admitted it to anybody in the world, but for once in his life he was downcast and discouraged. His unfailing good nature was cloaked and veiled a little and no mistake. He was blue.

What was worse his blues lasted, off and on, this time for almost two weeks.

As the criminal returns to the scene of his crime so Ambrose's spirit was drawn back to his old haunts of the show world again.

"Hello, Mr. Pe-e-ele!"

He turned to see the "countess." They were in front of the City Square hotel, and she was headed for the revolving doors on Forty-second street. Peale gravitated at once to her side and jumped into the whirling compartment behind her.

"Well, cutie," he said as they dropped down together on a lounge in the crowded corridor, "what are you up to?"

"You're a grand little guy," said the countess agreeably; "I like you."

But all the time her eyes roved about the place as if she were looking for another man.

"How are you getting along now?" she went on. "As far as I'm concerned, trim everybody you can. You're there, Ambrose, you're there."

"But we're on the level," Peale assured her.

"So am I," said the countess.

"If you were I'd give you a job," laughed Peale.

"Me work on a job!" cried the countess. "There's no excitement in that. Why, now every time I meet a cop I get a thrill."

"I know—I know; the dull life is dull," Peale agreed. "I wonder if I ought to marry you and reform you?"

"No, Ambrose," said the countess quite sincerely; "I wouldn't do such a thing to you as marry you. I could talk to you about your needing a loving, faithful wife, and maybe you do at that. But the trouble with me is I'd rather trim a guy out of a hundred than earn a thousand. So leave me lay, kid, leave me lay"—

At this moment Peale, following her gaze, saw what she was looking for, and apparently "it" was Ellery Clark. Ellery, in full evening war paint, was wandering up and down evidently looking for her.

"Shall I bring him over?" asked Peale.

"No," said the countess; "wait a moment. I want to talk to you a second about Ellery. He's kind of stuck on me," she added shyly.

"Say, I'm for you," broke in Peale, "but if you're aiming to trim Ellery I can't help you there; it'd be too easy."

"Easy! You don't know Ellery! He's wise all right," she protested.

"Say, I don't like Ellery," said Peale quickly, "but if you're planning to

"Do tell him I'm a real French dame."

maxixe down the bridal path with him I won't stand for it."

"Oh, I wouldn't hitch up. No, Ambrose, you got me wrong," said the countess plaintively.

"What is the graft, then?"

The countess looked at him with a great show of diginity.

"Say, Mr. Peale," she said, "don't you think I got some sense of decency? And, anyhow, I wouldn't go after Ellery. He'd be wise in a minute. No, sir. I stack up against men of my own size—ducks who think they're wise guys, like you and your young partner."

"Well, what is the idea with Ellery, then?" Peale asked uncomfortably.

"You may not like him," the countess began. "He does seem kind of a stuck up chap, but when you get to know him he's a nice kid. He's got a car, he loves to go to shows, he slips the head waiter $5, says, 'Bring us a good dinner and two bottles of 149;' he can sign checks anywhere and he's a grand little companion for a lonely dame like me. He looks forward to seeing me. He phones me every morning and just sticks around. He don't even try to hold my hand."

"Well, where do I come in?" Peale insisted.

"You're going to see him now," the countess said. "Just don't slip it to him I'm a grafter, will you? It'd bust up the whole thing. I'll play straight with him—just pals. You don't know how hard it is for girls like me. I never had a show. I ran away from home when I was a kid. I've been pretty up against it sometimes, and now this boy comes along and treats me fine. Is what I've done to other guys to butt in and queer me? Oh, Ambrose, don't bowl me out with Ellery!"

"Nix, nix!" said Peale, pulling out his handkerchief.

"Give me a chance to be on the square," went on the countess. "It ain't easy for a girl to fight it out just by herself, when she's all alone, no money, no friends and she's got to live—live on $5 a week in a back room lookin' out on a brick wall and cook over the gas. Food and clothes and live on $5 per! You got a lot for a good time haven't you? That's what I had to do. Say, I was lonely sometimes. You've got to be pretty smart to steer straight. But I've done it—I've done it!"

With that she broke down and began to snivel.

"Now, see here, countess," said Peale kindly, patting her on the back. "Don't do that—don't, don't"— Then after a pause he added:

"Oh, quit it. Keep it for some poor boob who'll fall for it."

"Oh, Ambrose, don't talk like that," said the countess tearfully.

"Say, honest, it's foolish wasting it on me, kid," said Peale.

"Well, it's always worth trying once," said the girl, completely changing to a radiant smile.

"Sure it is" said Peale genially. "Why, you had me winging for a minute. But when you pulled that five a week gag I knew it was the antique phoney stuff."

"I learned it from a play. Great, isn't it? It always goes. But at that I'm on the level about Ellery. I just couldn't keep from drifting into dramatics. Do tell him I'm a real French dame."

"Absolutely," said Peale. "Hello, Peter Piccadilly," he added, as Ellery at last discovered them; "what brings you to the haunts of pleasure?"

He didn't wait for Ellery's answer, but promptly vacated the place at the girl's side and left them to each other and their fates.

In his present mood the meeting and the talk for all his chaff only strengthened the wings of his black butterflies. The sight of Ellery Clark completed his distaste with the whole sorry scheme of things, making him itch to remold it nearer to his heart's desire. Ellery Clark, that pinhead, went round with girls who trimmed him like the "countess," supplied with plenty of money by his doting father, while Rodney and Mary had to slave and worry.

BIG TEXAS SHIPMENTS.

Galveston, Tex., Sept. 30.—Huge shipments to Europe are testing the capacity of this port. A thousand horses, 20,000 cattle, 50,000 tons of hay are a few of the items that are going to France. It will require thirty vessels to carry the four millions of bushels of wheat ready for the Mediterranean ports.

MOTHERS' WORK

Conducted by the Plainfield Mothers' Association. Every Thursday

Contributing Staff.
Mrs. Joseph Smith and Mrs. J. L. Evans.

The Daily Press for Thursdays containing the column on Mother's Work will be sent by mail for one dollar a year, in advance.

We take our share of fretting,
Of grieving and forgetting;
The paths are often rough and
Steep, and heedless feet may fall;
But yet the days are cheery,
And night brings rest when weary,
And somehow this old planet is a
God world after all.

The following are some of the aims and purposes of the Congress of Mothers:

To raise the standards of home life.

To develop wiser, better-trained parenthood.

To give young people, ignorant of the proper care and training of children, opportunities to learn this, that they may better perform the duties of parenthood.

To bring into closer relations the home and the school, that parent and teacher may co-operate intelligently in the education of the child.

To surround the childhood of the whole world with that living, wise care, in the impressionable years of life, that will develop good citizens, instead of law-breakers and criminals.

To carry the mother-love and mother-thought into all that concerns or touches childhood in home, school, State and legislation.

To interest men and women to co-operate in the work for purer, truer homes in the belief that to accomplish the best results men, women and children must work together.

To secure such legislation as will ensure that children of tender years may not be tried in ordinary courts, but that each town shall establish juvenile courts and special officers, whose business it shall be to look out for that care which will rescue, instead of confirm, the child in evil ways.

To work for such probationary care in individual homes rather than institutions.

To rouse the whole community to a sense of its duty and responsibility to the blameless dependent and neglected children because there is no philanthropy which will so speedily reduce our taxes, reduce our prison expenses, reduce the expense of institutions for correction and reform.

The work of this nation-wide congress is civic work in its broadest and highest sense, and every man or woman who is interested in the aims of the congress is cordially invited to become a member and aid in the organized effort for a higher, nobler national life, which can only be attained through the individual homes.

Play Together.

Good Citizenship is promoted by forming habits of co-operation in play. People who play together find it easier to live together. Individuals enjoying a wholesome happy play life are more loyal as well as more efficient citizens. Family Unity is most easily secured when the members of the family have formed the habit of playing together in their leisure hours. Community Spirit is most easily developed through play in which all members of the community may share. Democracy rests on the most firm basis when a community has formed the habit of playing together. Social Progress depends upon the extent to which a people possess a play spirit.

A Teacher's Meditation.

"It is my belief that both teacher and children should be happy in their school life. I am convinced that a teacher, being associated with children who themselves are naturally happy and optimistic, should look on the bright side of life. To have a good school both my pupils and I must be interested. I have heard that the most efficient men in business are the ones who have a well-tempered enthusiasm for their work. This, too, I will try to have. I will endeavor not to complain or to be discouraged. I believe it is beneath the dignity of a teacher to be ill-tempered, and that one way of keeping young is to be sweet-tempered. I will not, without protest, allow any one to pity me because I am a teacher."

Vaccination.

The Commissioner of Education has decided that the statute relating to vaccination is mandatory and that therefore a Board of Education may exclude from the schools a pupil or teacher not vaccinated "unless unfitness for vaccination be claimed and demonstrated by a certificate of a physician."

"To cure was the voice of the past; to prevent is the divine whisper of today."

—Those accustomed to getting SERVICE from the classified columns would consider it a very foolish thing to do to pay too much rent, either for a store, a house, an apartment or a furnished room.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. P. A. RICHARD.

"Hello, mother! Where did you drop from? Come in!" Dick stood waiting to take her bonnet and coat.

"Where are Nell and the baby?" she asked, looking around the familiar room.

"They will be in in a minute; I think they are over at Olive's. I'll call up and see."

"No, don't bother," interrupted the old lady. "Sit down; I want to talk to you."

"Anything wrong," asked Dick anxiously.

"Am I such a bird of evil omen that every time I come you think there's trouble afoot?" she snapped.

"Why no, but you seemed so serious," began Dick.

"Serious, humph! I'm not much given to acting the clown. Well, the long and the short of it is that when your father got a draft for two hundred dollars as dividend on his oil stock, I said, 'Pa, now is your time to unload; you and Dick can sell now and make something. The whole population of Kansas is oil mad, and before the well peters out or the people come to their senses is the time to unload.'"

"Do you think so? Wouldn't it be like killing the goose that laid the golden egg?" demurred her son. "Why, think of the rate of interest I'm getting. I only have four shares and they are not all paid for, and they've brought in $80 clear. I had to borrow the money to do all I did, but it paid."

"To think that a son of mine should be such a noodle," exploded the old lady. "I never knew you borrowed the money. It was bad enough to use up savings in such a wildcat venture, but to borrow!" She tapped her foot angrily on the floor.

"I made the payments from my personal savings; then I had to borrow from the bank account to meet the assessments."

"Bah! I've no patience with your fine distinctions; if your left hand borrowed from your right I can stand that. Now this is my plan. I am sure that the fourteen shares can be sold for upwards of five thousand dollars and with the money—"

"I could buy a block of stock in the Scott-Frazee Co. Mr. Scott told me while he was here that there were two five thousand dollar blocks that would be for sale soon and asked if I could not arrange to buy them," interupted Dick in great excitement.

"Perhaps they would set aside both of them for you and let the dividends on the first five thousand go toward paying for the second block; the dividends and your savings would cut quite a hole in it, and if I saw you were making a systematic effort to save I would favor your father's plan of helping you get a good start in the firm."

"It certainly is very kind of both of you, but father took out that stock for his namesake," demurred Dick.

"It can still be in the baby's name; the first block of stock and the dividends on that when both are paid for will clothe and educate him. You don't deserve to get out with a whole skin," she continued, "and I hope if you're ever such a fool as to go into any more speculations, you won't get out without paying the penalty of gamblers."

"Now mother, why wish such a misfortune on Nell and the innocent baby?" laughed Dick.

"I don't; I'd like to have you suffer alone, but," she added in a low voice, 'No man liveth to himself and no man dieth to himself.'"

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

Francis X. Bushman, who was crowned king of the movie realm at the San Francisco Exposition recently, will appear at the U. S. Astor Theatre this afternoon and tonight, in a gripping photo-dramatization of the play, "The Silent Voice," which was adapted by Jules Eckert Goodman from the story by Gouevernour Morris. "The Silent Voice" presents Mr. Bushman at the pinnacle of his dramatic form. He will be ably supported by Miss Marguerite Snow, who now is appearing with him in all the big Metro productions.

In addition this afternoon and tonight, other dramas and comedies supplied by the foremost studios of the world will be shown. The twenty-first episode of "The Diamond From the Sky" will be screened today.

Tomorrow charming Marguerite Clark will be the featured attraction at the Astor in "The Pretty Sister of Jose," in which she is seen as a little Spanish girl. The big scene of this picture is a bull fight in which the hero is injured. Miss Clark is supported in this subject by Jack Pickford, brother of "Little Mary."

The Kinkaid Kilties, twelve number, all lads and lassies from Scottish Highlands, are making th first Plainfield appearance at Pr tor's Theatre this afternoon and ev ing, and are to continue for th days. In this production, folklo songs and dances predominate, mak ing an altogether unique presentatio of the costumes of the old world. Melody that hath charms to soothe the restless spirit of mankind, steps and dances that relieve the fatigue of the mind, are here combined with pleasing effect, and an afternoon's or evening's enjoyment is the result—to those who visit the Proctor house. Miss Rose Mauser, with her six feet of personality, is included in the cast of twelve, and good, refined, rich humor is made possible by her presence.

Madie DeLong, "the baseball bug," as she is billed, also makes her debute to the Plainfield public at this time, as do Rooney and Bowman, in a clever sister feature act.
